Arkansas Senator Says This Sum Was Donated To Aid Frank L. Smith in Senatorial Campaign.

UTILITY CONCERNS HELP FILL CHEST

Senate Committee Plans Thorough Investigation of Funds and Activities of Anti-Saloon League.

WHEELER PROMISES "BARREL" OF DATA.

Washington, June 26.—(AP)—Wayne B. Wheeler promised tonight to submit next week to the senate investigating committee "a barrel of information about the wet organizations that are fighting the eighteenth amendment."

Much of it will be documentary, the Anti-Saloon League counsel said in a statement, adding that his information showed that "the wets are raising more money than the drys in this fight."

"The hopeful feature about it from our viewpoint," said Mr. Wheeler, "is that the wets are getting licked just the same as in former years."

Washington, June 26.—(AP)—Another vista of the campaign investigation, outrivaling even that into the Pennsylvania primary, was opened up today with the presentation to the senate of charges that $3,000,000 was spent in the Illinois republican senatorial primary in which Frank L. Smith, chairman of the state utilities commission, defeated Senator William B. McKinley.

The charges were recounted by Senator Caraway, democrat, Arkansas, who read from a prepared manuscript. They included allegations that Smith received enormous contributions from the heads of public utilities; that Samuel Insull either individually or through his utility organization, alone contributed more than $500,000, and that a utility deal involving about $20,000,000 in property "drew from the interested bankers, E. H. Rollins & Sons, more than $100,000 into the hands of Allen Moore, Smith's campaign manager."

Investigation Demanded.

Demand also was made that there be an investigation of how much money was given to John Walker and Frank Farrington, said "to have handled the labor vote in Illinois," of the cost of "the palatial headquarters" of the Smith forces in the Congress hotel in Chicago, and of the sending out of traveling representatives from those headquarters with "great quantities of currency freely used to get votes."

According to the charges, Senator McKinley spent $1,000,000 in his efforts to be renominated, while the claim was that Smith had distributed twice that sum, or as much in the aggregate as has been uncovered in Pennsylvania on behalf of the three state tickets.

Investigation of the Illinois situation has been planned by the senate campaign funds committee as soon as the inquiry into the Pennsylvania primary and the activities of the Anti-Saloon league is completed and congress has adjourned.

Will Broaden Inquiry.

The committee held only a brief session today, but in its course Senator Reed, democrat, Missouri, announced that if information could be obtained warranting it the investigators would inquire into the political activities of any and all organizations, "whether it is church, or Ku Klux Klan, or Anti-Saloon league, or anti-Volstead, or anti-eighteenth amendment, or anything else." Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon league, whom Senator Reed was addressing, said his organization had "plenty" of information along that line and would furnish it.

Previously Reed had announced that William H. Stayton, head of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, would be summoned for questioning about the expenditures of that organization for political purposes.

Before Wayne B. Wheeler was ex-

Fair and Warmer Is New Forecast In State Politics

VALDOSTA BANKER FREED AT TULSA

A. C. Mizell, Whose Love of Pipe Was Clue To Identity That Led to Arrest Is Freed by Judge.

Tulsa, Okla., June 26.—(AP)—After two years of wandering over southern United States as a fugitive from justice, A. C. Mizell, former Valdosta, Ga., bank president, today was a free man, District Judge Charles Walker held that Georgia indictments charging him with false publication of his bank's condition were insufficient to warrant his return to Georgia for prosecution there.

The former banker, arrested here while selling milk, smiled, and his wife and three children rushed up to embrace him. Three Valdosta deputy sheriffs who were here to return him on a writ of extradition granted by Governor Trapp, shook hands with him and congratulated him.

The hearing before Judge Walker was on Mizell's application for a writ of habeas corpus which was granted.

Judge Walker held that under the Georgia law bank statements which must be made quarterly must be signed by both the bank president or cashier and by two of the directors before they are legal. Mizell was charged with issuing a statement which he was not obligated by law to make and on which the name of two of the bank's directors did not appear.

Mizell was recently apprehended here while delivering milk, suspicion of the arresting officer being aroused by the fact that Mizell was an inveterate pipe smoker, this fact having been given to the officer.

When apprised of the clue that led to his arrest Mizell said he had thought of that, but loved his pipe so well he "took a chance."

Fourth of July Barbecues Expected To Bring All Campaigns Into Full Activity.

BY PAUL STEVENSON.

After lapsing into a state of stagnation for four years or more, the Georgia political situation was diagnosed Saturday as showing unmistakable signs of coming into a lively and kicking existence. Politics in the state began entering a period of real activity which will rival some of the historic campaigns that won national attention by the sensational bitterness with which they were waged up and down the counties of Georgia.

Two bombs exploded during the week and shook the old political situation to its very core. One was the rupture in the agricultural department between Chief J. J. Brown and two of his leading lieutenants, Lem B. Jackson and Fred T. Bridges. The other was the announcement for the senate by Judge Richard B. Russell, of the supreme court, who will make the race against Senator Walter F. George.

For the time being these developments have overshadowed interest in the four-handed race for governor. The politicians flocked to the capitol Thursday, Friday and Saturday to get first-hand information about the "break" in the so-called "Brown machine" and while here devoted considerable time in putting the ear to the ground in an effort to catch the state's reaction to Judge Russell's entrance into the race for the senate.

Rumors and counter-rumors were rife at the capitol following the open rupture Wednesday between Brown on one side and Jackson and Bridges on the other. Brown qualified as a candidate to succeed himself Wednesday morning and in a few minutes James H. Mills, an employee of the Brown department, qualified as a candidate against his chief. This was the beginning of the "break."

Principals Give Views.

SCOTT FOUND SANE BY CHICAGO JURY

Convicted Slayer of Joseph Maurer Will Be Resentenced To Hang by Judge Kavanaugh.

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Chicago, Ill., June 26.—Russell T. Scott was adjudged sane by a jury late tonight and Judge Marcus Kavanaugh probably will resentence him to hang without any further delay.

Scott was convicted of the murder of Joseph Maurer, a drug clerk, who got in his way during a robbery. For nearly two years he has dodged the gallows by various devices, assisted by wily criminal lawyers and a group of clubwomen in Detroit.

Under the original death sentence, Scott could be brought back, in case he regained his "sanity" and be resentenced to the gallows. Today's trial makes this course mandatory.

In closing for the state today, the prosecutor referred in withering terms to two alienists as mountebanks, fakers and obstructors of justice. One in particular, whose testimony helped Leopold and Loeb escape death at the end of a rope, came in for bitter denunciation.

During the closing argument, Scott, who has been sprawling over a desk in court, giving an imitation of an insane man, suddenly straightened up, stung to fury by a statement.

"You are a ——— ———," he shouted as he tried to force his way through the room to attack the speaker. Scott's attorney clapped his hand over his client's mouth in an effort to stem the tide of profanity and obscenity. Scott was finally subdued and was placed in the "bull pen" during the rest of the court session.

THREE IN RACE TO SUCCEED LEE

Retirement of Gordon Lee Precipitates Free-for-All Race in Seventh Congressional District.

Rome, Ga., June 26.—(AP)—Withdrawal of Representative Gordon Lee from the race for congress from the seventh Georgia district, which he has served for 22 years, has precipitated a free-for-all race in which at least three candidates and possibly a half dozen or more will be entered before August 7, the closing date for entries in the September primaries.

Judge Malcolm C. Tarrer, of Dalton, had announced prior to Mr. Lee's withdrawal and Claude H. Porter, of this city, former solicitor of the Rome superior court circuit and opponent of Lee in the congressional race six years ago, announced his candidacy today.

CONGRESS CLOSING SEEN THIS WEEK

Resolution Is Expected To Be Offered in House Tuesday for Adjournment Next Saturday.

Washington, June 26.—(AP)—Another move was started today to adjourn congress.

This time the end of next week is the goal set and a resolution is expected to be offered in the house Tuesday for adjournment next Saturday.

The program was agreed upon after conferences between senate and house leaders, but they admitted that before it can be accepted arrangements must be made to dispose of several measures whose sponsors threaten to block adjournment unless they are called up for a vote.

These include the rivers and harbors bill, but an effort will be made to get around that disputed measure by getting consent to give it a preferred status at the next session. Others include farm legislation, radio, veterans and numerous lesser important bills.

HOLDER SHOULD QUIT ROAD POST, STATES CARSWELL

Irwinton Candidate Says Holder Holds 'Whip Hand' Over Sections With Road Promises.

OPENS CAMPAIGN FOR GOVERNORSHIP

Holder in Reply Says He Will Ignore Carswell's Request That He Resign Highway Post.

HOLDER TO IGNORE CARSWELL REQUEST.

John N. Holder stated Saturday night that he would ignore the Carswell request that he resign from the state highway board, stating that he was not neglecting the duties of his office as highway chairman.

James, Ga., June 26.—(AP)—George Carswell, of Irwinton, Ga., informally opening his campaign for the governorship here this afternoon, called upon John N. Holder to resign as chairman of the state highway commission if he is to continue in the race for governor.

Mr. Carswell's speech was made in the open air at a barbecue given to people of Jones, Bibb, Wilkinson and Baldwin counties by Lemuel P. James, Jones county representative in the state legislature.

"Mr. Holder should resign as chairman of the highway commission if he continues in the race for governor," Mr. Carswell said. "As it now stands he holds the whip hand over many sections, having promised them good roads by state aid if they support him. If he is not elected he will still hold the job until his commission expires.

Pardon Sought To Try Convict As Murderer

Inmate of Federal Prison Here Is Wanted for Killing in Indiana.

Another Gerald Chapman case is promised at the federal prison here as the result of efforts just launched by Indiana authorities to obtain custody of Earl A. Kerring, committed here on a theft charge from Cleveland, for trial in Floyd county, Indiana, for murder.

Kerring, according to Indiana officers, is Emmett Snyder, who is wanted there on the charge of killing Deputy Sheriff Daniel Mayfield. The prisoner is said to have been identified by a guard who knew Snyder when he was at the Frankfort, Ky., reformatory.

New Albany, Ind., officials also are anxious to locate Bernard Finnegan, his alleged accomplice in the crime. They believe Finnegan is in the federal prison here, but, according to Warden Snook, no man of that name or of the description furnished is a prisoner at the pen.

Indiana officials state that they are confident of the identification of Kerring or Snyder, and that they will ask President Coolidge to pardon him as he did Gerald Chapman, so that he may be taken back at once to Indiana for trial on the murder charge.

Chapman, it will be remembered, was pardoned by the president, despite his efforts to block such action, was taken to Connecticut and after a sensational trial hanged for the murder of a policeman.

Warden John Snook stated that he had received information from Louisville that Kerring was wanted for the murder, and that officers were on their way to Atlanta to complete identification of the prisoner. He said that he had no other information on the case.

According to Louisville advices, C. B. Loron, New Albany prosecuting attorney, will be one of those who will come to Atlanta to identify Snyder. It is understood that the prisoner will make a desperate fight to prevent his extradition form this state.

Mayfield was slain in a running fight between Floyd county officers and a gang which had tried to loot the Farmers' State bank at Laneville, Ind., on January 24, this year.

Kerring or Snyder was sent to the federal prison here on the charge of theft of government property.

SPEAKERS PRAISE AMERICAN HEROISM

Leaders of North and South Mingle in Good-Fellowship in Trenches of Sixties.

BY RALPH T. JONES,
Staff Correspondent.

Marietta, Ga., June 26.—With an immense throng of sons and daughters of America in the audience, veterans of the gray clad in the uniform made immortal by Lee and his southern heroes mingled Saturday with veterans of the blue, unflinching warriors who followed Sherman through Georgia, and united in celebration of the 62d anniversary of the battle of Kennesaw mountain.

On the scarp of the great mountain which once was drenched with the mingled blood of north and south, in the trenches where southerners defended their homeland against the hordes of northern soldiery, leaders of both sides in the conflict pledged anew their united love of the common country, and with cheers of a new America ringing in their ears, called upon the government to which both now give allegiance to make of the scene where once they grappled in mortal combat a great memorial park. It will be a memorial of war unique in the history of mankind, in that it will be a memorial that commemorates alike the heroism of its defenders and the courage of the attackers; a memorial that makes no difference in honor rendered to those who lost or those who won; a memorial which honors equally courage and manhood and sacrifice for ideals on both sides.

As Judge Samuel H. Sibley, chairman for the occasion, said, it will be "a monument of fraternity, of friendship and of forgiveness; a monument to a north and a south forever united by a granite bond of mutual respect, admiration and love."

Living Monument.

Judge Sibley, after referring to the great Confederate memorial now being carved on Stone mountain, which, on clear days, is visible from Kennesaw, declared that though the trees and all living nature on Kennesaw was in 1864 blasted to death by the federal guns, Kennesaw today is a living, growing monument.

"It is right," he added, "that it should be so, a living monument to a living brotherhood that wipes out all memory of the conflict of 60 years ago."

The spirit of the soldiers of the north, many of whom had come despite age and afflictions of advancing years to visit again the scenes they had known while wearing the blue of the federalists in 1864, was exempli-

MUSSOLINI SEEN AS ITALY'S SAVIOR

BY JOHN CLAYTON.

Chicago, June 26.—(Special.)—Since my return from Rome for a brief visit in Chicago I have been deluged with questions regarding Premier Mussolini and fascism in Italy.

Is Mussolini popular? Is he in good health? How long will he last? Who will succeed him? Is he a great statesman or a faker and a clever politician? Why did he return to syndicalism? What does duce mean? Is it "duke," and if so, why? Is there an opposition? If not, why not?

These are only a few of the queries which have been fired at me since my arrival here.

I first met Benito Mussolini in the fall of 1920 in the little opera house at Milan. (The Scala was still closed following the war). He was introduced by Giulio Barella, Milan correspondent of The Tribune, as "the man who will save Italy." I took the introduction with a great deal of reserve, for Italy at that day seemed beyond salvation. Or, if its salvation were possible, I could not see in this man of intense, inward nature and flashing eyes the man who would draw it out of the red slough of despond into which it had stumbled following the war. He was more like the dreamers and theorists who had brought it where it was. Probably I should have seen in Mussolini a dreamer who made his dreams come true.

Fought for Life.

I did not see the duce—the word is pronounced with a soft "c" and means "leader," not duke, which is duca with a hard "c"—again until the winter of 1924-25, when he was fighting for his life, politically and actually. Politically, he was ill with a bad case of over-enthusiasm on the part of his followers, which had brought about the murder of the big socialist leader, Deputy Matteotti. Physically, he was suffering from an ulcer of the duodenum in a position which could hardly be operated, and he refused to take the necessary time from his work to effect a cure at such a time of crisis.

Followed another interval, and on the first of January I again came in contact with the Italian premier. He was a man completely recovered from both illnesses—perhaps a little chastened by the former and somewhat weakened generally by the latter. The robust strength of Corporal Mussolini which enabled him to survive seven serious wounds during the world war and the privations of the first months following the armistice was somewhat impaired, but he was perfectly healthy. At a recent banquet in his honor aboard the liner Esperia, I sat quite close to the premier and observed him as he ate. He consumed and enjoyed his food as only a healthy man could, and while he did not commit the sin of overeating, no special dishes were prepared for him. He avoided rich sauces, but ate heartily of what was placed before him, and drank a glass of white wine, a glass of red wine and two glasses of champagne.

Throughout his travels in Tripoli, on which I accompanied him, Premier Mussolini ate with appetite whatever was placed before him. The kitchen facilities in some of the out of the way desert towns were far from the best. Mussolini's enemies—and they are legion, especially outside of Italy—still whisper of his poor health and predict an early death, but I am convinced that the premier has completely recovered from the ulcer which threatened him a year and one-half ago, and if his luck in escaping assassination continues to hold, he should be good for another 20 years or more, despite his strenuous life.

Is Loved and Hated.

Benito Mussolini is the best loved and best hated man Italy has known in many generations. He is god and devil. He is Christ and Anti-Christ. Mothers name their babies for him and offer candles for his preservation. Other mothers curse him and pray for his destruction. But his friends outnumber his enemies, and most of his bitter opponents have been driven beyond the confines of Italy. The rest are silent.

Mussolini's political methods may be questioned, but the effectiveness of them, never. Perhaps it would have been wiser for him to nourish a formal opposition and give it voice. His power lacks any check, to give it added stability. But he has chosen the way of the absolute dictator and he will brook no opposition, even within the party. He is supreme. If a fascist doesn't approve of a measure of the leader, he may keep silent or look for work elsewhere.

Whether Mussolini is a great statesman or not, only the future can answer. But he certainly is more than a clever politician. He is a fanatical nationalist, a man who believes in his own destiny and that of his country. Even in private conversation "destiny" is always on his tongue. He realizes that Italy is a young nation, a nation without traditions. He has reached back into the dim past, into the dawn of the Roman empire, for traditions, and he is forcing them home on the Italian people. "The glory that was Rome" has become more potent with the people of this country than the achievements of Garibaldi.

Is Clever Showman.

Mussolini never forgets that his compatriots love the dramatic. He is a clever showman, perhaps the most clever of our time among public men. He knows how to reach his audience, and many of his expressions and gestures, which seem absurd to the Anglo-Saxon mind, are not spontaneous, but carefully calculated movements to whip his people into line. There is no lost motion with Mussolini, and his grandiloquent speeches are planned for their effect on the public of Italy.

Nor does he make himself cheap with them. Three times in a month I have seen great crowds of humanity packed beneath the balcony of his study in the Palazzo Chigi, crying for the duce. Filling the Piazza Colonna to overflowing, blocking traffic in the side streets and the Corso Umberto, they waited for hours, but he refused to appear.

There is no question of any fear of an assassin's bullet behind this. It is, in my opinion, part of his general plan to hold the affections of his crowd of followers. There is no doubt of Mussolini's personal bravery. His war record is written in imperishable letters of daring; his record since he became premier has added other chapters. After the most recent attempt on his life he was not at all shaken. When his colleagues were on the verge of collapse he was laughing and joking, and it was he who finally got the fascist mob under control.

Whatever may be said against Mussolini—and his opponents find volumes of charges—there never has been a whisper of any financial crookedness or graft. Mussolini lives on the scale of a man of moderate means. His salary does not exceed $10,000 a year. He probably will die a poor man, for despite the rapid strides made by his own newspaper, the Popolo d'Italia, he is benefiting little from it in a financial way. One of the first things he did was to cut short the bribery and corruption which had ruled Italian politics. There may be graft in some of the departments of his government, but it is not extensive. The premier cannot watch every minor detail of administration, and it is hard to stamp out a custom of centuries. But graft in Italian governmental circles has been reduced to a minimum.

Has Two Children.

The premier is married and has two children, a son of 12 and a daughter of 16. Both are in school. The daughter, Edde, recently was decorated for bravery when she saved a comrade from death by drowning. Mussolini naturally is very proud of her, but he is able to se her only occasionally, as she is subject to severe regulations of a fashionable religious school in Florence, and his duties permit few visits. His wife and son make their home in Milan.

Premier Mussolini has many points in common with our former president, Theodore Roosevelt. He has that same dynamic energy which drives him constantly during his waking hours. His day begins at 7 o'clock with a ride in the gardens of the Villa Borghesi, and often ends long after midnight. On occasions he has worked all night, taken a ride and cold shower at 7 o'clock, snatched an hour's sleep, and been at his desk as usual at 9 o'clock to work through another long day and evening.

When his ulcer endangered his life, Professor Bastianelli, who was caring for him, demanded that he take a six weeks' holiday to permit a cure, but he would not do so. He was treated for the ulcer while he worked., and kept on starvation diet. His appearance at that time, from loss of weight and overwork, was terrible and gave rise to stories that he could not live longer than a few months. But he pulled himself together and his first vacation consisted of his journey to Tripoli, where he was busy touring the country, reviewing troops, driving his own car, and making speeches for 15 hours a day. That was his idea of a rest.

Mussolini, like Roosevelt, has the capacity for making fast friends and bitter enemies. The reactions of those who come in contact with him are never negligible. They are always violently for or against him.

Like Roosevelt, he is an ardent advocate of large families and a bitter enemy of birth control.

"Italy," he once said, "is a prolific nation and she will remain prolific."

Seeks New Colonies.

To take care of this increase in population, Mussolini is determined to have new colonies, and if he can't get them peacefully he is ready to fight a war for them.

It was a great surprise to the casual observer when Mussolini announced the change from democratic government to the new fascist syndicalism. But no student of the man and his career was astounded.

"Mussolini is running true to form at last," was the comment of one observer here in Chicago, in discussing the new form of government with me.

Mussolini studied with and was a close disciple of Sorel, the great French syndicalist. When the world war broke out, he was a professed socialist and editor of the leading socialist newspaper of Italy. He saw how the socialists of France and Germany, after their years of propaganda for internationalism, broke faith with their followers and supported the war. He saw in their teachings only the power to weaken a nation when attacked and he bade farewell to internationalism forever. From the day when he was read out of the socialist party his mind was busy evolving a new form of government which would embody the principles of Sorel, while remaining strongly nationalistic. His letters, written from the trenches, show the development of his plans. Gradually he decided that the socialist idea of wiping out capital altogether was worthless, and with his ascent to power he began the evolution of his scheme to include a representation of capitalism. Fascist syndicalism as an integral part of the state was the result.

Under this new government the law-making body of Italy will represent the unions, syndicates or guilds of labor and capital. The unions are organized under the control of Mussolini as minister of the corporations, and every worker who is not in the employ of the government must be a member of his local syndicate. The local syndicates, which are unlimited, are directly responsible to the provincial federation of their particular craft, and the provincial federations are subject to the control of the national confederations, 15 in number. Of these six represent capital—industry, the banks, agriculture, commerce, sea transport and land transport. Six represent manual labor in the same divisions. The other three control intellectual labor—the free professions, artists and artisans. These in turn are controlled by the three confederations of the confederations in the groups—capital, manual labor and intellectual labor.

Senate Chosen by Board.

The senate, which will be the only law-making body, will be chosen by a board of 19 men, of which Mussolini, as minister of the corporations, is president. The other members are the three presidents of the confederations of confederations and the fifteen presidents of confederations. Nominally these nineteen men will draw up a list of candidates for the office of senator and the nominations will be made by the king from the lists presented. Actually the king will be nothing more than a rubber stamp to approve the choice of the committee of 19.

It is through the senate that the unions will make their voices heard. The nominations must be made in such a way that capital can never have more than 50 per cent of the total seats in the new legislature.

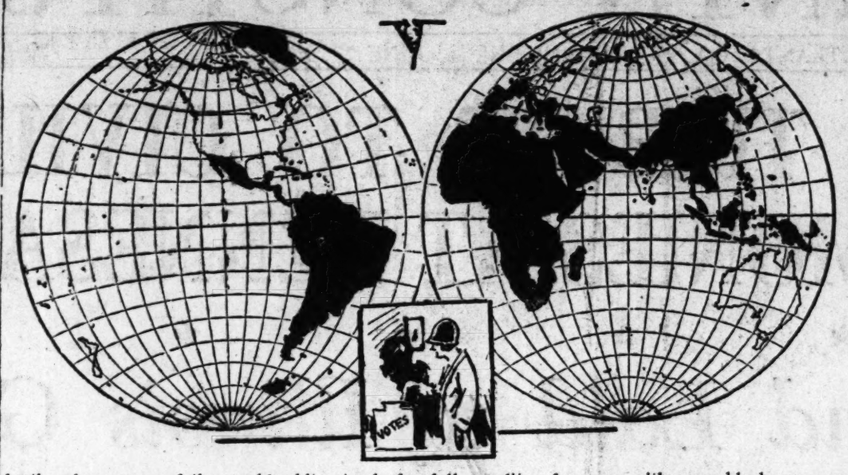

If there is any stone in Mussolini's path that can trip him up, it is this theoretical fascist state. The big industrialists of the nation, who have supported him since his advent to power, are beginning to fear him and his theories. They know that he will be able to control the situation as long as he lives, but they are afraid of what may happen when another man takes over the dictatorship after his death. They see in the ranks of his immediate followers men with dangerous ideas which border on anti-capitalism.

Death of Democracy.

Mussolini has proclaimed the death of democracy in Italy, the doing away of national elections and political parties; he has decreed the advent of the fascist syndicalist state. Students of political economy are looking on and wondering how long the new experiment will last. They know that Mussolini has not gathered all his eggs into one basket, and that he is capable of changing the whole structure, should its foundations prove to be weak; but they do not know whether his successors will have this ability to see defects and remedy them, once the leader has departed.

They can only wait and observe, for Mussolini has set his face in the direction of a new governmental form, and he will not turn back. He may cut and slash his own ideas to fit the needs of the nation, but as long as he lives there is no retreat. Syndicalism has come to stay in Italy during the life of fascism.

Survey Shows Women Gaining Suffrage Right

In the above map of the world white stands for full equality of women with men; black, no woman suffrage, and shaded, less than full enfranchisement.

Washington, D. C., June 26.—The recent congress of the International Suffrage Alliance in Paris makes a survey of the world situation on woman suffrage of special interest. Out of the 60 or so civilized nations of the world 36 have suffrage in some form. In at least 15 others women have organizations working for enfranchisement, while in countries where suffrage has been granted women are working for other forms of equality still denied them.

The above map shows the countries where women have the vote, those that have granted a partial suffrage to them and those in which nothing has been accomplished at present. Of the 36 countries allowing suffrage 14 are under the British flag, some of the British dominions having enfranchised their women earlier and more fully than the mother country.

Australia, for instance, granted suffrage to her women in 1902, and New Zealand still earlier—1893. In Canada women won the franchise in 1918. Women of the Irish Free State alone of the British Isles have the same right to vote at the same age of men—21. In the others women must be 30 and there are other restrictions. For instance, unless a woman qualifies through her husband she must be the owner or tenant of premises worth a certain sum or a lodger in rooms furnished by her.

Movement Started in U. S.

It was our own United States, you will remember, where women have the same voting privileges as men, that the suffrage movement started in 1848. At that time the women of no country had the vote.

In the Scandinavian countries Norway granted suffrage to her women in 1913, Sweden in 1918, Denmark and Iceland in 1906. Women of these countries have the most progressive marriage laws in the world, the object being, as Mrs. Anna Wicksell, Swedish feminist leader, says, "to place husband and wife on absolutely the same footing."

In Esthonia women won equality with men without a struggle and Lithuania also has granted unlimited suffrage. Women of Poland and Czechoslovakia also have complete equality, and women from these two countries are included in the Women's Little Entente with women from Roumania, Jugoslavia and Greece. The entente was formed during the Rome international suffrage congress to urge the feminist movement and help prevent war.

In Roumania women vote under limitations in municipal elections only, but have high place in all the professions. In Greece women of 30 will be granted the right to vote at municipal elections in 1927, but may not hold office. Austrian women have the complete franchise but in Hungary it is limited.

Startling Change in Turkey.

The change in the social status of women in Turkey has been most startling. While having at present no political rights, they have been liberated from the harem, are allowed a contract at marriage guaranteeing their individual rights after marriage, have been admitted to the universities and are permitted to enter the legal and medical professions.

In Germany and Russia women have absolutely the same political status as men, as is also the case in Holland. In little Belgium women so far have only succeeded in gaining the municipal vote and in otherwise progressive Switzerland they have no voice in governmental matters.

France, Spain and Italy have so far failed to grant suffrage to their women, although in Spain women who are heads of families were recently granted the right to vote in municipal elections. It is hoped that the meeting of the international congress in Paris may have the effect of helping to bring about the enfranchisement of French women. The suffrage bill of France was killed in 1924.

Little Suffrage in Orient.

India and Burma are the only Asiatic countries in which women have the vote. Politically the status of women in China and Japan is not encouraging at present, but Mme. Ochrini Kubushiro, president of the Women's Suffrage Association of Japan, believes that growing influence will eventually gain women the vote.

South of the northern boundary of Mexico there are no countries where women vote except in Tobasco, Yucatan, Guanajuato and Vera Cruz, four little Mexican states where women have a very limited suffrage.

SPAIN TO CUT WORKING HOURS OF HOUSE MAIDS

(Copyright, 1926, for The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Madrid, June 26.—The privilege of being genteel in Spain seriously is threatened by laws which are being drawn up by the government to regulate the employment of servants, with a horde of which no Spanish family is able to maintain any class whatsoever.

Ordinary maids, who could be had aplenty for $4.00 a month, while the best cooks and nursemaids pulled down the enormous wage of $7 to $9 a month, now are in for a statutory increase of 100 per cent in their wages.

The working hours, which heretofore were limited only by the whims of the masters and mistresses and usually ran around 18 hours a day, will be restricted to eight hours.

The Spanish household, which is accustomed to having four servants for every one the American family in the same category could afford, must make serious adjustments in their mode of living, thanks to the government, which is substituting itself for the heavenly protection the servant girl more or less falsely is

JEFFERSON GIG ON WAY TO SESQUI, SEEN BY COOLIDGE

Washington, June 26.—(AP)—The gig in which Thomas Jefferson rode from Monticello, Va., to Philadelphia for the meeting at which the Declaration of Independence was adopted was exhibited to President Coolidge today at the white house.

It is being taken to Philadelphia for the sesqui-centennial and when brought to the white house was removed from an automobile and taken into the executive offices.

The gig lacks the wheels, which have been lost, but otherwise is in a fair state of preservation. It is in custody of the American Automobile association.

GOTHAM VISITOR VICTIM OF THIEF

Kurt Herwig, 1612 Avenue A, New York city, reported to police Saturday night that his pocket was picked of $40 while he was in a downtown grocery early Saturday night. Mr. Hertwig furnished police with a description of two men whom he suspected of having robbed him.

GERMAN STEEL LOAN OF $30,000,000 IS SUBSCRIBED

New York, June 26.—(AP)—Quick oversubscription of the $30,000,000 German steel loan today detracted investment interest from the bond market, which was afflicted with the usual Saturday loss of animation.

A wide demand was reported for the United Steel works issue, which was priced at 90 to yield about 6.83 per cent. With a large volume of advance subscriptions on hand, the bankers were able to close the books on the offering within 15 minutes. Meanwhile Rheinelbe and other representative German obligations on the stock exchange continued to attract good buying support.

The better prospects for reaching an accord on the French debt settlement, with the support of the new cabinet, favorably influenced the buying.

TWO LIFEGUARDS VICTOR IN BATTLE WITH HUGE SHARK

Redondo Beach, Calif., June 26.—(AP)—A 10-foot thrasher shark battled two life guards in the surf at North Beach near here and the men came out victorious.

The life guards, Paul Nelson and Ray Kegeris, nationally known swimmers, were attacked while riding a surf board. The shark had bit through the board and was gaining an advantage when other bathers came to the rescue. A blow with an oar stunned the big fish and it was towed to shore.

$100,000 VERDICT IN ALIENATION SUIT SET ASIDE

Washington, June 26.—(AP)—The $100,000 damages awarded by a jury to Mrs. Hilda C. Voigt against her father-in-law, Edward Voigt, a jeweler and his wife for alleged alienation of the affections of her husband, Edward Voigt, Jr., a former bank president, was set aside by Justice Hitz in the District of Columbia supreme court.

Ordering a new trial, the justice said the verdict was "shocking and rendered in a shocking way." It was for the full amount sought by Mrs. Voigt, and was the largest of its kind ever awarded here.

Peaches Are Success In Quitman Section; First Carload Moves

Quitman, Ga., June 26.—(Special.) The first carload shipments of peaches ever made from this section was handled this week by the South Georgia railroad and will go down in history as the beginning of the peach industry here. They came from the 175-acre orchard of the old Marshall farm south of Quitman, planted by A. C. Marshall, whose postoffice address is Greenville, Fla.

Mr. Marshall has planted Hiley Belles, Carmens and Elbertas. This is the first year of bearing and he is very much pleased with the product of the orchard. He has shipped four carloads and expects to ship 12 to 15 cars from the orchard.

This is the first commercial experiment with peaches in this section and a great many people have visited the Marshall place, his venture being the farming sensation of the season.

FOREIGN SHIPS LOAD TURPS AT BRUNSWICK

Brunswick, Ga., June 26.—(Special.)—Improved world trade conditions are being reflected in increased activity along the waterfront here, and receipts of naval stores now show that the summer heat is causing the gum to flow freely from the pine trees in the interior.

The big Nippon freighter Mayebashi Maru of Tokio, is in port for a large cargo of rosin and spirits of turpentine, and will load at the Downing docks for the Columbia Naval Stores company. The steamer Corapeak, of Norfolk, is loading rosin at the same dock for the Downing company and the Hercules Powder company.

Tobin Opposes General Strike By U. S. Labor

Cincinnati, Ohio, June 26.—(AP)—Daniel J. Tobin, Indianapolis, president of the International Teamsters' union, who recently returned from Europe where he made a survey of labor conditions, said here today that he was opposed to any general strike in the United States.

"I am firmly opposed to any general strike in the United States," said Tobin. "I have been through strikes and I know what they mean. And I don't see where the general strike did the women any good in England, but I am not criticising them or their methods."

Tobin, who also is treasurer of the American Federation of Labor, today made a report of his findings of general labor conditions in Europe to the executive council of the federation of labor which is in session here.

"I would also say that the purposes of the general strike in England were entirely exaggerated and misstated in the American press," said Tobin.

"There was no thought of a revolution on the part of British workers. They are 100 per cent patriotic and 90 per cent of them are opposed to bolshevism and communism."

FOUR MORE MEN HELD IN ATTACK ON LAW VIOLATOR

Williamson, W. Va., June 26.—(AP) Four men were arrested charged with being members of a band of masked men which yesterday attacked the home of James Johnson, Jennie's creek, Wayne county, and seriously wounded Mrs. Johnson.

The men were Blair Messer, 38; Flem Fields, 36; Noah Fields, 29, and Owen Fields, of Stone Coal, Mingo county. Tiny Fields, 28, was arrested yesterday in connection with the case.

All were held under $2,000 bond each.

The attack was said by police to have followed an alleged law violation by Johnson.

TOBACCO CROP EXPECTED TO BE BEST EVER GROWN

Waycross, Ga., June 26.—(AP)—The 1926 south Georgia tobacco crop will, in all probability, be the best quality crop ever produced in the state, in the best quality crop ever produced in the state, in the opinion of tobacco experts as the marketing season approaches.

This is the opinion of bankers, leading business men and farmers throughout the entire section.

While the acreage is slightly smaller than that of last season, the yield per acre is expected to show an increase and the price per pound to be considerably higher.

TERRELL FARMS SHIP CROP OF ONIONS

Dawson, Ga., June 26.—(Special.)—Shipment of onions which were grown in Terrell county on a small scale this year is expected to start in the next few days. It is estimated that three carloads will be shipped from Dawson and will bring the growers approximately $10,000. The acreage yield will be good.

THREE RAILROADERS ARE KILLED IN WRECK

New York, June 26.—(AP)—Three railroad men were killed and two others were seriously injured and several passengers on an express train were slightly injured in the New York, New Haven and Hartford train wreck near Kingston, R. I., early today.

The dead were W. J. Moulton, engineer; John J. Mulvaney, fireman, and George Hathaway, head brakeman, all of Providence, R. I., members of the crew of a freight train which was wrecked when the engine exploded about one and a half miles west of Kingston.

Three cars of the freight train were thrown across the adjoining tracks, on which the Cape Codder express, bound from New York to Hyannis, Mass., arrived a short time after the explosion. The engine of the express swerved off the tracks and landed head down over a slight embankment. The sleeping car next to the express engine turned over and the next three sleepers were derailed, but remained upright.

Some passengers on the express were injured, but none seriously.

Andrew Bennett, fireman, and Charles Frazier, engineer, both injured, were taken to a hospital in Westerly.

SUMMERVILLE STORM DOES MUCH DAMAGE

Summerville, Ga., June 26.—(Special.)—Reports from various parts of Chattooga county show that Wednesday morning's storm caused much damage, the large barn belonging to Harrison Hammond at Chelsea having been demolished by the wind. One of Mr. Hammond's mules was killed in the wrecked barn and another mule was seriously injured.

Many large shade trees were blown down in all parts of Summerville, crops were badly damaged by the wind and excessive rainfall and public roads were almost washed away in some places.

A large number of chickens were drowned in the high water from the spring branch that runs through Summerville.

Building at Nashville.

Nashville, Ga., June 26.—(Special.) Much building is going on in Nashville. The high school building is under construction, and the Pan-American Oil company is erecting some handsome filling stations, and several new homes have been built within the past year.

There is a general boom on in Nashville and south Georgia. Many of the North Carolina farmers are writing and getting in touch with land owners here, are buying farms and are moving to Berrien county to grow tobacco.

General Weyler Faces Prison In Revolt Plo

BY DUKE N. PARRY.

New York, June 26.—General Valeriano Weyler, whose ruthless ru in Cuba helped to bring on the Spanish-American war, has returned t international attention in Spai where he faces a prison term in h 88th year.

One of the 20 just arrested by th Madrid authorities for plotting th downfall of Premier Primo De River Weyler, whose very name brough rage to Americans in the years h governed Cuba, kept his fiery tem perament in his later years, and f nally sought to overthrow a firml entrenched dictator. Now he ma round out his life in a Spanish priso cell.

In 1896 and 1897, when reports Weyler's cruelty to Cubans filled th newspapers of this country, finishin his work in Cuba he stated that th war between the United States an Spain was inevitable. Many who rea his declaration checked guilt for th prospective struggle to the man wh had been known by Cubans as th "butcher from Spain."

Hatred for General Weyler wa evident in the United States almos from the time he landed in Havan on February 10, 1896, until he wa recalled by the Spanish governmen He directed his attention toward pu ting down the revolt of the Cuban which began in 1895. A year after h had taken over the direction of Cu ban affairs for Spain, American news papers were filled with reports of hi murder of women and children b slow starvation. His concentratio policy caused thousands to be herde together in camps. He forbade th physicians of Havana to give starva tion as a cause of death. When Wi liam McKinley took notice of th cruelties reported from the island Weyler denounced the American pre ident. Americans living in Cuba wer forbidden to communicate with Cu ban insurrectos.

Weyler's policy was to "extermi nate the breed of Cuban patriots."

American schoolboys learned fro their fathers of "Weyler, the Butch er." Feeling ran so high in many American cities that the Spanish ge eral was burned in effigy in publi gatherings. For months preceding th outbreak of the Spanish-American war the atrocities of Weyler in Cub were discussed by congressmen i Washington and action was urged o President McKinley by the press.

"I glory in the insults leveled a me by the Americans and the Cu bans," said Weyler after he was re called to Madrid in 1897.

Later Weyler admitted that whil "dictator" of Cuba, he had planne an invasion of the United States. I the Spanish house he startled mem bers by recounting how he had prom ised a Cuban military leader 50,00 troops with which to begin war on th United States, once the insurrectio had been put down.

Weyler's fame as a Spanish sol dier was not lost after he returne to his native land. As late as 1916 when he had reached his 78th year he was named president of a centra military staff and was given powe to reorganize the entire Spanish army He frequently has been mentioned fo important army posts, among them that of leader of the Spanish force in Morocco.

Whether there has been rivalry be tween Weyler and the present Span ish dictator is not known, but there is evidence that the stern dictator o Cuba has retained a large persona following, and that his name, among the 20 who sought to overthrow Ri vera, was used most prominently to attract recruits to the anti-governmen cause.

Boyish Bobs and Forms Are Silly, Says Irene Castle

:: FORMER DANCER STILL BOBBED, HOWEVER ::

New York, June 26.—(AP)— Irene Castle McLaughlin today deplored bobbed hair, 13 years after she introduced the practice. But she is still bobbed.

The "boyish bob," has ruined it all, she said, adding "it is affecting girls' characters."

"I think girls are silly," she said, "either to have boyish bobs or boyish forms. They are losing the softness and appeal which should be theirs."

The former dancer was sailing on the France on a two months' shopping tour of Europe.

"Why don't you let your hair grow long," she was asked after she had forcefully expressed her opinions.

"As if I haven't," she exclaimed. "Why I've let it grow five times and every time it reaches the awkward stage," she shrugged, "I'm on my way to the barber's again. Isn't it dreadful?"

WARM TIMES SEEN IN STATE POLITICS

nation is explained in widely different versions. To date the version of Brown on one side and Jackson and Bridges on the other have not been printed in full, as all have promised future statements. But as far as can be learned from statements of the principals themselves and others who were in close connection with the situation, the versions run something like this, the Brown version being first and the other side following:

According to Mr. Brown, he held a conference of some of his friends and supporters in his office last Tuesday, the day before the time limit for entering the race for commissioner of agriculture expired, noon Wednesday. At this conference Jackson and Bridges were present and took part in mapping out a campaign for the commissioner, according to his version.

"On the very next day, Wednesday morning, Mr. Jackson came to me and said he wanted to tell me something that pained him a whole lot," Mr. Brown said. "I thought he was sick or something and asked him what it was he had to tell me. Jackson replied that he and others were going to qualify Jim Mills as a candidate for commissioner against me and that they were going to support Mills for the place. Jackson told me, 'before I flared up,' that he and his associates would make this, that and the other concession to me if I wanted to join them, and this statement was more than I could stand.

"I told Jackson that if he were any kind of a man and wanted to support Mills, he would resign as director of the bureau of markets instantly. Jackson decline to resign at that time, and then asked me if I had not planned to put one of my sons in his place as director of the markets bureau and put another one of my sons in as assistant commissioner of agriculture to succeed Bridges after the primary was over. I denied this indignantly and again insisted that Jackson resign. He left the office and I then called Bridges. I had not heard of Bridges taking any activity against me, but I gave him the chance to state his position. Bridges told me that he had decided to support Mills, and I then demanded that he resign as assistant commissioner. At first he refused to resign. I have suspected for some time that Jackson was working on some scheme against me, but had not suspected Bridges. I knew that Charles Barrett, president of the National Farmers' union, was working against me. He has been angry with me ever since I declined to give him $30,000 out of the markets bureau funds for some of the causes I supports. Thursday Jackson and Bridges cleaned up their desks and got out and I put temporary clerks to fill their places. As far as planning to put either one of my sons in the positions named, I never heard of such a plan until it was mentioned to me. I intend to make a statement during the week in which I will give complete details of the entire situation."

Two Issue Cards.

Mr. Jackson and Mr. Bridges issued a joint card after their resignations were demanded in which they stated that they were retiring from the department but were not resigning.

"We have been fired," they said.

Mr. Jackson was asked about the rumor that he had questioned Brown about planning to appoint his two sons to the two posts held by Jackson and Bridges.

"That is a small matter," Mr. Jackson said. "There are far greater things than that behind all of this. The people of Georgia are not interested in a little thing like that, as it is largely of a personal nature, but they will be interested in the bigger things I have in mind. In a few days I expect to have a statement giving details of the situation. At present I am a private citizen and as such I am supporting Mr. Mills for the position of commissioner. Mr. Mills has charge of his own campaign and is making his own race in his own way."

Mr. Bridges coincided in the statement of Mr. Jackson.

The foregoing account is as near accurate as can be obtained from the statements thus far made by the principals. In the meantime, there are four other candidates in the field for the post sought by Brown and Mills. These are: Eugene Talmadge, McRae; J. S. Shettlesworth, Gwinnett; John R. Irwin, Sandersville, and Charles Stewart, Atkinson county.

In statements at a barbecue in Sandersville Thursday attacks were made on the Brown administration by Candidates Talmadge and Irwin. Candidate Stewart issued a statement Saturday in which he charged that the "rupture" between Brown and his lieutenants is all "a sham battle."

Text of Statement.

His statement follows:

"I am amused to see from the press dispatches the report of the apparent dissension in the Brown machine.

"The people of the state opposed to this vicious political machine should beware. They should watch for wolves in sheeps' raiment. This machine has 'seen the handwriting on the wall.' They realize they cannot fool the people longer and, in my opinion, are staging a sham battle to save their hides and to keep in the family their machine.

"They have the effrontery and brass to even name one of their number—who is on the pay roll—as a candidate in the place of their chief. If not a sham battle, certainly there is a 'Brutus' in the camp, apparently doing anything to save the machine and protect their henchmen.

"I say to the people who are opposed to this rotten Brown-Mills-Jackson machine: Don't be deceived; a vote for Mills or for Brown is a vote to retain the machine. Their last move and last stand is an insult to the intelligence of the Georgia voters—and I do not believe they will deceive many of them."

Judge Russell Speaks.

Judge Russell, who said he would conduct an active campaign for United States senator, has not decided whether or not he will resign as chief justice of the supreme court to make his race.

"My course of action in the matter will depend entirely on the development of some matters which I do not care to discuss at present," he said.

Close friends of Judge Russell declared he was ready to resign his post as judge if he found that his campaign interfered with his duty in that position. They said he would announce his course in this connection later.

Judge Russell said he is running for the senate for just one reason.

"I am making this race so that the people who are opposed to this country entering the League of Nations or any other foreign league or court will have a candidate whom they can support. If the people don't want the League of Nations they can support me and if they do want it they can support my opponent. This is the only issue in the campaign."

The camps of the candidates for governor were quiet Saturday. Chairman John N. Holder, of the state highway commission, was busy at his office transacting business of the state highway department. George Carswell, of Wilkinson, had no statement to add to his initial statement made public Wednesday. Dr. L. G. Herdman and J. O. Wood, other candidates did not discuss any of the issues of the campaign. There will be several close races for some of the state house jobs but these will not burst into activity until after the Fourth of July barbecues begin to spring up over the state.

MEMORIAL ROAD URGED BY SIMS

Mayor Walter A. Sims, speaking at the celebration of the 62nd anniversary of the battle of Kennesaw mountain, Saturday urged active support of the proposal to create a great memorial highway from Kennesaw mountain to Stone mountain.

Mayor Sims pointed out that a great concrete boulevard such as has been suggested between the two mountains, would pass through some of the most historic battle fields of the war between the states and would form an imperishable memorial to the heroism of both sides in the conflict of the sixties.

Leading from Kennesaw mountain, where unflinching heroism of the north met the immovable courage of the south, the mayor pointed out, the boulevard would pass through Grant park in the center of the site of the battle of Atlanta. From there it would go through the site of the battle of Peachtree creek, including the proposed new city park on the site of the disposal plant.

"The battle of Peachtree creek," said Mayor Sims, "in proportion to the number of men engaged on both sides, was the most sanguinary in history, over two-thirds of the combatants being put out of action. On the site of this battle it is now proposed to create a great public park, described so far as the disposal plant park, which, judging by the growth of Atlanta in recent years, will be in the heart of the city in the next 25 years.

"From here," the mayor continued, "the memorial highway would go through Decatur to Stone mountain. It would thus link the living, growing Kennesaw mountain memorial to the valor of both north and south, with the clear granite of Stone mountain, where the valor of the Confederacy is being carved in imperishable monument.

"I can conceive of no more fitting tribute to the heroes of both blue and gray than such a memorial boulevard. It will link four sacred spots in their joint history—Kennesaw mountain, the battle of Atlanta, the battle of Peachtree creek and Stone mountain."

HIGHWAY TO CONNECT MEMORIALS PROPOSED.

Charles J. Metz, president of the Audit Company of the South and one of the officials of the Stone Mountain Confederate Memorial association, has sent to the Kennesaw national park commission the folowing communication suggesting a great highway connecting the proposed Kennesaw national park and the Confederate memorial on Stone mountain.

Mr. Metz in his letter to the Kennesaw park commission says:

"In the matter of a memorial highway conaecting the proposed Kennesaw national park with the Confederate memorial being carved on Stone mountain;

"Referring to our conversation of June 18, I have had E. Burton Cooke, landscape architect, Atlanta, outline on the government topographic map (enclosed) the general direction of this proposed memorial highway.

"To connect these two great projects with a magnificent boulevard, say 120 feet wide, would, in my opinion, be of great benefit to both, and to the general public.

"I am calling the matter at this time to the attention of the Kennesaw national park commission in the hope and expectation that it may include in its recommendation to congress the construction of this great highway, linking together the shrines of the soldiers of the north and of the south."

TRIBUTE IS PAID TO VICITIMS OF WAR

fied in Major General John L. Clem, U. S. A., retired, chairman of the Kennesaw mountain park commission, who took a prominent part in the program and whose cordial greetings and warm-hearted comradeship with the survivors of the gray hosts that once opposed him and his friends was an outstanding feature of the day.

Second only to General Clem's presence were the letters of President Coolidge and Vice President Dawes, read by Judge Sibley, which expressed the interest of these two ranking officials of the American government in the proposal for a great national memorial park at Kennesaw and which bespoke their sentiments of friendship to both north and south on perhaps the most typical illustration of the true brotherhood of the reunited nation which has occurred in the years which have intervened since gray and blue laid down their swords and began the reconstruction of the nation riven by civil strife.

Governor Welcomes Visitors.

Governor Clifford Walker, of Georgia, speaking a welcome to the thousands of visitors who had come to Marietta and Kennesaw mountain for the day, voiced the sentiment of the south when he said that in the conflict of the 60's "both sides were animated by loyalty and devotion to duty." The governor then suggested that the great host gathered there to cement anew the ties of friendship throughout the nation, to wipe out the ideas of sectional lines, adopt resolutions petitioning the federal government to adopt the battlefield of Kennesaw as a memorial park and as a symbol of the reunited nation.

"Every semblance of feeling between the two factions has gone," said the governor, "and I further suggest that the government be asked to establish a great 100-foot wide boulevard, connecting Kennesaw mountain by way of Grant Park, on the site of the battle of Atlanta, and the proposed new park on the disposal plant site, where the battle of Peachtree creek was fought, with Stone mountain, where the heroism of the south is now being perpetuated in a monument of imperishable granite."

Celebration of the 62nd anniversary of the bloody conflict of Kennesaw mountain, which left to Marietta two cemeteries, one containing 15,000 Union dead and the other 3,000 Confederate slain, began at 10 o'clock Saturday morning in the courthouse square at Marietta when a great parade of comingled veterans of both gray and blue, formed for the march to the mountain.

Comradeship Reigns.

In the line of march were many survivors of the 62-year-old conflict, men from both sides wearing again the uniforms so dear to their hearts, but whether blue or gray, paying tribute to the heroism of the other side and clasping the side of erstwhile foe in the spirit of modern comradeship.

Three hundred Cobb county girls, dressed in white and wearing both union and confederate colors, marched beneath the entwined flags, the "Stars and Stripes," and "Stars and Bars," at the head of the procession. Following them in line, with automobiles loaded with veterans of both sides intermingled, came detachments of the national guard and regular army, representing the America of today, the Old Guard of Atlanta, glorious remnant of the military heritage of an older age, and thousands of decorated automobiles. A float loaded with the prettiest girls of Smyrna, neighbor town to Marietta, was an outstanding feature.

At the mountain, on an improvised platform facing a great natural amphitheater with the 62-year-old breastworks and entrenchments of the Confederates as a background, the two groups of veterans met and with massed crowds of young America listened as speaker after speaker told of the great deeds wrought of old.

Former Governor Nat E. Harris, of Georgia, a Confederate veteran, touched a responsive chord when he referred to the irresistible march of the American troops in France in the world war, "inspired," he said, "by their heritage of bravery from both north and south, and made irresistible because of the blood of their fathers who fought under Lee and under Grant when each side knew it was fighting for the right, and each side gave of its best and noblest blood that its ideals might prevail."

Spirit of Reunited America.

"The trenches where we fought until we dropped in order that the federals should not take Kennesaw mountain are still open before our eyes as I speak these words," Governor Harris said. "Yet we greet our friends in blue, shake their hands and say, 'Brother, how are you?' That is the unconquerable spirit of a reunited America today."

Lieutenant Colonel William P. Stoker, of the engineering corps, United States army, a member of the Kennesaw memorial park commission, also spoke briefly, expressing pleasure at being present and promising to do all in his power to make real the dream of the great national park.

General M. D. Vance, of Arkansas, commander of the United Confederate Veterans, was a speaker, voicing the welcome on behalf of Confederate veterans to visitors from the north. Ex-Governor Joseph M. Brown, a resident of Marietta, spoke briefly, as did J. W. Scott, commander of the Atlanta camp of the G. A. R.

Ella Powell, of Gainesville, spoke on behalf of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, and was followed by the Rev. Sam Small, who told how the idea of the Kennesaw memorial park was first conceived and referred to his experiences in the Confederate army and during the Spanish-American war.

The Spanish-American war veterans formed a picturesque group before the speakers' platform during the exercises, while veterans of the world war, scattered among the audience of several thousand, provided a touch of kinship between the warriors of today and warriors of generations that are past.

After the speaking, a barbecue was served by the Marietta Chamber of Commerce and in the evening dancing to the music of half a dozen bands continued to a late hour on the courthouse square in Marietta.

GERMANY TALKS TO BUENOS AIRES OVER RADIO PHONE

Berlin, June 26.—Fifty years after the invention of the telephone by Alexander Graham Bell, American scientist, Germany talked over the radio telephone Friday with Buenos Aires, Argentina, and then sent a similar message to Japan.

For the first time in history a German wireless station thus succeeded in reaching first the South American continent and later Japan. The powerful station at Nauen was used to send the messages which went out to America and then spanned the breadth of Europe Asia.

A short wave broadcaster intended primarily for transmission of wireless photographs was used in the successful experiment. The wave length was 40 meters and the power 10 kilowatts.

SHOULDER BLADE OF PRE-HISTORIC ELEPHANT FOUND

Tucson, Ariz., June 26.—(AP)—Discovery of a giant shoulder blade of a pre-historic elephant, probably a mammoth, estimated to be at least 25,000 years old, in a mine site 25 miles southwest of here, has brought to light one of the most important fossil beds in the southwest, it was announced today by Dr. Byron Cummings, director of the Arizona state museum.

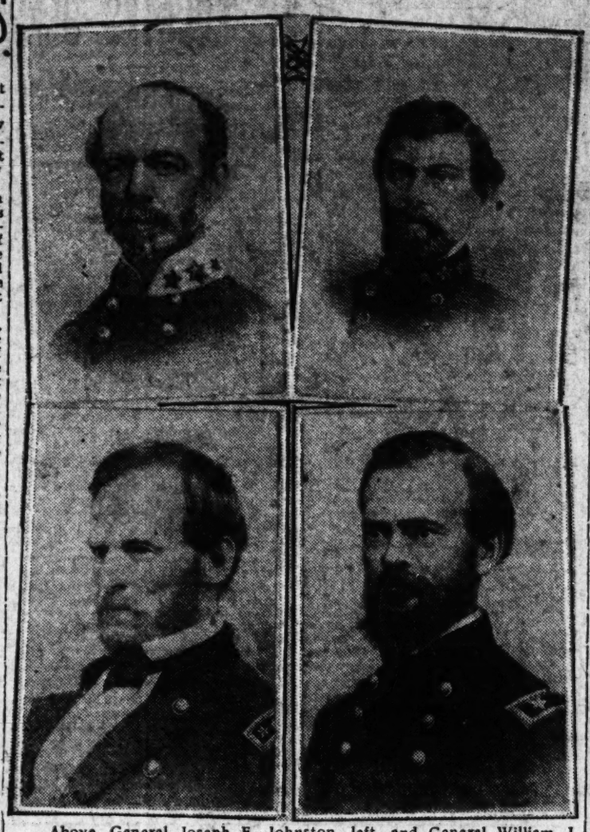

Dr. Cummings said the fossil bed disclosed is at least ten acres in extent, and that he plans excavations there, in the belief that he will find the rest of the elephant's skeleton and possibly other pre-historic remains.

On Kennesaw

BY SAM W. SMALL

Here on the heights and scarps of Kennesaw
Embattl'd armies struggled long ago,
Each striving to strike down the facing foe,
Tho' brothers they, as Jacob and Esau.

Each fought to foster what he held as law,
For rights he felt he never should forego,
For home and all men cherish here below,
For faiths that laugh'd into the cannon's jaw!

Their deeds of valor let the poet sing,
Their glory-epitaphs let hist'ry write,
Their fame let Freedom tell to future time;
We come today and all our treasures bring
To set up here the symbols of their might
And testify their chivalries sublime!

More Clothes on Chorines Is Planned by Ziegfeld

:: PRODUCER DISGUSTED WITH STAGE NUDITY ::

New York, June 26.—(AP)—More clothes are decreed for girls. Society and sportswomen in France, whence come the styles, and the New York stage are involved in fashion's latest ukase. Florenz Ziegfeld, who admits he imported the vogue of stage nudity, now says he is so disgusted with its development in the hands of "less artistic producers" that he is going to lead a campaign for more clothes in glorification of the American girl on the stage.

In a statement deploring the "daring and coarseness" of present exploiting on Broadway, the theatrical producer says the stage must be cleaned. He asks the theatergoing public to cooperate by supporting only those shows that are free from displays of naked women.

Although he says he was the first producer to stage nudity in New York city, he did it artistically, he avows, with no immodesty intended, whereas imitators, lacking artistic guidance, have done otherwise. Broadway producers, he added, are "pandering to the vilest tastes of playgoers to force a box office stampede."

"I am leading the movement back to artistry and normalcy in the theater," the statement continues. "There is but one thing left for the legitimate producers to do, and that is to lead not only audiences back to the shows based on merit and artistry, but to force other producers to amend their ways."

He is making this fight, Ziegfeld says, not only in the cause of decent citizenship, but also in behalf of chorus girls who must do as producers direct or find themselves without jobs.

John S. Sumner, secretary of the New York Society for Suppression of Vice, welcomed the stand taken by Mr. Ziegfeld and said he would be pleased if the Broadway producer would join his society.

"In all sincerity, I would welcome him," said Mr. Sumner.

At the annual outdoor fashion review yesterday at the famous Auteuil race track, the features were long skirts with organdie and flower effects. One striking exception was a pair of high boots trimmed with brown calf, and with bare knees plainly visible.

In the French women's sporting world, scant running trunks, skin-tight swimming suits and sleeveless tennis dresses are forbidden for members of the French Federation of Sporting Women.

The federation's morals commission yesterday prohibited the type of dress worn even by Suzanne Lenglen in her tennis matches. In track athletics, trunks, longer than skirts and extending about four inches below the knee, must be worn. Sleeves must cover one-quarter of the arm.

Bathing suits must not follow the figure.

Jardine Denies Charges Made By Caraway

Washington, June 26.—(AP)—Replying to the Caraway resolution, adopted yesterday, Secretary Jardine today informed the senate that at no time had he been connected in any capacity with the college of scientific price forecasting in Illinois.

The agriculture secretary said his office did accept an invitation for him to address the college on June 11, but that he cancelled it because of other business.

"I am informed that this school has no connection with the grain exchange," the secretary added. "Had I fulfilled the cancelled engagement I would have discussed the statistical work of the department of agriculture, der the grain future act and the reforms in grain marketing adopted by the several grain exchanges during the past year at my suggestion.

"I do not believe that it is possible for the secretary of agriculture to forecast the future markets of grain, nor does he have information which would make this possible, and had I accepted the invitation to speak at this school I would not have attempted to discuss this topic."

Taking the floor after the reading of Secretary Jardine's letter Senator Caraway, democrat, Arkansas, who introduced the resolution, said it had been represented that the secretary was to "teach his course to the budding gamblers behind closed doors, would-be gamblers who had paid $50 in advance to be told how to rob the grain market." His name was being advertised, the senator said, as a member of the faculty.

NEW HONOR IS PAID TO COMMANDER BYRD

New York, June 26.—(AP)—Lieutenant Commander Richard E. Byrd tonight achieved another unique distinction to add to that of being the first man to fly over the north pole. He was created a doctor of longitude and latitude of the American Geographical society, a degree created especially for him.

The commander and his companion on the flight, Floyd Bennett, were cheered enthusiastically by a large crowd gathered in Carnegie hall, to hear the first of a series of lectures they will deliver throughout the country on the polar feat.

Dr. John H. Finley, president of the American Geographical society, conferred the unique degree on the commander, and Douglas Robinson, assistant secretary of the navy, introduced the fliers to the audience.

The occasion was marked by an air of celebration not ordinarily associated with "lectures." Edwin Markham, poet, opened the program by reading an ode commemorating the historic achievement of Byrd and Bennett, which began:

"Hail to the hero of arctic dare,
Whose hazard was a lyric of the air,
A radiant writing upon virgin skies
Toward which the centuries will turn their eyes."

Three boxes of red roses and other flowers were sent today to Commander Byrd's ship, the Chantier, by the same woman who yesterday distributed gifts of $3 each to the crew, after reading that some of the men were penniless and unable to go sightseeing ashore. In sending the flowers she revealed her name as Georgia E. Tienne, but did not give her address.

Fraud Is Charged In Sale of Land By Florida Concern

Des Moines, Iowa, June 26.—(AP)—Suit for $542,000 against officers of the Guaranty Development corporation, resulting from the sale of Florida lands, was filed today by Walter Simpson, a stockholder in the company.

The suit charged that in February, 1922, 18,000 acres of Brevard county, Florida, land was fraudulently sold to A. W. Thompson, one of the officers of the company, for $40,000 when it was actually worth $430,000.

The complaint asked a full accounting and assignment to each stockholder of his rightful share.

DR. GLIDDEN HEADS TUBERCULOSIS BODY

Dr. E. W. Glidden was reelected president of the Georgia Tuberculosis association Friday at the annual meeting of the organization. Lee M. Happ, of Macon, was elected first vice president and Dr. I. A. White, of Cartersville, second vice president.

Members elected to the executive committee and advisory staff at the annual meeting include: Dr. E. W. Glidden, ex-officio; Miss Virginia Gibbs, of Marietta, secretary; T. K. Glenn, Dr. C. C. Aven, Dr. T. F. Abercrombie, Dr. E. C. Thrash and Mrs. F. G. Hodgson, on the executive committee, and on the advisory staff: Dr. Z. S. Cowan, Dr. J. H. Bradfield, Mrs. E. R. James P. Faulkner, managing director of the association, made a report of the work done by the 70 state tuberculosis organizations during the past year. Dr. Glidden announced that completion of the new $500,000 state tuberculosis sanitarium at Alto is set now for December 1. Because the state's appropriation of $50,000 will not be available until January 1, white patients cannot be removed into the new building until that time, he explained.

HEEL-CLICKING IN BRITISH ARMY GIVEN SETBACK

London, June 26.—(AP)—Heel-clicking in the British army as a part of the salute has received a setback by announcement that guardsmen in the London district henceforth are to be allowed to wear rubber heels.

This move is designed to ease the jar of marching, and to make soldier life generally a bit more attractive. Officers, however, say that heel-clicking, which became quite the fad during the war in the British army and in the American army in France, will "be missed terribly," for a time at least.

BIG FABRIC CONTRACT BOOSTS THOMASTON

BY J. B. HARDY,
Editor Thomaston Times.

Thomaston, Ga., June 26.—(Special.)—The consummation of a $100,000,000 textile deal has set the world to talking about Thomaston and Upson county. When the news of this record-breaking deal was flashed people everywhere began asking what and where is Thomaston? What sort of town is it and in what sort of a country is it located? In order to answer, if possible, these questions, I have prepared this write-up of the community.

In the first place, Thomaston offers unusual inducements to industrial enterprises. Tax exemption for a period of five years for new industries was recently voted by Thomaston and Upson county.

Much Electric Power.

Unlimited electric power is another inducement for the location of manufactories. Thomaston is the center of large water power developments and is a distributing station for both the Ocmulgee and Chattahoochee river plants, being connected by transmission lines with these two plants at Jackson and Columbus. Then, too, it is near the Flint river, where a big development of water power will take place in a short time. The Central of Georgia Power company owns the rights on the Flint and will build a dam about 8 miles west of Thomaston at a point where the transmission lines run from Thomaston to Columbus. This will give Thomaston power facilities perhaps not offered by any other city in the south.

Splendid labor conditions and climate are special inducements to manufacturing interests. There has never been a strike among the laborers in the some six or seven thousand industrial workers of Thomaston. Weather conditions are also ideal, as there is not a day in the year when it is necessary for a plant to shut down on account of weather.

Health conditions are fine, there being no malaria in Thomaston and only a slight percentage in the river section of the county. An ample supply of good water for all purposes is assured by city water plants.

Excellent schools are maintained for the training of the children, Thomaston being the home of R. E. Lee institute, an accredited high school on both the state and southern lists.

Thomaston is at this time spending more than $200,000 in a city and county paving program and has a building program projected that will run upward of $500,000.

Thomaston is on Route 3 of the state highway system, known as the shortest route from Atlanta to Tampa, Fla. Good roads are maintained throughout the county.

Ground has been broken on the new Martha Cotton mills to be built by the Hightower interests for the manufacture of tire fabric for the B. F. Goodrich Tire and Rubber company. This is a $3,000,000 enterprise.

When the Martha mills are completed and in operation, Thomaston will have a $70,000 weekly pay roll or a yearly pay roll of $3,500,000. This from Thomaston Cotton mills, Peerless Cotton mills, Martha mills and Thomaston bleachery. This wonderful sum turned loose in this community means great things for the business interests of the city and county.

150,000 Spindles.

When the new mill is built and the enlargements to the old mills completed the Hightower mills will have a capacity of approximately 150,000 spindles which valued at $80 per spindle (and this is a very conservative estimate) will make a total valuation of $12,000,000.

FAILURE OF FARM RELIEF IS BLAMED ON LOBBYISTS

Washington, June 26.—(AP)—Discussing farm relief in a radio address tonight, Representative Tincher, republican, Kansas, one of the sponsors of the bill indorsed yesterday by President Coolidge, declared that if effective remedial legislation is not enacted by congress "the blame will rest upon the heads of irresponsible lobbyists and those who seek to play politics with so great a problem as the farm problem."

Referring to the measure which he championed in the house and Senator Fess, republican, Ohio, has offered in the senate, the Kansan, a member of the house agriculture committee, said:

"It makes available funds, not to loan to farmers direct, but to arrange with organizations of farmers to take off the market the surplus, hold it, and market it in an orderly manner. It is not a subsidy. There is a precedent for it in our own country. It was a success when administered as it was under the war finance act. If the administration is permitted to have the law, and it fails, the blame will be upon them."

SKELETON FOUND IN OLD COAL MINE

Webster Springs, W. Va., June 26.—(AP)—A skeleton, believed to be that of George H. Bennett, prominent Webster Springs resident who disappeared three years ago, was found in an abandoned coal mine near here today. There was a hole in the skull, indicating the man had been shot. A ring with the initials "G. H. B." and other articles believed to have been carried by Bennett were found near the bones.

The discovery was made by workmen cleaning up the mine preparatory to reopening.

SIMOND'S SAW LOCATES HERE

Branch offices of the Simond's Saw & Steel company, with home offices in Fitchburg, Mass., will be opened at 98-100 South Forsyth street July 1, it was announced Saturday through the industrial bureau of the chamber of commerce.

This addition to Atlanta's industries will add a payroll amounting to $100,000 yearly and give employment to 50 persons, it was announced here. F. H. Horton will be manager of the new unit of the company and will act as southeastern manager.

Selection of Atlanta as the site for this branch office serving the southeast came after a corps of investigators from executive headquarters of the company had made a thorough survey of the territory, Mr. Horton, manager, said Saturday.

Mr. Horton was high in his praise of Atlanta and the advertising program here. Officials of the company investigating this territory recognized the active community spirit in Atlanta and this fact, coupled with the record of great development now going on in this section, induced them to locate the branch office in Atlanta, he said.

Until now business for the southeastern section has been handled through the business offices at Boston, Mass., but due to the growing trade in this section it became necessary to establish a southern branch, it was announced.

The Simond's Saw & Steel company was organized in 1831 and has been controlled by the Simond family since. Alvin Simond is now president of the company. The company has factories in Fitchburg, Chicago, Ill., and Montreal, Canada, and branch houses in many of the larger cities of the country.

It will occupy about 15,000 square feet of space at the Forsyth street address. The local office will serve Georgia, Florida, and North Carolina and South Carolina.

DISABLED VETS END BIG CONVENTION HERE

Wth the departure of newly-elected officers after informal conferences Saturday the sixth annual convention of Disabled American Veterans of the World War passed into history.

Many visitors journeyed to Marietta Saturday to witness the Blue and Gray reunion.

General John V. Clinnin, of Chicago, newly elected commander of the organization, was honor guest at a luncheon at the Ansley hotel Saturday, following conferences at the city auditorium Saturday morning.

MANY AIR STUNTS OFFERED AT MEET ON MILLER FIELD

Speed races, parachute jumping, relay races, "stunts" and formation flying were among the events. A crowd estimated at 25,000 watched the fliers at their antics.

What People Say About Cathcart Moving Service

Atlanta, Georgia, June 19, 1926.

Cathcart Van & Storage Co.,
Atlanta, Ga.

Gentlemen:—

I am glad to enclose my check covering your charge for moving my household furniture.

It is the best money I have ever paid out.

In the first place your van carried about three times more than I thought it could and your men were excellent packers. Everything arrived in splendid condition and so far as I know there was not a scratch.

I am frank to admit I was rather pessimistic about moving as I had heard so many tales of wrecked furniture, but your moving has proved to me that moving can be safely and easily done without the worry and trouble that usually goes with it.

I want to thank you for your service and with kindest regards, remain,

Yours very truly,

ORGANIZATIONS AID TRAVELERS STRANDED HERE

New records of aiding travelers in distress who have become stranded temporarily in Atlanta have been made by the Salvation Army and the Travelers' Aid in the last few weeks, it was announced Saturday. Both organizations receive support from the community chest of Atlanta and they have both been unusually active in providing relief for travelers.

Recently large numbers of northern people who were unsuccessful in Florida business ventures have come to Atlanta either by train or by motor and have been forced to remain here because of lack of funds to complete the journey to their homes in the north, it was said.

The Salvation Army has taken care of many families, provided food and lodging for them until relief could be obtained by the families from relatives or friends, officials said.

The work of these organizations, both of which receive support from the chest, also has aided the employment situation in Atlanta, it was said.

WATER WAGON FIRE DOES BIG DAMAGE

A municipal water wagon was badly damaged by fire early Saturday morning at Grant street and Glenwood avenue.

T. R. Woodward, driver of the wagon, was at the rear replenishing the water supply when a passerby called his attention to a blaze at the front of the big truck.

The city fire department was summoned and the blaze was extinguished by the use of chemicals.

The cause of the fire was a short circuit in the pump motor, it was stated in the report.

150,000 PEOPLE Watched Speeding Racers, and Marveled .....

IT WAS a great spectacle, that Annual Memorial Day race at the Indianapolis Speedway. Vast crowds watched those low, specially-built cars roar around that great track, lap after lap, with throttle wide open—and marveled that cars could keep going so long at such furious speed. The race lasted 400 miles. The winning car averaged a fraction better than 94 miles an hour. That was fast traveling, to be sure, and real endurance—

Yet....

JUST contrast the showing made by those specially-designed, specially-built, professionally-driven racing cars with the speed and endurance records held by Chandler and Cleveland Sixes.

A Chandler roadster with top and windshield removed ran 1000 miles around the speedway at Culver City, in 689 minutes—an average of 86.9 miles an hour. Think of it! Not 400 miles, but 1000 miles! Not a racing car—a Chandler! Two and a half times the distance of the Indianapolis Race, and only a difference of about 8 miles an hour in average speed.

Another time at Culver City, a Cleveland Six maintained an average speed of better than 80 miles an hour for 1000 miles—covering the distance in 745 minutes—the fastest 1000 miles ever run by an automobile without once stopping the motor!

These and many other equally important records held by Chandler and Cleveland clearly reveal the remarkable power and stamina these Sixes possess—and prove better than anything else the kind of quality built into these cars.

Chandler and Cleveland both have high-pressure motor lubrication—and what's more, both have the great "One Shot" System of centralized chassis lubrication.

For sheer beauty, rare comfort, big value and championship performance, all together, the new Chandler and the new Cleveland are simply without rivals in their respective price classes.

See these cars. Name your own tests. Do your own testing. We'll leave everything to your own judgment.

ZIMMER BUYS MOUNTAIN INN

Will V. Zimmer, superintendent of the Druid Hills Golf club, and one of the best known hotel operators in the United States, has purchased the Mountain inn at Dahlonega, Ga., from Dr. Craig R. Arnold, former legislative representative from Lumpkin county, it was announced Saturday afternoon.

Mr. Zimmer has been connected with hotel operations in practically every large city in the United States either directly or indirectly and has been connected with various hotels and clubs in the city of Atlanta for several years. He was for many years connected with the Aragon hotel and was said to be one of the organizers of the Atlanta Hotel Men's association.

According to an announcement from Dr. Arnold, it was an outright purchase, but the amount of the consideration was not made public.

Dr. Arnold, one of Georgia's best known civic and political leaders, has owned the famous Mountain inn hotel, unique in the southern states, for the past 15 years. During that time the mountain summer resort has prospered in leaps and bounds. Due to several other interests in the state and principally in Atlanta, Dr. Arnold was forced to give the majority of his time elsewhere and it was for that reason that he parted with the famous Dahlonega hotel.

Extensive new developments will be made at Mountain inn, Mr. Zimmer announced. Developments will include a large concrete swimming pool, an addition to the present quarters, hot, cold and turkish baths, golf course, tennis courts and many other improvements.

GET YOURSELF A BRAND NEW LIVER

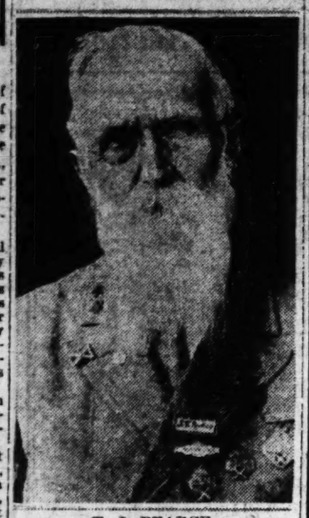

How Dodson's Liver Tone Makes You Feel the Old Liver is Born Again.

Just off the slant [illegible] Piedmont where it rolls away into the foot-hills of South Georgia, Bud Evans makes a good stand of cotton. A year ago he was too sick to even follow [illegible]. His right side seemed hard, [illegible] liver had turned to stone; he [illegible] all the time; couldn't hold up his head for the pain; calomel just turned him inside out. You couldn't imagine anyone sicker than Bud Evans. It just happened that an egg buyer dropped in on him one day and says: "What you need, Bud, is a dose of Dodson's Liver Tone—your liver is baked and full up so it doesn't work." And so Bud got a bottle at the town drug store for a few cents. The very first night it loosened up so much sour bile and fermenting food that the swelling went down, his whole system righted itself and he was a new man entirely before noon.

There is no question but that Dodson's Liver Tone will do more for bilious people than anything else ever known. It works easily and smoothly, without gripe or distress, and cleans out all the sour bile and sickening stuff that gives you headache, nausea, vomiting, bilious fever and all the other distresses due to obstinate constipation.

If one bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone and it doesn't make you feel like you had traded your old, worn-out liver for a new one full of pep, go to the druggist and he will refund the price.—(Adv.)

CONFEDERATE HERO VISITS NATIVE STATE

T. J. PEARCE,

who, after attending the recent Confederate reunion at Birmingham, came on to Georgia and visited his native state, he having been born near Cedartown. He served throughout the war between the states and is well versed in the history of the struggle. He is such an admirer of Robert E. Lee that he had his Confederate uniform fashioned after the one worn by the idol of the south. Mr. Pearce has been signally honored as his numerous medals indicate.

OVERSEAS LEAGUE MAKES HIT HERE

Work of the Atlanta Women's Overseas Service league, under guidance of Miss Helen Douglas, during sessions of the Disabled Vetrans of the World War last week, was an outstanding feature of the big convention.

Tuesday and Wednesday, two rainy days, the league members did much to keep a cheerful atmosphere at the Ansly hotel, headquarters for the disabled men. In the central part of the lobby these two days more than 4,000 soft drinks were served along with 15,000 cigarettes. Seventy crates of peaches, sent here by the people of Fort Valley, were given away to the visiting men.

Members of the local unit served behind the counter and more than once the wrecked veterans gave cheers to the loyal women. Miss Helen Muse and Mrs. Perrin Nicholson, Jr., aided in the work.

Tuesday half a dozen girls, headed by Miss Nancy Downing, played mandolins and guitars to enliven the boys.

Officers of the league stated that the wrong impression had gone out, many believing that the canteen was run by some of the veterans' auxiliaries.

HIGHWAY REROUTING DEPENDS ON RICHMOND

State highway commission will approve a rerouting of a highway between Augusta and Waynesboro by way of Hephzibah instead of the so-called "McBean route" if Richmond county will reimburse the federal aid fund for the amount heretofore expended out of that fund on the McBean route, according to a statement Saturday by the commission. The commission also demanded that the counties of Burke and Richmond furnish the state with a deed for a right of way sixty feet wide for the entire length of the proposed road. Both stipulations were made subject to the approval of the bureau of public roads at Washington, D. C.

The Diary of a Young Lady of Fashion 1926

The Diary of a Young Lady of Fashion, 1764-65, by Cleone Knox, edited by her kinsman, Alexander Blacker Kerr, is, according to critics, the literary sensation of the season.

The Diary of a Young Lady of Fashion, 1926, is edited by Davison-Paxon-Stokes Co., and is the fashionable sensation of the season! More—it is a reliable and vastly interesting fact!

"'Tis Vastly Pretty"

this delicately tinted frock of pink georgette, with soft French blue insert making the waistline appear a bit higher than usual. A fetching blue satin bow gives a finishing touch, and pink and blue maline fluffs out in a manner most intriguing! How Cleone would rhapsodize over it! How vastly becoming it will be to the Modern Miss!

$29.75

"I Was Greatly Catched---"

and who would not be, by a taffeta umbrella, of delightful plaid design, showing pin stripe of red in the border, a hand painted handle, and cunning wrist cord!

$9.94

"For the Elegant Form---"

that all maidens aspire to possess! And Cleone would blithely have discarded her monstrous hoops could she have worn this smart linen knicker suit that "shows off the figure to such an advantage!" But Cleone was less fortunate than Miss 1926. That modern maid will go hiking and camping and riding in this chic costume with swagger tuxedo coat, and will just adore it!

$4.94

White Broadcloth Blouse, $2.94

"Richly Laced---"

Cleone's petticoat was richly lace trimmed—as is this slim, crepe de chine slip. But there the resemblance stops! And as for bloomers—! She would have blushed at the idea. But secretly, we think she might have admired them lavishly! Especially if they were of heavy glove silk.

Slip, $6.95
Bloomers, $2.50

...low Cleone, bewitching little heroine, "was greatly catched by an Impudent Young Man with black, insolent eyes." And in order to capture his errant fancy you may be sure that the young Miss adorned her person with every sort of finery of the day!

Judge for yourself whether the delightful fashions of 1926, displayed by Davison-Paxon-Stokes Co., are as "monstrously becoming" to a modern maid as were Cleone's "mountainous head-dress, hoops, mouse colored silk shoes, and plum colored brocades!"

"Monstrous Polka Dots!"

are all the go now, for frothy, filmy afternoon frocks. Cleone of 1926 describes her favorite as big, King's blue dots on white ground. The blouse, of georgette—the skirt, accordian pleated in front and plain behind, of white georgette with King's blue stripes and flock dots. Narrow bands of moire ribbon lend a dash of originality.

$27.75

"All the Rage"-----

are Raffia Bags! Bordered with bright blue, red, green, and other gay colors, and lined to match the border. Intriguing little metal ornaments adorn them.

$2.94

"Vivacious and Capricious Fad---"

is the craze for charming sports frocks of tub silk "pour le sport!" Miss 1764 never had so fetching a garment, cut with vestee blouse, and kick pleat skirt. But Miss 1926 will find it an invaluable for tennis, boating or golf. Pastel shades.

$14.74

"A Rougish Suit"-----

and one that is vastly becoming! Poor Cleone went to Bath "clad in a Bonnet, Jacket and Petticoat—a costume that does not become me!" While Miss 1926 puts on a smart All-Wool Bradley suit of blue and white, short, chic, and charming! And carries a gay cretonne beach coat, to keep her white skin from sunburn.

Swimming Suit $7.94
Beach Coat $5.94

"Sumptuous!"

Yes, richness! All-silk hose were not necessities for Cleone. Demure ankles peeping out from billowing skirts form quite a contrast to the all-silk, sheer chiffon hose displayed at great length with the present mode of short skirts! Here are "sumptuous" silken hose—in soft Summer shades.

CANNON OF KENNESAW AWAKE TO JOE BROWN'S PEN

Former Governor Depicts Armies' Murderous Charges On Marietta's Mountains

Bloodiest Battle of War Routs Rosecrans' Troops. — General Grant With Profanity Takes Personal Command of eFderals. — Then Kennesaw Becomes Furious Vesuvius and Men, Immortal in Valor, Perform Feats of Everlasting Glory.

BY JOSEPH M. BROWN.

The army operations from the northwest corner of Georgia along the line of the Western & Atlantic railroad, between Chattanooga and Atlanta, during the great "war between the states," began early in September, 1863, after General Rosecrans, by his movements through the mountain passes southwest of Chattanooga into the Chickamauga valley, had forced the evacuation of that point by the Confederate army under General Bragg.

Rosecrans' army having entered Georgia through several mountain passes was temporarily disjointed, hence it was to Bragg's supreme interest to strike its fragments before they could consolidate. After several days of maneuvering, during which there were occasionally severe skirmishes or minor engagements between the two armies wherever contact was attained, the great battle of Chickamauga began September 18, 1863. This was along the line of West Chickamauga creek, some seven miles west from Ringgold and Graysville, stations on the railroad.

The Confederate army, that day numbering 33,583 men, with divisions connected, was formed on the east side of the creek, while the units of the Federal army, which totaled 64,392 men, were but short distances apart, and were generally either on the west side of the creek or less than a day's march from it.

The Confederate division early in the day made a concerted dash across the bridges or through the fords in their front and by noon, although at several of the crossings fierce resistance was encountered, yet by about noon Bragg's entire army was on the west side of the creek and the battle was "on."

On the next day Longstreet's corps, arriving from Virginia, debarked from the trains and threw themselves into the battle, increasing Bragg's numbers to 47,321 men.

Bloodiest of the War.

This battle, the bloodiest of the war, continued for three days and ended generally in the rout of Rosecrans' army. The stand of Thomas, re-enforced by Steadman, at Snodgrass Hill, west of Dyer's Mill, was all that saved the Federal army from destruction. The Confederates captured 8,000 prisoners, 51 cannon, 15,000 small arms and an enormous amount of army stores, etc., and, pursuing the fugitives, occupied Missionary Ridge and Lookout mountain, just south of Chattanooga.

They also secured possession of the Nashville and Chattanooga railroad at Bridgeport and other points, thus breaking Rosecrans' communications by rail with Nashville, his base of supplies, and forcing the Federal army to receive its army stores, provisions, etc., by wagon roads 60 miles in length across the mountains. Chattanooga was therefore practically besieged by the Confederates and great suffering ensued among the Union soldiers.

Thus matters continued until the latter part of November, when General Grant, with large re-enforcements, arrived and took personal command of the Federal army. Bragg strangely weakened himself by detaching Longstreet's corps and other portions of his army and sending to Knoxville for the purpose of reducing that point and repossessing east Tennessee.

November 24, 1863, began the battles around Chattanooga. "Fighting Joe Hooker," with 9,100 men, assaulted Lookout mountain, which was defended by General Walthall, with 3,000 men. The attack was made while a thick mist enveloped the mountain, rendering it impossible for the Confederates to accurately determine the Federal movements; hence Hooker, literally in the midst of the clouds, succeeded in scaling the craggy heights, and after a struggle, which extended into the night, drove the Confederates off.

The next day (November 25) Grant's army made a general attack upon the Confederate position on Missionary Ridge. The assault on Hardee's corps on the Confederate right was repulsed several times; but late in the afternoon the Confederate left center was broken and soon the entire line, except the right, gave way, and a disastrous defeat for the Confederates was the result.

General E. C. Walthall, while United States senator from Mississippi between 1880 and 1890, told the writer of this article that, anticipating the danger that the fire of the federal battery on Moccasin Point, north of Lookout mountain, might cut off the retreat of his men in case they must retire, he had had them during the nights to dig a trench running from the northern end of the mountain around to the east. This trench was covered with logs and the logs with dirt and brush, concealing it and making a sort of tunnel.

The apprehended contingency happened and the greater part of Walthall's men escaped through the tunnel, and from its eastern end hurried down to Missionary Ridge, and joined the main army which was then being assaulted by Grant's army. They were shifted to the right wing, and when the center and east wings gave way it was Walthall's brigade which General Cheatham ordered to form across the top of the ridge and stop the federals from progress toward the east. Thus, by their help Cheatham's and Cleburne's divisions which had already crushed every assault made upon them, stood without a break and did not retire till after nightfall, when they marched back without the loss of a single gun, and the second morning thereafter Cleburne, with his division, at Ringgold, gave "Fighting Joe Hooker" a disastrous defeat which no doubt Hooker and all of his men who survived remembered during the remainder of their lives.

While history has not so recorded it, yet some of General Grant's staff officers have stated that Grant's orders to Hooker were that he merely make a strong demonstration against the mountain top but to go not to the top, for if they gained it Walthall's brigade would retreat down the eastern slope and join the main army and thus strengthen its resistance to the grand assault being made upon it. And that was exactly what happened, as shown above.

Grant Grows Profane.

It is stated that when General Grant, through a spy glass, saw the United States flag flying from Lookout Point, with the battle smoke dissipated, he directed toward Hooker some more lurid profanity than George Washington is said to have expended on General Charles Lee at the Battle of Monmouth, because Lee, unlike Hooker, retreated.

In the battle of Missionary Ridge Grant had about 65,000 men, Bragg about 35,000. The Confederates lost about 6,000 prisoners, 3,100 men killed and wounded and about 40 cannon. The Federal army's loss was 5,286 killed and wounded and 337 missing.

General Grant shortly afterwards went to Virginia to assume command of the Army of the Potomac, leaving General Thomas in temporary command of the army at Chattanooga.

During February, 1864, the Federals made a movement in heavy force toward Dalton, with the intention of capturing that point; but after severe fighting at Tunnel Hill, and at Mill Creek Gap and Dug Gap, which cross Rocky Face Ridge, retired again to Chattanooga.

In March General William T. Sherman was appointed commander of the consolidated Federal armies of the Cumberland, Tennessee and Ohio, at Chattanooga. General Joseph E. Johnston had previously been appointed to the command of the Confederate army at Dalton, succeding General Hardee, who had temporarily commanded it after General Bragg was relieved.

Early in May, 1864, began the great Atlanta campaign, with fighting at Tunnel Hill, Mill Creek Gap, Dug Gap and at other points along Rocky Face Ridge near Dalton.

At the date of the opening of this great campaign Sherman had a total force of 98,797 men and 254 cannon, divided as follows: Army of the Cumberland under Major General Thomas, 60,773 men and 130 field guns; Army of the Tennessee, under Major General McPherson, 24,465 men and 96 guns; Army of the Ohio, under Major General Schofield, 13,559 men and 28 guns. These were further subdivided into 88,188 infantry, 4,400 artillerymen and 6,149 cavalrymen. Within a few days Sherman was reinforced by about 14,000 cavalry which swelled his total effective force to 112,819 men.

Johnston had 42,856 men and 120 cannon, the men being divided as follows: Infantry 37,652, artillerists 2,812 and cavalry 2,392. He says of his cannon, however, that only about one-half were effective for service because of the bad condition of the horses by reason of scarcity of food during the winter. All the foregoing figures are official.

Added to these were the reinforcements which the two armies received during the campaign, viz: By Sherman, Blair's corps, 9,000 men at Acworth, June 8th, besides "new regiments and furloughed men" not enumerated; by Johnston, Canty's division of 3,000 at Resaca, May 9th, Loring's of 5,000 at the same place, May 11th, and French's of 4,000 at Cassville, on May 18th—these three comprising Polk's corps—also Martin's division of cavalry, 3,500, May 9th, Jackson's division of cavalry, 3,900, at Adairsville, May 17th, and Quartes' brigade, 2,200, at New Hope church, May 26th.

While fighting around Kennesaw mountain, General Johnston also received reinforcements of over 3,000 Georgia militia, which Governor Joseph E. Brown, the "war governor" of Georgia, placed at his disposal.

During the entire campaign Governor Brown very zealously and energetically seconded General Johnston in every attempt to check and repel Sherman's invasion of the state.

The highest number of men which Johnston had at any time "present for duty" was 59,248, at Kennesaw mountain.

It can be stated with absolute truth that every day from May 1, 1864, at Dalton, to July 18th, the same year, Sherman had present and ready for duty, at least two men to where Johnston had one. His artillery was more than double and his artillery ammunition probably ten or twenty times as great as was Johnston's.

Unable to dislodge Johnston from Dalton by direct assault, Sherman sent McPherson through Snake Creek Gap, opposite Resaca, to capture that point and break Johnston's communications with Atlanta. McPherson with 23,000 men was repulsed by two small brigades of Confederates, and fell back. Sherman then moved his whole army through Snake Creek Gap, forcing the evacuation of Dalton by Johnston, who retired to Resaca.

Next ensued the bloody three days' battle at Resaca, which ended by Sherman's sending a column southward and securing possession of Lay's (or Tanner's) ferry, which movement exposed Calhoun, a station on the railroad south of Resaca, to Federal occupation, and forced the evacuation of Resaca by Johnston.

The Confederates retreated to Cassville, having, however, a sharp combat with the pursuing Federals at Adairsville.

Hood's failure to obey Johnston's orders defeated the latter's plan for striking with his whole army one-half of Sherman's east of Kingston, the Federals in pressing the pursuit being divided and coming down two roads several miles apart.

After spirited and heavy cannonading and noisy musketry firing between the advanced lines of the two armies at Cassville, the Confederates abandoned their intention of having a general engagement at this position, and fell back south of the Etowah river, information being received that Sherman's forces were moving southwestward via Stilesboro and Euharlee.

Then began the New Hope church series of battles. There was desperate fighting in this vicinity for several days in May, which ended in the Federals flanking the Confederates out of Allatoona, and securing possession of that "natural fortress," as General Sherman termed it, and which also enabled them to restore railroad communications with Chattanooga over the Western & Atlantic railroad.

Of the operations about New Hope church, General Sherman (Memoirs, Vol. II, p. 44) says: "This point, New Hope . . . from the bloody fighting there for the next week, was called by the soldiers 'Hell-Hole.' General Johnston quoted this extract in this writer one day, in Washington, during about the year 1886, and, with a tinge of sarcasm in his tone, added: 'And, yet, Mr. Davis said I wouldn't let the army fight!'"

Johnston retired from the New Hope region to a new position, his left wing resting on Lost mountain, his center on Pine mountain and his right on the ridges just northward of Kennesaw mountain. For about a month there was daily fighting in this vicinity. The Confederates planted batteries upon Kennesaw mountain, seven hundred feet above the surrounding hills.

While Sherman's superiority of numbers enabled him, by the extension of his lines to force a gradual and constant retrogression of Johnston's, yet he could do nothing which secured the dislodgement by force of the Confederates from their lofty perch on the twin crests of Kennesaw mountain, the citadel of north Georgia.

After these preliminary contest, which severely tested the bravery and endurance of both armies, on the 27th of June, 1864, occurred the great and famous battle of Kennesaw Mountain; which was probably the distinctive battle between Dalton and Atlanta, of the Atlanta campaign—a battle which will ever hold its position on the page of history as being one which conferred imperishable luster upon the valor of American soldiery—the attack being made with vigor, pluck and persistence, which in themselves eminently deserved success, and being met with such courage and fortitude as alone could have made the effort of their antagonists futile.

Of this memorable struggle, the two commanding generals summarize as follows:

"In the morning of the 27th, after a furious cannonade, the Federal army made a general assault upon the Confederate position,—which was received everywhere with firmness, and repelled with a loss to the assailants enormously disproportionate to that which they inflicted. At several points the characteristic fortitude of the northwestern soldiers held them under a close and destructive fire long after reasonable hope of success was gone. The attack upon Loring's corps was by the Army of Tennessee; that upon Hardee's by the Army of the Cumberland. The principal efforts of the enemy were directed against Loring's right and left brigades and the left of Hardee's corps. . . . They retired—unsuccessful—because they had encountered intrenched infantry unsurpassed by that of Napoleon's Old Guard, or that which followed Wellington into France out of Spain." (Johnston's Narrative, pp. 341, 343.)

Move to Assault.

"About 9 a. m. of the day appointed the troops moved to the assault, and all along our lines for ten miles a furious fire of artillery and musketry was kept up. At all points the enemy met us with determined courage and in great force. McPherson's attacking column fought up the face of the lesser Kennesaw, but could not reach the summit. About a mile to the right (just below the Dallas road) Thomas' assaulting column reached the parapet, where Brigadier General Harker was shot down, mortally wounded, and Brigadier General McCook (my old law partner) was desperately wounded, from the effects of which he afterwards died. By 11:30 the assault was in fact over, and had failed. We had not broken the rebel line at either point, but our assaulting columns held their ground within a few yards of the rebel trenches, and there covered themselves with parapet."—(Sherman's Memoirs, Vol. II, pp. 60, 61.)

The two points at which Sherman made supreme efforts to break the Confederate line were the hill which really constitutes the western end of Little Kennesaw, where the entrenchments turned southward, and the eminence now known as Cheatham's Hill, about three or four miles south of Kennesaw Mountain. His success at either point would have been disastrous to Johnston's army and to the Confederate cause.

It would be hard to attempt to go into details of this masterly combat without being betrayed into a requisition for very much more space.

The attempt upon the Confederate right, which lay east of Kennesaw Mountain, running across the Western and Atlantic railroad, and north of the present station, Elizabeth, to the hills, some hundreds of yards beyond, was by Logan's corps, formed in three lines, and supported by Blair and Dodge, with their respective corps, a portion of which fronted the mountain also, and made strong demostrations against it, accompanying them with heavy and constant firing. They first fell upon Nelson's (Twelfth Louisiana) regiment, which occupied a strong line of rifle-pits, six hundred yards in front of the main intrenchments. These held their ground, keeping up a hot fusilade, until the first Federal ranks had approached within twenty-five paces, and then hastily retired to the Confederate line of battle.

The Federal troops advanced steadily, and soon came within musket shot of Featherston's entire front. A destructive fire was here opened upon them from the intrenchments, which compelled a halt; but, taking position in the forest, amid the tangled undergrowth, they kept, in return, a furious fire upon the Confederates. The batteries upon the mountain, and those located along Featherston's lines, poured forth a terrific storm of shot and shell upon their front and flanks. For almost an hour they gamely held their position, unable to advance and reluctant to retreat; but, at length, having lost seven commanding officers of regiments and hundreds of men, some of them within thirty feet of the Confederates' principal works, Logan ordered his men to retire to the line of rifle-pits they had first captured.

During this same time an impetuous assault was made upon Wheeler's troops, and Quarles' brigade of Walthall's division in front of and upon the mountain, in the shelter of rifle-pits. A body of Federals charged into Quarles' rifle-pits, where most of them were killed or captured. Many of the Federals, also, were picked off by the Confederate skirmishers, firing from behind trees, rocks, etc., on the side of the mountain. These were scattered irregularly among the crags and forest growth below the Confederate breastworks; but high enough above the field to command a full view over it, and the Federal advance, which is said to have been made by a portion of Blair's corps.

French's Division Charges.

Against the lesser Kennesaw there was a heavy demonstration and hot fire maintained in front; and a very vigorous charge was made upon the western end of the mountain, which was held by French's division.

The attack upon Cockrell's Missouri brigade, which occupied the extreme west of the ridge, on French's left, was very determined and impetuous—the Federal advance driving in the skirmishers, and pressing resolutely forward till within about 20 paces of the Confederate line; but here it was met by a cool steadiness which checked and finally repulsed it. This attempt was principally by Howard's corps, under the cover of the concentration of about fifty field pieces, which, bursting forth from battery to battery, were bombarding the Confederate position with terrible fury. The assailing columns likewise advanced rapidly from the west, and dashed fiercely through the skirmishers on Walker's right, immediately south of the mountain; taking in reverse those on the right and left, while they were also being attacked in front. Within a few minutes about eighty of Walker's men, it is said, had been bayoneted or captured in their rifle-pits.

Walker's line was assaulted with great vigor; but here, in addition to the musketry fire from his front, the Federals were enfiladed by that of the Confederate batteries on Little Kennesaw, some of the guns of which General French had rolled back from facing north, and turned upon them. This tempest of bombshells, grape and canister, within a short time, drove them back, and relieved Walker from the attack.

An exciting episode of the battle here occurred when a shrapnel shot, with a smoking fuse, passed under the headlog, and fell among the men in the ditch. A stampede instantly commenced, in the midst of which a Georgia sergeant leaped forward, seized the projectile, and threw it out of the trenches, where the explosion did no harm.

But the most determined and powerful assault was made by Palmer's corps of the army of the Cumberland, with Hooker in reserve, and with such other support as could be spared, upon the intrenchments held by Cheatham's and Cleburne's divisions, which extended through the rolling country south of the mountain. The Federal troops, several lines deep, conscious of their very decided superiority in numbers, pressed forward, with bayonets glistening and banners waving and with wild cheers, through the forest, which was badly tangled with undergrowth, until they came almost to the Confederate fortifications.

Here an appalling fire was opened upon them from all along the works. By Cleburne's troops, particularly, they were permitted to approach within nearly twenty paces before a gun was fired. Then, there broke forth from beneath the headlogs a fearful sheet of flame and smoke, and, at one or two points, almost the entire Federal column was prostrated by the volley.

Succeeding this murderous sweep of death there arose from behind the intrenchments a wild and piercing sound. It was the "rebel yell." Often, ere this, had it been heard on the fields of strife; but never before had it smote the ears of those whom it now greeted with more daring defiance than in this minute of horror [illegible] above the roar of battle, clear and shrill, it rang out, and again and yet again was it re-echoed from the mountain crags back to the woody recesses of the plain.

Like an inspiration from the genii of ruin, it seemed to arouse those from whose throats it leaped forth, to more than mortal energy; and now, from ten thousand muskets and from a score of cannon there poured forth an incessant blaze, which scattered carnage and death for hundreds of yards around.

Bombardment Opens.

This storm of missiles from the earthworks in front was so destructive that further advance was impossible. The ground and the forest were torn up by musket balls, grape and canister, solid shot, and exploding bombs. From French's batteries on the crest of Kennesaw, also, a furious bombardment was directed upon them. So continuous and rapid was this that the mountain seemed literally on fire; and the murky clouds of smoke, enveloping its summit, and rising majestically toward the heavens, combined with the tumultuous roar from their midst, presented, in terrific grandeur, the veritable appearance of a volcanic eruption; while the air, above and around the assaulting columns, was obscured by the puffs of smoke from the bursting shells, which hurled their fragments in a thousand directions among the Federal ranks, or, screaming through the forest, tore whole trees to pieces, scattering the branches with swaths of destruction on every side.

The Federal troops, dreadfully scourged, lay down upon the ground, within range of the murderous musketry fire of their enemy, and sought all the shelter possible, in the meantime pouring back volley after volley in return; and finally intrenched themselves beneath this fearful tempest—it being safer to remain than to flee.

Once, under General Harker's leadership, they attempted to renew the assault; but, almost at the very parapet, Harker fell, mortally wounded, and the whole line was swept back before the awful iron hail which was poured into their faces. At one or two points the charging columns pressed forward to the very ditches before the breastworks, and some of their dead were found against the works themselves.

The fall of General Harker was greatly deplored by officers and men alike. Gallant, dashing and generous, he had conspicuously distinguished himself on every field of battle from Chickamauga to Kennesaw inclusive; and of all the field officers in the Federal army, was probably more admired for plucky courage, and more highly esteemed for genial, sociable personal traits, than any of his comrade leaders.

In the midst of the melee attending this last dash, a United States flag was planted on Cheatham's works. A Confederate captain instantly sprang to the top to gain possession of this. The Federal color-bearer faced him bravely, and a hand-to-hand struggle ensued between the two over the flag, which resulted in the Tennessean's being shot dead by his antagonist. But the next instant a dozen bullets fired from within the intrenchments, riddled the intrepid color-bearer, and he fell slain, with his hand tightly clasped around the staff of the banner he had defended so well; but which now became the trophy of the exultant Confederates.

Sergeant Saves Flag.

Near this same point a Confederate sergeant leaped over the works, seized the standard of the 27th Illinois regiment, wrested it from the bearer, and brought it triumphantly back with him. For this daring act General Hardee presented the flag to its captor.

Just after the repulse of the second desperate assault, the dry leaves, etc., in the forest, before the Confederate intrenchments, in Cleburne's front, were set on fire by the bombshells and gun-wadding, and began burning rapidly around the Federal wounded. This horrible scene was observed by the Confederates, who were ordered instantly to cease firing, and one of their commanders, Colonel W. H. Martin, of 3rd Arkansas regiment, called to the Federals, and stated that as an act of humanity, his men would suspend further battle until the assailants could carry off their wounded, who were in danger of being burnt alive. The offer was accepted, and the Federal wounded were rescued (by the hands of their own comrades and of Confederates, mingling as in fraternal accord), from the awful fate which threatened them. This almost sacred duty having been performed, an Illinois colonel—said to have been Colonel Kerr, of Rockford—drawing two pistols from his holster, held them with handles forward, toward Colonel Martin, with the words: "Accept these sir, with a soldier's compliments. If you fight a thousand other battles and win a thousand other victories you will never win another so nobly as you have this one." "May we never have another war," was the fervently spoken response as the gift was accepted. "Get back now," said one of the Confederate commanders, "for we are going to begin firing again." "Well, we'd rather get it from you than from any others in the world," shouted the Federals. Then, after mutual salutes, the combat was renewed by the two sides with the most determined zeal. (This incident has probably not a parallel in the history of warfare.)

In the meantime, along the entire line for miles, there was maintained between both armies a tremendous fire of artillery an musketry. From the crest of Kennesaw mountain, this is said to have presented an imposing panorama. General French says of it, "We sat there, perhaps an hour, enjoying a bird's-eye view of one of the most magnificent sights ever allotted to man—to look down upon an hundred and fifty thousand men arrayed in the strife of battle on the plain below. As the infantry closed in the blue smoke of the musket marked out our line for miles, while over it, rose in cumuli-like clouds, the white smoke of the artillery. Through the rifts of smoke, or, as it was wafted aside by the wind, we could see the assault made on Cheatham, and there the struggle was hard, and there it lasted longest. So many guns were trained on those by our side, and so incessant was the roar of cannon and the sharp explosion of shells, that naught else could be heard. * * * The battle, in its entirety, became a pageantry on a grand scale, and barren of results, because the attacking columns were too small in numbers, considering the character of the troops they knew they would encounter."

General Johnston Evacuates.

In this great struggle the Federal army numbered about or over 100,000 men, the Confederates had about 65,000 engaged; the Confederate loss, in killed, wounded and missing, was 808 men; that of the Federals has never been exactly reported, but it is conceded that it went up into the thousands.

Sherman's generals, after some three hours, withdrew their shattered battalions from nearly all the points of assault, and, for one time, there was a confessed failure of a great move in the campaign.

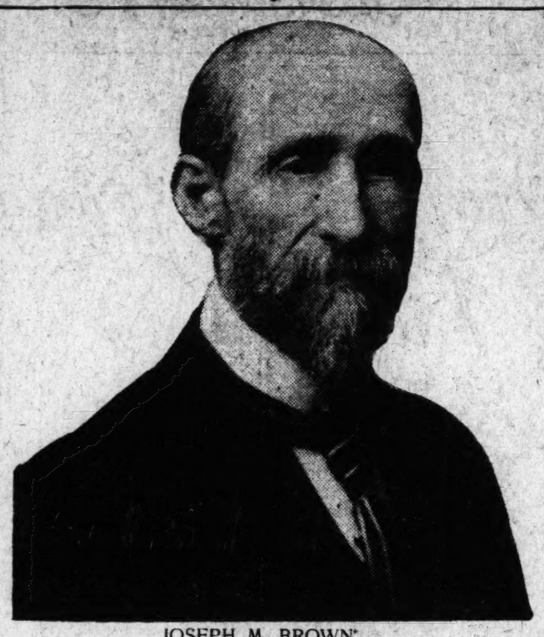

But wasting no time in idle regrets, the Federal commander ordered a strong movement down the valley of Olley's creek, toward the Chattahoochee.

June 29th, he wired General Halleck in reference to this: "I am accumulating stores that will enable me to cut loose from the railroad for a time and avoid the Kennesaw Hill, which gives the enemy too much advantage."

July 1st, he again wired him: "By this movement I think I can force Johnston to move his whole army out from Kennesaw to defend his railroad and the Chattahoochee, when I will (by the left flank) reach the railroad below Marietta."

Johnston, however, seeing that this movement towards the south would result in breaking his communications with Atlanta, evacuated Kennesaw Mountain and Marietta during the 1st and 2d of July, the last columns withdrawing in the night of the latter.

Special Trains Carry Pilgrims To Their Homes

Chicago, June 26.—(AP)—Most of the upward of 1,000,000 pilgrims to the 28th International Eucharistic congress tonight had departed for their homes. With them by special trains went more than half of the cardinals, and most of the archbishops and other church dignitaries.

Cardinal Bonzano, papal legate, will go to St. Louis to consecrate a new cathedral there early in the week, and with him will go Cardinal O'Donnell, of Ireland; Cardinal Hayes, of New York; Cardinal Piffl, of Austria, and Cardinal von Faulhaber, of Germany.

Cardinal O'Donnell spent today sightseeing and tomorrow will visit the University of Notre Dame. Cardinals von Faulhaber and Piffl, with Monsignor Seipel, former chancellor of Austria, went to Springfield today to participate in a German meeting there.

Cardinal Czernoch left today for Toledo and Cleveland.

Cardinals Dubois and Charost have gone to Montreal, Cardinal Reig y Casanova, of Spain, has gone east and Cardinals Dougherty, of Philadelphia, and O'Connell, of Boston, both have returned home.

Tomorrow Cardinal Bonzano will attend a mass of the Franciscans, near Hinsdale, a suburb.

CHINESE LEADERS PLAN TO ATTACK NATIONAL ARMIES

Pekin, June 26.—(AP)—Marshal Chang Tso-Lin, ruler of Manchuria, arrived here today for the long-deferred conference with Marshal Wu Pei-Fu, which is expected to result in a campaign to eliminate the national armies of the recently deposed government. The national armies are encamped at the edge of the Gobi desert, where they halted in their retreat from Pekin when the pursuit of the allied forces ceased.

Dispersal of the national armies is considered first on the program of Chang Tso-Lin and Wu Pei-Fu in the establishment of a new government in which they are the moving factors. Completion of the cabinet and recall of the parliament are secondary.

Marshall Wu Pie-Fu, dominant military power in several provinces, is reported on the way from Paotingfu for the conference with Chang Tso-Lin, formerly his adversary in battle.

AMBULANCE HITS AUTO EN ROUTE TO HOSPITAL

Several persons narrowly escaped serious injury early Saturday afternoon when the ambulance of Awtry and Lowndes, driven by J. L. Clarke, collided with an automobile at Edgewood avenue and Ivy street, according to police.

Miss Evelyn Ragen, of a local hotel, was a patient in the ambulance and was slightly shaken up by the impact. The names of those in the automobile could not be learned.

Mr. Clarke stopped the ambulance, just long enough to find that no one was injured in the collision, and continued to the hospital with Miss Ragen.

Hurt in Collision

C. E. Surratt, 22, of Almand park, was treated at Grady hospital, Saturday afternoon for a broken left thumb and a fractured ankle, said to have been received on the Hollywood road in a collision between a motorcycle he was riding and an automobile.

According to hospital attaches, the automobile was said to have been operated by E. P. Nunnally, who lives on the Bankhead highway.

Lillian Bedford, 3 years old, of 70 Forrest avenue, was treated at Grady hospital for a fractured ankle she received when struck by an automobile Saturday afternoon at Piedmont avenue, according to police.

The automobile that injured the child was driven by T. D. Harris, of 15 East Tenth street, who stopped his car, carried the injured girl to the hospital, and then reported the accident to police station. Mr. Harris stated that the child stepped from her mother's car and fell into the path of his car. No case was made by police.

Ewing asked a few days to determine whether "I should be egotistical enough to accept this at your hands." Dockweiler is in Washington. He will notify the party promptly whether or not he accepts.

Unknown Soldier Buried in Tribute To Indian Heroes

Crow Agency, Mont., June 26.—(AP)—Homage of the nation today was paid to the heroes of the Indian campaigns when the body of an unidentified soldier who lost his life with General George Armstrong Custer, was given all the honors of a United States military funeral after 50 years.

With him into the grave went the tomahawk of White Bull, a sub-chieftain of the Sioux under Gall, directing genius of the allied tribes that annihilated the command of Custer at the battle of the Little Big Horn, June 26, 1876—a symbol, the chief explained, of his desire to show that enmity between the red men and the white man was at an end.

The body of the unknown soldier was uncovered a few days ago by a road construction crew, the buttons of an army uniform and the bullet which ended his life being the only means of identification.

Preceded by a riderless horse, the casket containing the remains of the unknown trooper was borne to the site of the proposed monument at Carryowen as the seventh cavalry band played a funeral dirge. At the ceretery the regiment paid its final farewell and three volleys resounded through the concourse and the sound of taps died away. The funeral was distinguished by reason of the fact that in addition to active pallbearers from the seventh, eight members of Custer's seventh who were engaged in the battle, where the trooper was killed, accompanied the casket to the grave.

Following the funeral General E. S. Godfrey, a Custer veteran, as chairman of the Custer Memorial association, presided over the dedication of a great slab of granite which is to be a memorial to the unknown soldier.

As a concluding part of the three-day, semi-centennial observance of the battle of the Little Big Horn, General Godfrey late today visited that portion of the battlefield where troops under Majors Benteen and Reno made their stands and there placed a large cross which will mark the battlefield pending the erection of a proposed congressional memorial shaft.

COOLIDGE EXTENDS GREETINGS TO VETERANS.

Bismarck, N. D., June 26.—(AP)—Importance of the Custer memorial service to be held Sunday at Fort Lincoln has been recognized by President Coolidge in a letter to Chief Justice Christianson of the state supreme court.

"This last fight of the gallant general, who did so much to help in winning the west, has been regarded as one of the most tragic incidents in American history," wrote the president. "It is most appropriate that we pause at this time to pay our tribute to this officer, whose courage will always be a shining example to the members of our army and naval establishments.

"Will you be good enough to present my greetings and best wishes to those who will be gathered at the exercises."

TROUBLES OF 'FELIX' AND 'FIDO' AIRED IN FEDERAL COURT

Chicago, June 26.—(AP)—Suit involving a cartoon cat known as "Felix" and "Fido," an inanimate plaster of Paris feline manufactured by the C. F. Eckhart company, of Port Washington, Wis., has been filed in federal court here.

Federal Judge Adam C. Cliffe has issued a temporary injunction, it was disclosed today, against the distribution of the toy made in Wisconsin on application of Pat Sullivan, a New York cartoonist.

"Fido," says Sullivan's attorney, "is enough like 'Felix' an Animated cartoon actor, to be his twin, and is an infringement of the rights of the New York cartoonist." Hearing on a permanent injunction has been set for Friday.

FRAUD IS CHARGED IN G. O. P. PRIMARY

Chicago, June 26.—Charges of wholesale ballot box stuffing and a motion to throw out the entire republican primary vote in the 20th precinct today revived Chicago's most recent election scandal.

Attorneys for contesting candidates filed the motion to void the ward's ballots with County Judge Jarecki, who is in charge of the election returns. Hundreds of ballots, the counsel claims, were not even folded but were marked and placed directly in the envelopes which were sent to the city hall.

The new charges follow closely on the dismissal of Judge Daniel Trude's petition in the superior court for a recount. His charges that gunmen intimidated election clerks into fraudulently counting ballots resulted in the drawing of a special grand jury which is still investigating. But his petition for a recount was dismissed on the ground that it was out of the jurisdiction of the superior court and should have been filed in circuit court.

DEPOSITORS' RUN FORCES OFFICIALS TO STOP PAYMENT

St. Petersburg, Fla., June 26.—(AP) Following a determined run during the morning, started probably by the fact that a state bank examiner was here to examine the books, the People's bank stopped payment on checks here just after noon today.

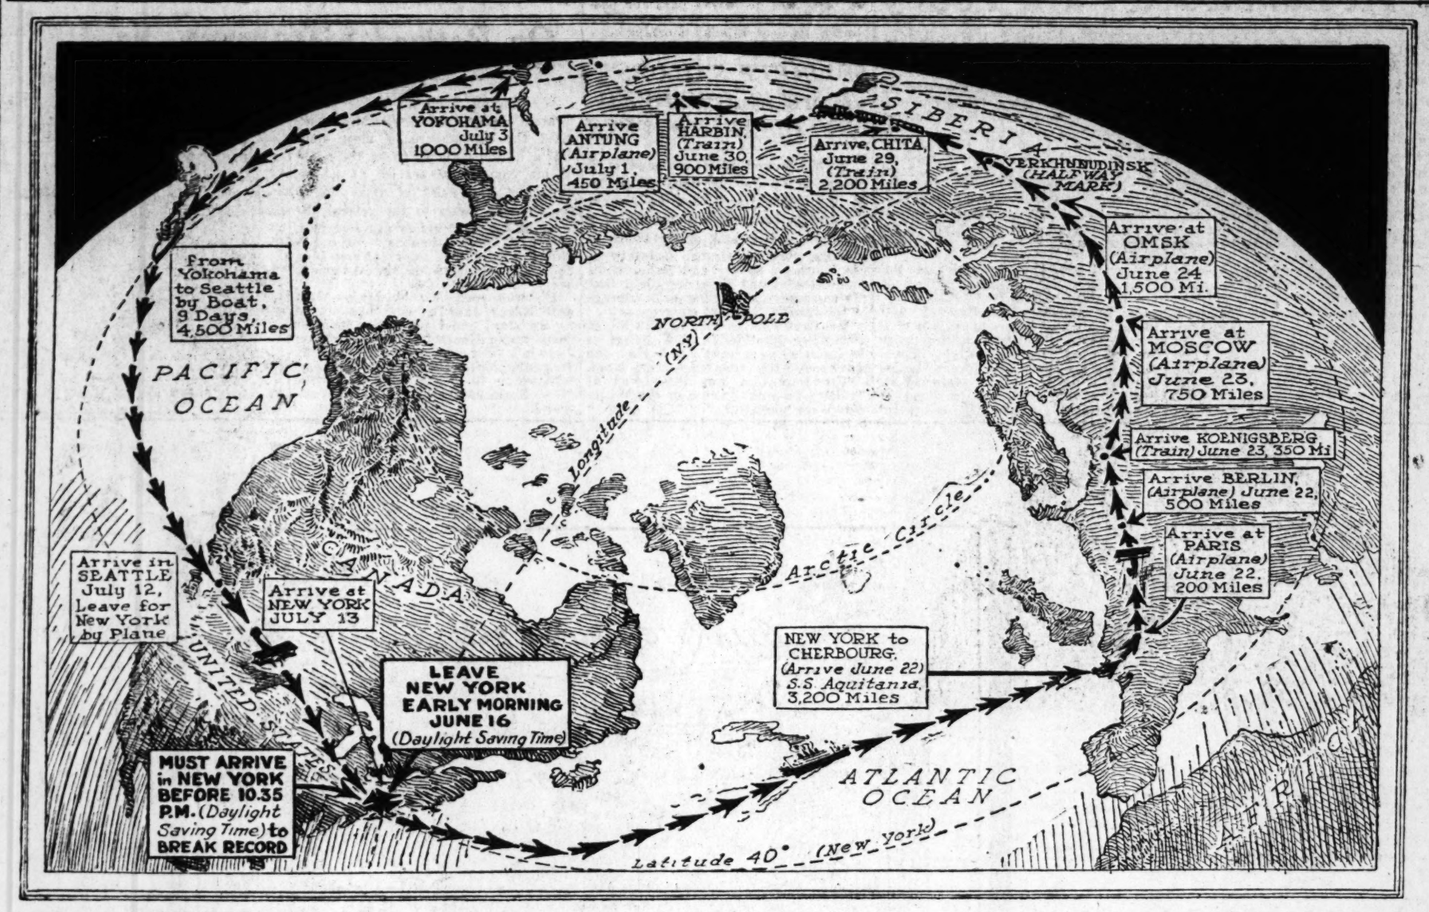

It was announced that the run had taken all cash on hand and that no more payments could be made. But it was stated that the bank would open again Monday morning and would pay all checks presented. It was stated to the crowd in the bank seeking to withdraw deposits that the bank is solvent and sound and would pay everybody in full. The doors then were closed.

A. F. Thomasson, head of the local clearing house association, said this afternoon that the other banks here are not affected and that the People's bank had gotten a credit of $75,000 in Tampa and had settled in full with the clearing house. Directors of the bank are to meet this afternoon to try to pull the institution out of difficulties that are regarded as temporary.

FOURTEEN PERSONS INJURED IN CRASH OF CHICAGO CARS

Chicago, June 26.—(AP)—Fourteen persons were injured, two seriously, today when a southbound electric car of the Chicago & Joliet railway loaded with employees of the Chicago Board of Education going to a picnic, jumped the tracks and sideswiped a northbound car at Willow Springs, a suburb. The conductor of one of the cars suffered internal injuries and one passenger suffered a fractured skull.

CAMPAIGN FUND WITNESS NAMED G. O. P. CHAIRMAN

Pittsburgh, June 26.—(AP)—Joseph G. Armstrong, Allegheny county commissioner, who last Tuesday told the senate campaign fund investigating committee he supported Senator Pepper in the May primary as the "choice of two evils," today by acclamation was named chairman of the county republican committee.

The organization meeting was marked by harmony, although previous to the gathering there had been some speculation as to the probable attitude toward the commissioner because of his testimony.

Memphis Plant Robbed of $4,295 Payroll Funds

Memphis, Tenn., June 26.—(AP)—Eight armed men entered the office of the Cole Manufacturing company at the company's plant in South Memphis, a manufacturing suburb, today, held a score of office employees at bay while they gathered up $4,295 of payroll funds and made off with the money.

The men were not masked.

Brandishing pistols as they entered the plant the men forced the office attendants, including several women, into a corner of a room, where they were held under cover of the weapons while a metal box containing the payroll funds was transferred from a cashier's vault to a waiting automobile. With the money in their possession the men backed from the building and escaped.

COUNCILMAN'S SON HAS LEG BROKEN IN LEAP INTO LAKE

Ellis B. Barrett, Jr., 13, of 238 Jones avenue, son of Councilman Ellis B. Barrett, of the fifth ward, was taken to Grady hospital Saturday afternoon with a broken leg following a narrow escape from drowning in Brickyard lake, two miles south of federal prison.

According to information given at the hospital, the boy, in company with his father, an uncle and Robert Barrett, 14, was running for a leap into the lake, when he stepped into a stump hole on the water's edge. His leg was broken just above the knee and only quick work on the part of Robert Barrett and his father prevented the boy from drowning as his head was submerged in water and he was rendered unconscious by the fall.

SMITH'S SECRET WIFE GIVEN DOWER RIGHTS

Baltimore, June 26.—(AP)—The estate of G. Edgar Smith, late treasurer of the Charles E. Whitehurst theater interests, was denied a new trial today in the awarding of dower rights to Mrs. Elsa Dugent-Smith, secret wife. A city court jury on June 16 found that Smith, known to his friends as a bachelor at the time of his death in 1925, had married Miss Dugent at Wilmington, Del., in 1912.

Attorneys for the estate have announced they will take the case to the court of appeals, where a similar case involving Claire Ulrich, actress, and the estate of the late Charles E. Whitehurst, Smith's employer, already is pending.

Miss Ulrich asserts she married Whitehurst secretly in New York. The Smith estate is estimated at more than $100,000 and the Whitehurst estate at $278,000.

ATLANTIC STOCK OVERSUBSCRIBED

Confidence of Atlanta business men in local business organizations was again demonstrated Saturday by an announcement of W. B. Baker, president of the Atlantic Ice & Coal company, that nearly three times the amount of stock announced for issue a month ago has been subscribed for.

At a meeting of the stockholders May 26, they authorized an issue of 5,300 shares of common stock and 12,934 shares of preferred stock. It was specified that this amount would be offered only to the present stockholders and the amount was divided proportionately among the stockholders.

The amount subscribed by Friday was 16,865 shares of common stock and 30,551 shares of preferred stock. Although this amount will not be issued because it has not been authorized by the stockholders, it is significantly indicative of the confidence in Atlanta business concerns, officials of the company declared.

The amount of stock authorized was $1,562,900 and the amount subscribed was $3,898,350, Mr. Baker announced. In a letter issued to all stockholders he expressed his appreciation of the prompt action in oversubscribing the stock and the confidence bestowed on the business.

The Atlantic Ice & Coal company has been organized for about 25 years and is one of the best known business concerns of its kind in the state. The regular dividends and bond interest amounting to $264,000 will be issued the first half of the fiscal year ending July 1, Mr. Baker said.

Police and detectives have been asked to aid in the search for Guy Perry, 15 years old, of 1309 Lee street, Oakland City, who has been missing since last Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. Mabel Perry, mother of the missing youth, told police that her son left home about 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon riding a bicycle, and had about $1.25 on his person. He graduated from Joe Brown Junior High school in June and already has signed to go to Boys' High school next September.

Young Perry is described as being about 5 feet high, weighs between 75 and 80 pounds, blue eyes and light brown hair.

Italy's Troubles In Abyssinia Blamed on French

Rome, June 26.—(AP)—Several Italian newspapres today make the accusation that the French press has been fomenting unfriendliness in Abyssinia towards Italy.

The papers comment bitterly on the recent criticism in Paris of the British and Italian negotiations concerning a definition of their spheres of economic interests in Abyssinia. "Where and how is cordial Franco-Italian cooperation possible?" asks Impero, while the Giornale D' Italia expresses the hope that the French government will not encourage the "unwise, irritating attempts of newspapers anxious to create suspicion and confusion where really everything is clear and pacific."

The negotiations, says Giornale D' Italia, are within the limits of the agreement of 1906 and are not intended to violate the political and economic rights or the sovereignty and independence of Abyssinia. The basis of the conversations is described as a definition of Great Britain's hydraulic rights on Lake Tzana and Italy's right to construct a railway through Abyssinia linking up Erythrea and Italian Somaliland.

Asserting that Italy has induced Great Britain to reduce its claims in Abyssinia, the newspaper declares that this shows that the "Italian government intends to defend the interests of the Abyssinian population even against England."

ACCUSED SLAYER SENTENCED TO DIE GIVEN REHEARING

Petition for a rehearing filed by the state of Georgia in the case of R. G. Cureton following a recent judgment of the supreme court granting a new trial to the defendant, was granted by the supreme court in an order issued Saturday.

Cureton was convicted in Talbot superior court of killing his brother, H. H. Cureton, and was sentenced to death in the electric chair. On appeal to the supreme court the judgment of the lower court was reversed and a new trial was granted.

Solicitor General Flournoy requested the attorney general to join him in asking for a rehearing in the case on the ground that the full and complete records in the case were not brought before the supreme court in its first consideration of the case.

Lawyers declared Saturday that the ruling granting a rehearing to the state is a new one.

The supreme court granted a new trial to Cureton on the ground that the trial judge erred in refusing to admit some testimony the defense sought to introduce.

WOMAN AS RULING SEX IS FORESEEN BY PHILOSOPHER

Future generations will see women the dominating factor of all walks of life, is the belief of Eugene Fersen, of Washington, D. C., scientist and philosopher of international fame. Mr. Fersen is in Atlanta to deliver a series of lectures which will begin at 11 o'clock this morning in the Pompeian room of the Biltmore hotel.

"Feminine power of intuition and ability to act by instinct is gradually dominating and prevailing over masculine power to reason and weigh cause and effect," Mr. Fersen declared. "The suitor of the future will be the woman. The head of the house of the future will be the female of the species."

Mr. Fersen is president of the Lightbearers, a scientific and educational organization, with headquarters in Washington. Mr. Fersen was a baron in Russia during the reign of the Czar and is a nephew of the famous Leo Tolstoi. He is now a naturalized citizen of the United States and is devoting his entire time to scientific work.

He will give two lectures today at the Biltmore hotel, at 11 o'clock this morning and at 8:30 o'clock tonight. He also will give lectures Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday night at 8:30 o'clock.

Crane, secretary of the Southern Soldier and Sailor home committee, stated Saturday night that the move gave higher hopes for passage of the bill by the next congress.

Mr. Crane stated that he had talked with more than 300 D. A. V. delegates during the past week, and that the move met with favor from every hand.

The resolution was introduced at Friday's business session by the Woodrow Wilson chapter, No. 1, D. A. V.

General Taylor, Army Engineer, On Retired List

Washington, June 26.—(AP)—Major General Harry Taylor, who has supervised the expenditure of more than half a billion dollars during the years of his consecutive service as assistant chief and chief of army engineers, passed today to the retired list after 42 years of active army service, which included combat commands during Philippine insurrection and chief of engineers of the American army in France.

He was succeeded by Major General Edgar Jadwin, who has served as assistant chief of the engineer corps under General Taylor. General Jadwin's post was taken over by Brigadier General Herbert Deakyne, who came to Washington from the New York engineering district command.

CONGRESS ASKED TO ABANDON 123 RIVER PROJECTS

Washington, June 26.—(AP)—To clear the record, Major General Taylor, the retiring chief of army engineers, today asked congress to formally authorize abandonment of 123 rivers and harbors projects, and curtailment of 16 others.

He explained that no protests had been received against this action and that all the projects had outlived their usefulness, most of them many years ago.

One of the projects, for improving the Black river in New York, dates back to 1836, and many of the others were started in the middle of the last century. Virtually all antedate 1900.

Brunswick's beaches are calling you

Pullmans on fast trains leave Atlanta every night and arrive in Brunswick the following morning. Or, by motor, it is an easy day's drive over excellent roads and through delightful country.

BRUNSWICK and its environs hold forth more attractions as a pleasure ground of aesthetic distinction—than any resort on the Continent.

Why else would the Vanderbilts—the Goulds—the Carnegies—and other prominent Americans whose wealth totals one-eighth of the world's—choose Jekyl Island for their summer and winter homes?

For here, in surroundings distinguished by an intriguing atmosphere of Old Romance . . . of Indian . . . Spanish . . . and Colonial influence—there is healthful recreation everywhere.

And why not?

There is the ocean—plenty of it. Miles of gleaming, white beaches upon which a friendly surf rolls endlessly.

For the sportsman—the woods and Salt Marshes of Glynn teem with water and game. Fish—myriads of them. Fish that dart through the cool waters of winding creeks—that tax the stoutness of the landing net a mile off shore.

Golf at the Brunswick Golf Club. Tennis at a score of courts, municipal and private, scattered throughout the Parks of the city.

Add to this legion of physical inducements—Brunswick's faultless climate. An average temperature during the summer months of 76 degrees. The winter average is 59. And a health record that designates Brunswick one of the most healthful communities in North America.

A magnificent, half-million dollar highway over the Salt Marshes of Glynn, now connects Brunswick with St. Simons Island . . . East Beach . . . Long Island Beach.

Here is wild, semi-tropical beauty. Beaches that rival those of a South Sea Island. Rare historical interest.

The virgin beauties of Brunswick are the handiwork of Nature. We have never found it necessary to manufacture scenery. And therefore, while land values are rising as the demand increases, they are still within reason.

Come to Brunswick and its coastal islands to build your summer or winter home.

Germany and Mexico Have Drastic Floods; Cairo Shaken by Quake

Hundreds of Lives Lost And Thousands of Dollars' Damage Done in Various Parts of World.

BY UNITED NEWS.

Earthquakes, floods and cyclonic storms afflicted various parts of the world yesterday.

Cairo, Egypt, reported an earthquake at about 9:50 last night, causing some damage. Following a heat wave, a strong quake was felt on the island of Malta in the Mediterranean at 7:40. In Italy, an undulatory tremor was felt in Naples, Avellino and Bari between 9 and 11 o'clock.

Floods around Leon, Mexico, receded, leaving hundreds of dead and passing on down the River Gomez, still overflowing the river banks.

The great River Elbe in Germany inundated 10,000 more acres of land and the River Oder, after temporary recession, began to rise again last night. Millions of dollars' damage is reported. The Vistula in Poland is rising and already has caused great crop damage, flooding villages and interrupting railroad service.

Other German rivers are threatening and high waters are reported through Europe from the Baltic to the Balkans. Early yesterday a dispatch from Berlin said eight persons had been killed by lightning in the preceding 24 hours.

Several houses were blown from their foundations in or near Scooba, Miss., in the afternoon, in a miniature tornado with hail and rain, which severely damaged crops and felled large trees, fences and wires. A wind and electrical storm swept through the vicinity of Auburn, N. Y. Barns were blown down, crops were damaged and several barns were set afire by lightning as the wind sometimes blew 68 miles an hour.

SHARP QUAKES FELT IN CAIRO AND MALTA.

London, June 26.—(AP)—A Cairo dispatch to the exchange telegraph reports a severe earthquake lasting more than a minute. The first shock came at 9:50 o'clock tonight.

Island of Malta, June 26.—(AP)—A sharp earthquake occurred here at 8:50 o'clock tonight. It was followed by a still sharper shock and rumblings. People in the streets were panic-stricken and rushed for the open spaces. So far as known, there were no casualties.

SEVERE STORM IN MASSACHUSETTS.

Springfield, Mass., June 26.—(AP)—One of the most severe storms of the season broke upon western Massachusetts early this afternoon. Rain, taking the form of a miniature cloudburst, fell upon this city and vicinity. In Ware it was reported that hailstones as big as marbles fell, causing slight damage to crops. No damage to the tobacco crop was reported.

HAIL STORM CAUSES DAMAGE.

Seneca Falls, N. Y., June 26.—(AP) Telephone and telegraph communication with the outside world was cut off tonight, highways were blocked by fallen trees and thousands of dollars of damage was done to crops, as the result of a wind, hail and rain storm that swept through western New York this afternoon.

Hailstones as large as marbles fell six inches deep at Free Bridge.

Hail killed 500 baby chicks at Waterloo.

FLOOD VICTIMS ORDERED BURIED.

Mexico City, June 26.—(AP)—Burial of the several hundred victims of the flood at Leon, Guanajuato state, in trenches and without identification if necessary, has been ordered by the authorities as a precaution against epidemic.

Difficult communications still make it impossible to obtain an accurate estimate of the casualties, the latest figures ranging all the way from 100 to 1,000. The maximum is given by El Universal's correspondent in the stricken zone. Large numbers of bodies are believed to be hidden under debris.

It is estimated that probably 15,000 or 20,000 persons are homeless and that the property damage may reach 30,000,000 pesos. Thus far shipments of food and relief supplies have been inadequate, chiefly because the railroad tracks of some of the main lines leading to Leon have been washed away. The El Universal correspondent failed to find any railroad routes open and was only able to reach the city by traveling on mule back and railroad hand cars. He found some of the streets of the city still submerged, with buildings crumbling under the water.

Special dispatches from Guanajuato report that clothing and other supplies are being assembled there to be sent to Leon by mule back and automobile. The success of these measures is not known yet because of the inundated conditions of the roads leading to the stricken city.

DEATH TOLL MAY REACH 1,300.

Nogales, Ariz., June 26.—(AP)—A dispatch to the Nogales Herald today estimated that 1,300 persons had lost their lives in the flood waters of the Santiago river which inundated the farming section around Leon, Guanajuato, Mexico.

The flood is receding after two weeks of torrential rains which sent the stream on a rampage, covering farm dwellings, crops and sections of the little town of Leon.

The message pictured a scene of desolation with long lines of homeless passing through improvised morgues in attempts to identify missing relatives, while churches, residences and public buildings which escaped damages in the flood had been thrown open for relief of the homeless.

Hunger is beginning to show its ravages and stores and warehouses have been opened to the demands of the stricken inhabitants, the message stated, while every precaution is being taken to prevent the outbreak of pestilence.

SENATOR CARAWAY BARES SLUSH FUND

cused he presented to the committee financial reports from the state anti-saloon leagues in New York, Ohio, New Jersey and Indiana, showing total collections from 1920 of $3,562,872 and total disbursements of $3,603,506.

Anti-Saloon League Figures.

The New York totals were $1,856,823 in receipts and $1,927,060 in expenditures: Ohio, $900,865 and $881,117; New Jersey, $412,390 and $407,874, and Indiana, $392,795 and $386,176. These gross sums included contributions to the national organization.

For the purpose of obtaining pertinent data from the books of the Anti-Salon league at Westerville, Ohio, the committee will send an accountant to that village Monday and will defer the further questioning of Wheeler until the audit has been completed.

Monday the senatorial investigators will turn back to the campaign on behalf of Governor Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, who was defeated for the senatorial nomination. To that end it has summoned George W. Woodruff, attorney general, and William B. Wright, deputy attorney general.

Active for Pinchot.

The committee has been informed that these officers were active for Pinchot and also that they were among the trustees for the $130,000 funds raised by the Women's Christian Temperance union of Pennsylvania for the enforcement of the new Armstrong-Snyder prohibition law in that state.

The charges involving the Illinois primary were presented by Senator Caraway in the midst of the consideration of the veterans' relief bill. The senator had been talking on another subject, when he announced that he wanted to discuss the Illinois contest.

He then read a statement setting forth that charges had been made that Senator McKinley had spent a million dollars and Smith had "distributed" twice that amount.

Enormous Contributions

Reading from a typewritten manuscript, Senator Caraway said:

"It is openly charged that being chairman of the utilities commission, the successful candidate received enormous contributions from the heads of the public utilities of the state; that Samuel Insull, either individually or through his utility organization, contributed over $500,000.

"It is said that contemporaneous with issuance of orders by the utilities commission affecting certain public utilities large contributions flowed into the Smith campaign war chest; that a utility deal involving about $20,000,000 of property drew from the interested bankers, E. H. Rollins & Sons, more than $100,000 into the hands of Allen Moore, Smith's campaign manager.

Asks Facts on Money.

"I want to know how much money was given to John Walker and Frank Farrington, the men who are said to have handled the labor vote in Illinois; I want to know how much they spent in maintaining the palatial headquarters in the Congress hotel in Chicago, with traveling representatives going out all over the state displaying great quantities of currency freely used to get votes.

"We want to know the truth concerning the operations of the Crowe-Barrett-Thompson-Small-Lundin-Smith combination to control Illinois politics.

"A man by the name of Dan Schuyler is said to have spent vast sums to collect votes in the so-called colored wards and foreign language groups in Chicago."

CHARGES OF CARAWAY ARE DECLARED "SILLY."

Decatur, Ill., June 26.—(By the Associated Press.)—Charges of Senator Caraway, of Arkansas, in the senate today that Frank L. Smith, republican candidate who defeated Senator McKinley had spent $2,000,000 in his campaign were characterized here as "absolutely silly" by Allen F. Moore, campaign manager for Smith. He also branded as "false," the statement of Senator Caraway that E. H. Rollins and Sons, bankers, had contributed $100,000 to the Smith campaign funds, coincidental with the issuance of orders from the Illinois commerce commission affecting a $20,000,000 public utilities deal.

"I know nothing whatever of such a deal," Mr. Moore said. "No such amount as $2,000,000 ever went through my hands or the hands of any others in the Smith campaign committee in the interests of Smith's candidacy.

"I was one of the heaviest contributors to the Smith campaign funds, but I gave no such amount as $500,000 as Senator Caraway has charged. The senator has placed his decimal point one space too far to the right." Mr. Moore said that Samuel Insull, Chicago utilities magnate, could speak for himself regarding contributions of $500,000 as charged by Senator Caraway.

"GROSS EXAGGERATION," SAYS McKINLEY MANAGER.

Chicago, June 26.—(AP)—Charges of Senator Caraway that Senator William B. McKinley spent $1,000,000 in his unsuccessful campaign for the republican senatorial nomination were termed "a gross exaggeration" by Andrew Russell, manager for Senator McKinley, tonight.

"Senator Caraway's charge that we spent $1,000,000 is gross exaggeration," he said. "Nothing like that amount was spent. If the senate wishes to investigate we gladly will submit books and figures to disprove the charges."

Colonel Frank L. Smith, successful republican nominee, and whose organization Senator Caraway said spent $2,000,000, is ill in a hospital here and could not be questioned.

Samuel Insull, public utilities head, who was mentioned by Senator Caraway as a heavy contributor to Colonel Smith's fund, could not be reached tonight.

ANDREWS' REQUEST RIDICULED BY HILL.

Washington, June 26.—(AP)—The request of General Andrews for $2,500,000 for squads to prevent beermaking and diversion of alcohol was ridiculed in the house today by Representative Hill, republican, Maryland, during consideration of the second deficiency bill, which proposes this appropriation.

Quoting the testimony of the dry chief before the appropriations committee that "ultimately we will get back on the basis where every man will make his own whisky in his own home for his own consumption," the Maryland member termed it an admission that this was the best the dry forces hoped to do.

Back Into Home

"One might have thought," he added, "that after all this time under prohibition there would be a cessation of demand for beer, but General Andrews estimates the annual consumption of this beverage at 100,000,000 gallons, and the diversion of alcohol to illicit sources at 15,000,000 gallons. He wants to stop that. But all he can do is to drive it back into the homes—he admits that."

Hill said the national drink in America had become "alcohol and water with some kind of flavor," and asked what Jefferson, Madison and Hamilton would have thought of a federal government that proposed organization of an "under-cover squad to spy" on state officials.

He engaged in a colloquy with Representative Denison, republican, Illinois, as to the advisability of the beer squad, Denison asking what else could be done when it was found that state officials in some sections conspire against the federal dry law.

"Under Cover Squad."

Hill in turn asked Denison if he knew of creation of a federal "under-cover squad" to enforce any other law, and the Illinois member said he did not.

"Here we have the federal government employing under cover agents to spy on officers of the 48 states," said Hill, "and the state may employ under cover agents to spy on federal officials. That's a pretty situation."

Representative La Guardia, progressive-socialist, New York, declared General Andrews did not want to stop importation of liquor to all ports in the country.

"He is trying to please the drys and is helping the wets," said La Guardia.

HOLDER SHOULD QUIT OFFICE, SAYS CARSWELL

the state highway department by State Auditor Sam J. Slate, Mr. Carswell said that the expense account of Mr. Holder for a recent trip to California showed that enough money was expended for "tips," that would buy license tags for several small trucks.

"After Cecil Neill withdrew from the race," Mr. Carswell said, "I was called upon by people from all sections of the state to enter the race for governor.

"I believe that everybody wants good roads, Mr. Holder says we should get them one way, but I believe in the speediest way and the people of the state should be allowed to vote and say whether they want a bond issue or not.

"If I am elected there will be no politics in the highway department, which is the main trouble right today. If this is eliminated the board can give satisfactory service and that is one thing that I will do. If we get that department out of politics we will have good roads.

"If we get that department out of politics we will have good roads.

"If I am elected the man that I appoint to the chairmanship of that board or any of the members will have to make an agreement with me that they will not seek any political office for 10 years. They must devote their time and energy to the betterment of that department and put politics out of their mind."

To Canvass State.

Mr. Carswell said that he intended carrying an active fight for his ideas to every county in the state.

Harry Strozier, city attorney of Macon, preceded Mr. Carswell with a short address.

George Langford, Toombs county, candidate for the public service commission, attended, as did Hap McWhorter of Oglethorpe, member of the legislature.

T. Rad Turner, Macon banker, acted as toastmaster.

The barbecue given by Mr. James is an annual affair for the peach season.

Mr. Holder and other members of the highway commission were invited to the barbecue but sent word that they were unable to attend.

Husband Is Held As Police Probe Death of Wife

St. Petersburg, Fla., June 26.—(AP) E. M. Elliott, millionaire developer, was arrested by police tonight and is being held for investigation in connection with the death of his wife, who died in a local hospital this evening following a fall in which she fractured her skull.

At an inquest held tonight two servants were questioned, and the coroner's jury adjourned until tomorrow.

Mrs. Elliott is said to have started to enter the rear door of her home in the exclusive North Shore section when she fell backwards striking her head against the concrete sidewalk.

Elliott has been prominent in national politics, having been connected with the republican national committee. He helped to organize the Harding front porch campaign in 1920.

Mrs. Elliott's mother resides in Chicago. She has two brothers, Fred G. Fortier, of Wild Rose, N. D., and James Fortier, also two sisters, Mrs. Tom Gettys, of Naniamo, B. C., and Mrs. F. R. Colbert, of St. Petersburg.

Elliott was born in Topeka, Kan. He was a dollar-a-year man during the war, being connected with various governmental departments in organization work.

Mrs. Elliott's attorney is said to have filed papers in the court at Clearwater Saturday seeking divorce from Elliott. The papers were never served, it is said.

THREE IN CONTEST TO SUCCEED LEE

mer state senator and former governor of the Georgia Kiwanis district, declared today he will be a candidate, although formal announcement of his qualification had not been received here Saturday night.

Others who have been mentioned in political gossip as possible candidates are Newt Morris, of Marietta; Claude Pittman, of Cartersville; Walter Shaw, of Lafayette, and Judge Thomas Harbin, of Calhoun.

In his announcement today Mr. Porter said that although he had considered entering the race for congress again this year he had refrained from announcing when the condition of Representative Lee's health indicated the latter might not be able to make an active campaign. Since Mr. Lee had withdrawn, however, he said, he again would seek the nomination.

Cedartown, Ga., June 26.—(Special.)—Honorable W. W. Mundy, of Cedartown, today announced as a candidate for congress from the seventh district to succeed Honorable Gordon Lee, who withdraws from the race for reelection because of ill health. Mr. Mundy has served as representative from Polk county and as state senator from the 38th district and was district governor of the Kiwanis clubs of Georgia.

As a member of the legislature he pressed the biennial session bill to passage. He is a prominent lawyer and successful business man, with many friends all over the district and state.

He had been urged to run for governor of Georgia and also for congress but had declined to enter the latter race because of his friendship for Mr. Lee.

ROME MAN INJURED AS LIVE WIRE IS PULLED FROM WALL

Rome, Ga., June 26.—(Special.)—Monroe Blalock is in a local hospital as the result of being severely shocked by coming in contact with 2,300 volts of electricity this afternoon. His condition is serious.

He had gone into the stockroom at the East Rome fire hall and reached up to turn on an electric light and received the full current of a 2,300-volt wire that had fallen across the wire in the street. He fell and pulled the wire out of the ceiling, and to that is attributed the fact that he was not killed.

His hands were severely burned.

Pastors' Code Of Ethics Bars Sermon Theft

New York, June 26.—(AP)—No "pirating" of other minister's sermons unless credit is given is one of the commandments proposed in a professional code of ethics for New York Presbyterian ministers.

The code, which was drafted by the New York Presbytery committee, will be submitted for approval at the fall meeting of the Presbytery of New York.

The code advises the ministers to keep physically fit, pay bills promptly, and take no sides in church quarrels.

Tragedy of Frances Brewster

DEATHS OF TWO CHUMS RECALLED

Is Third to Society Belles

BY BETTY VAN BENTHUYSEN.
(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)
(Copyright, 1926, for The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

New York, June 26.—St.ange, indeed, was the romance born at sea that served to bring death to the fair Frances Brewster, whose jealous husband shot her to death and then killed himself over a letter written to her by an elderly, sturdy mining engineer.

It came as the third tragedy to the three belles of Washington, D. C. In her early days, Frances Brewster had chummed and shared social honors of the capital with Margaret Elliot Harding, daughter of W. P. G. Harding, governor of the federal reserve board; and Anna Hamlin, likewise the daughter of an official of the nation's great banking system.

The three dashing girls held sway together at Washington. Death, in turn, cut down each of the three.

Margaret Harding killed herself.

Anna Hamlin died alone in Bermuda while her mother was hastening to reach her.

Frances Brewster—

But her death is now on everybody's lips as the reigning sensation of New York society.

This story deals with the third of the tragedies, how and when there came into the life of the beautiful young matron the man whose admiration carried with it the penalty of death.

There is now no mystery about Rad, the writer of the note that led to the murder and suicide. All the members of Mrs. Brewster's family know him and know him well.

They do not believe there existed the slightest reason for jealousy in the worship paid by him at the shrine of a woman whose sweet voice and charming manners held him captive.

It was under the moonlight, on a voyage from the Panama Canal Zone to New York last March that Rad floated into the life of Frances Brewster on the lilt of a Spanish love song—the same song that served as the accompaniment to her tragic death.

Mrs. Brewster had been ill. She had undergone an operation for appendicitis and her friend, Mrs. Samuel Sturgis, of St. Paul, Minn., wife of the American general commanding the zone at the time, thought a sea trip would benefit the young matron. Mrs. Brewster's sister, Mrs. Sherman Haight, and her husband, went along also, and seven weeks were spent at the canal.

Then came the return journey on one of the steamships of the United Fruit line. It was a typically happy party on a journey from the tropics. Mrs. Brewster was a musician. She sat on the deck under the soft rays of the moon and sang the while she accompanied herself on a ukulele.

Among those enthralled by her voice was a sturdy mining engineer—a man old enough to be her father—who had been bronzed under the suns of many campaigns in quest of gold. He had the frame and the power of a man of the wilds—the soul of a poet.

The same hand that might, on occasion, draw a Colt and make it speak a language the hostile could understand, knew also how to wander gently over the keys of a piano and to evoke the pleadings that make their way to the hearts of those who live in the world of poesy and song.

He came timidly into the foreground and asked if he might be permitted to accompany so charming a voice at the piano.

And thus—

Rad glided into the picture that was to have for its last touch the prostrate, dead body of the woman whose voice had lured him on the seas.

After this night, Rad became one of the party. He joined the little group of society folk and added his talents to the general entertainment. He was a man of polish, who had traveled over the world, seen much of men and cities, and knew how to unfold a tale that might strike the fancy of any woman.

When the ship came to port in New York, Rad was already a friend to the family. He dined frequently during his stay at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Haight. Strangely, Mrs. Brewster was not present at any of these dinners until the last one. This was in early April, just before Rad set his face again to the lone trail.

His letter to Mrs. Brewster,—

The spark that set off the dynamite of a husband's wrath,—had been in New York since June 4. It is possible she never even saw it; that Brewster intercepted the note and fore it up, then carried its shreds in his pocket until his rage could not longer be restrained.

He had been jealous from the time of their marriage, October 17, 1923. He was jealous of her friends among the women. He was jealous of the affection shown her by the 30 setter dogs in her kennel at the country home.

There had always been a close family friendship between the parents of Mrs. Brewster and those of her husband. None of them can understand how the lonely mining engineer, with his gray hair and poetic soul in adventurer's clothing, could possibly be the cause of the tragedy that has shocked eastern society.

Off in the wilds of Mexico, a man who has lived most of his life alone, will be amazed to learn his love letter had the effect of killing the flower that had so recently come into his life.

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

VOL. LIX., No. 14 — ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY MORNING, JUNE 27, 1926.

Atlanta's Welcome To 'King of Golf' Will Be Colorful

Special Train Will Take Delegation to New York To Greet Bobby Jones' Return.

GOLF ASSOCIATION SENDS GREETINGS

Jones, Winner of British Open Crown, and Watts Gunn Will Be Hailed in Rousing Fashion.

BY H. C. HAMILTON.

First steps towards greeting Bobby Jones in New York with a celebration rivaling any ever extended to any other plain citizen of the United States were taken at a luncheon Saturday of a committee which might be termed "the Bobby Jones Admiration society."

Every man present at the meeting instantly pledged himself to go to New York aboard the special train over the Southern railway and join in the welcome to be extended Bob, following his victory in the British open golf championship, and to Watts Gunn, the plucky youngster, also of Atlanta, returning on the Aquitania with Bob.

A committee of four men to arrange details of the trip was named. They are Thomas B. Paine, Sherwood Hurt, Scottt Hudson and Major John S. Cohen. This committee will meet at 11:30 o'clock this morning in the club building for conference.

Delegation Is Named.

Positive assurances have been received from the following that they will make the trip to New York: John A. Brice, A. B. Cates, J. W. Goldsmith, Jr., Chick Ridley, John Grant, Asa G. Candler, Jr., Henry Heins, Clark Howell, Jr., Robert F. Maddox, Thomas B. Paine, R. K. Rambo, F. A. Wilson-Lawrenson, John F. Cohen, Jerry Beam, Scott Hudson, Lowry Arnold, Dr. Leroy Childs, L. S. Jennings, R. R. Gresham, Al Doonan, Frank Adair, Sherwood Hurt, James L. Dickey, Milton Dargan, W. D. Hoffman, John K. Ottley, Dr. James P. Hinman, E. R. Black, Jerome Moore, P. D. Yeates, Tess Bradshaw and Dr. W. J. Blalock—31 in all.

Southern railway advises that the capacity of the special train which will carry the Atlanta party is limited to 125 persons and that reservations should be made as early as possible. Tess Bradshaw, named secretary and treasurer of the committee, said Saturday that he will be at the Athletic club Monday from 10 o'clock until late in the afternoon to receive applications for reservations. He can be reached there in person or by telephone at Walnut 7430.

A rate of $39.50 for the round trip has been made by the Southern railway for the special train, the return journey starting Sunday. For persons who wish to stay longer a limit of 15 days will be made and the price set at $48.50 for the round trip with stop-over privileges in Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington.

City Plans Gift.

Councilman C. G. Allen stated Saturday night that he would introduce a measure at Monday's session of city council asking appropriation of $500 with which to purchase a suitable gift for Bobby Jones upon his arrival in the city.

"The gift will not be from council, but from the citizens of Atlanta," Mr Allen explained, "and will be presented at some downtown point as a public testimonial of Atlanta's appreciation of her 'king of golfers.'"

Will Leave Wednesday.

The plan as now presented by the committee to all citizens of Atlanta is to leave here Wednesday afternoon, arriving in New York the following afternoon. The party will register at the same hotel—in all probability the Vanderbilt, since that is where Bob always stays when in the metropolis. The Aquitania sailed Saturday at noon from Southampton, which, barring very rough weather, will put the boat at her pier at the foot of Fourteenth street, Hudson river, between 1 p. m. and 7 p. m. Friday. There is some talk of chartering a boat in New York and to meet the Aquitania at Quarantine, there to take

'HER REGIMENT' TAKES ATLANTA'S STAGE TOMORROW

Victor Herbert's Tuneful Musical Comedy Is Second Production of Summer Season Here.

STAR OF "SALLY" RETURNS IN CAST

Lou Powers Again Will Be Seen as Jovial Comedian of Splendid Company.

Victor Herbert's tuneful musical comedy, "Her Regiment," with colorful costumes, sparkling comedy and elaborate stage settings, will be the second production of Atlanta's own comic opera company this week, opening its run Monday night at the Atlanta theater and continuing for eight performances. It promises to equal "The Chocolate Soldier" in popularity and to surpass it in artistic finish.

Vera Myers, star of two seasons in Ziegfeld's "Sally," will make her debut with the company in the leading role of Estelle, and the thousands of Atlantans who remember her singing and dancing and her charming personality in the traveling company will give her a big welcome. The directors of the Municipal Opera association feel that they had a great bit of luck in being able to engage Miss Myers for the summer.

Anne Yago to Sing.

Comedy will play a big part in "Her Regiment," with Lou Powers and Anne Yago furnishing most of it. Mr. Powers will be Blanquet, a French soldier-servant, fond of red wine and scared of the colonel and Lizette, his fiancee. Lizette, played by Miss Yago, keeps the tavern where the soldiers of the regiment gather for recreation.

Arthur Buckley, the leading tenor, will have the role made famous by Donald Bryan in the original company. He will have several beautiful duets with Miss Myers and a much better opportunity than was afforded him last week. Louis Templeman, the baritone, will play Eugene, a young Parisian, who has several fine songs.

Mary Lelia Patterson, the Georgia girl, will have a good part, as will Francis Tyler, the basso, who will be the colonel of "Her Regiment." William McLeod, a general favorite last season, will return to the cast to play Carabine, a French soldier.

Two Atlantans, members of the chorus, will have individual opportunity this week. They are Olga Lester, who will be Madame Guirriere, and Walter Herbert, as Sergeant Sabretache.

Chorus and Ballet Again.

The chorus and ballet, which were such an important part of "The Chocolate Soldier," will have a big share in this week's bill. Victor Herbert losed his choruses, and for "Her Regiment" he wrote a series of stirring martial airs for the soldiers and delightful music for the peasant girls. Lew Morton, the stage director, has arranged an exceptionally attractive dance number for his ballet of 12 Atlanta girls.

Performances of "Her Regiment" will be given every night this week, with matinees on Wednesday and Saturday. The Wednesday matinee will be at "bargain" prices, with the best seats at $1.

Seats for the third week, when "Naughty Marietta" will be given, will go on sale Thursday morning at the box office of the Atlanta theater.

FATHER DEMANDS TRIAL ON CHARGE OF GIRL'S MURDER

Seattle, Wash., June 26.—(AP)—Wallace Cloyes Gaines, father of Sylvia Howard Gaines, Smith college graduate, whose body was found beside Green lake here June 17, tonight issued a statement demanding that he be tried for his daughter's slaying, "if there be a scintilla of evidence against me." Miss Gaines had been strangled and beaten to death.

After a girl has been married about two weeks she discovers that if hubby wants something, or if an article is desired for the house it is up to her to do the buying.

UPSHAW DEMANDS DEMOCRATS RALLY TO DRY STANDARD

"Militant Program Will Win for Party — and Nothing Else Will," Declares Georgia Congressman.

Washington, June 26.—(AP)—An appeal to the democratic party to rally in the 1928 presidential election around a dry standard and to demand in a "ringing" pronouncement "strict observance and enforcement" of the eighteenth amendment was made in the house today by Representative Upshaw, Georgia.

Accusing President Coolidge of not taking a definite stand on the Ku Klux Klan [illegible] last [illegible] and attributing his own party's defeat to "too much Madison Square Garden," Mr. Upshaw said if the "democratic donkey ever expects to graze on the refreshing verdure of the white house lawn, he must not stop too long in the big 'wet pastures.'"

Dry Support Asked.

He urged the democrats in both platform and candidates to come out in support of the amendment, adding:

"This militant program will win for the democratic party—and nothing else will."

"Nay, nay, says the timorous democratic soul, with ears and eyes blinded by tom toms and liquor fumes from the great 'wet' metropolitan centers—we will lose New York, New Jersey, Rhode Island, Connecticut and Maryland.

"I answer without hesitation or equivocation that we want New York, but we want New York sober. We want New Jersey, but we want a state that does not glory in two United States senators, one a republican and the other a democrat, each vying with the other for the crown of greater 'wetness.' We want Maryland, but we want a state that does not glory in the fact it has never joined in supporting the eighteenth amendment.

"If the donkey stops too long in the big wet pasture just mentioned—some blind wet politician will load him down with beer kegs and wine bottles and some damp candidate will ride him into a brewery instead of the white house."

Upshaw's speech follows, in part:

Democratic Ideals.

"Thomas Jefferson would not have recognized the party he founded if he had looked through the lens of Madison Square Garden. And the American masses, likewise looking through that lens with Jefferson, failed in that recognition, and the governmental tragedy before High Heaven is the fact that the American people need the economic ideals of Jefferson enacted into law. 'EQUAL RIGHTS TO ALL—SPECIAL PRIVILEGES TO NONE.' You can't beat that as a practical program of economic legislation.

"And it is nothing less than the brazen robbery of the toiling masses—it is nothing less than the desperate despair of that great Jeffersonian truth which refuses, by legislation, to make the rich richer and the poor poorer, to see that great governmental truth shrouded and clouded in the fumes of beer kegs and liquor barrels. This is no pessimistic, puritanical dogma. It is the twice registered verdict of the American masses.

"What of the future—if any—of the democratic party? I answer in the paraphrase of what Adoniram Judson, the great missionary to Burma, wrote when his supporting friends back in America became impatient because conversions were so slow. Tediously translating the Bible

Light Opera Big Success, Records Show

Attendance Records Smashed by 'Chocolate Soldier,' Premiere of Season.

BY PAUL STEVENSON.

Beyond any doubt, without any qualification and with no reservations or evasion, the Atlanta light opera season is an assured and permanent success. The six great crowds which packed the Atlanta theater to capacity during the six nights of the week, and the two huge audiences at the two matinees demonstrated beyond question that people of Atlanta of all classes appreciate the wonderful shows now in the course of presentation. If any further assurance is needed that the light opera season is now a permanent institution, this will be found in the enthusiastic statements of Lewis Haase, general manager, and C. Howard Candler, president of the Municipal Opera association, the two directing heads of the organization.

Mr. Haase and Mr. Candler met in the office of the Atlanta theater Saturday afternoon and gazed at a crowd two blocks long clamoring for admission to the Saturday afternoon performance of "The Chocolate Soldier." They glanced into the big theater and saw every seat in the orchestra, balcony and gallery filled with an opera enthusiast. Looking over the record sheets of the week they saw that every performance of "The Chocolate Soldier" was given to a capacity audience. Then they began talking.

"This enthusiasm marks the turning point in the history of light opera here. It is now a permanent institution," Mr. Candler said.

"Words are inadequate to express

JURY DISAGREES IN HOOD'S TRIAL

Jurors Are Dismissed and No Date Has Been Set for Second Trial of Case.

Miami, Fla., June 26.—(AP)—After deliberating for nearly two hours, the jury trying the case of Luther Hood, 26, charged with first degree murder in connection with the death on May 21 near Homestead of Mrs. Ethel Wooten, of Atlanta, Ga., was unable to reach a verdict and was discharged tonight by Judge H. F. Atkinson. No date has been set for a retrial.

The jury informed Judge Atkinson that they were unable to reach a verdict after deliberating for an hour and twenty minutes, and they twenty-five minutes later reported to the court that they were in hopeless disagreement. Judge Atkinson then discharged the jury.

The entire afternoon was devoted to pleas by state and defense attorneys after Hood had taken the stand in his own behalf. He testified that he met Mrs. Wooten in front of a store in Princeton and that she asked him to take her for a ride. Along the road near Homestead the automobile stopped and she got out to pick flowers while he repaired the car, he said. He testified that she fell from the automobile when they resumed their return trip to her home. They were traveling at a high speed, he said. Her fall from the motor car was caused by a sudden swerve of the rough section of the road, he explained. On cross-examination he denied he pushed her or caused her to fall.

CALIFORNIA GIVES ROYAL WELCOME TO WOMAN PASTOR

Carpet of Roses Spread Before Mrs. Aimee McPherson as She Leaves Train in Los Angeles.

Los Angeles, Cal., June 26.—(AP)—Aimee Semple McPherson, evangelist, who dropped from sight at the beach May 18, to reappear in Douglas, Ariz., June 23, relating a story of abduction, torture and privation, came to the end of her homeward trail here today, surrounded by thousands of milling admirers. She read before her was a carpet of roses in fragrant contrast to the blistering sands of the Mexican desert, across which she said she fled from her abductors last Tuesday.

M. F. McCarthy, special agent of the Southern Pacific, in charge of a squad of guards at the station into which Mrs. McPherson's train pulled, said that arrangements to guard the little white clad, bronze-haired woman and the preparations made by her followers to greet her were more detailed and lavish than those which attended visits to Los Angeles of President Wilson, King Albert of Belgium, or former President Taft.

Tears of Joy.

Tears of joy stood in thousands of eyes, trickled down the wrinkled cheeks of old men and women whose religious fervor and tithes from their savings have helped the exponent of the "Four Square Gospel" to build the great circular Angelus temple from which she broadcasts the tenets of her faith.

From the throats of the younger of her followers poured a welling deluge of cheers and shouts, calls of welcome and cries of fervent loyalty. "Hosana" and "hallelujahs" echoed and reechoed and over the great assemblage there swept in an undertone from hundreds of lips of Angelus temple adherents a devout "praise the Lord."

Great throngs of curious as well as temple followers jammed the streets in every direction from the station. In these ranks there broke anew the controversy which has raged about the case since the day in May when Mrs. McPherson walked into the Santa Monica surf and her secretary, Miss Emma Schaelfer, and her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, announced that she had been drowned.

Surrounded by Guards.

The temple pastor, accompanied by her mother and two children, Roberta by her first husband, Robert Semple, now dead, and Rolf, the son of her second husband, Harold McPherson, from whom she is divorced, walked from her car and into the station lobby surrounded by eight bodyguards. These special officers rode with her from Douglas after reported threats of violence against her there.

Twelve little girls from Angelus temple preceded the party, scattering roses at the feet of their religious teacher.

The Angelus Temple band, white uniforms glistening in the summer sun, struck up a triumphant air as Mrs. McPherson appeared at the door of the station and faced the tremendous crowd.

Then the joyous procession formed and the evangelist was escorted by cheering thousands back to her temple. There she will take again the flower-draped chair kept vacant beside the pulpit since May 18.

Greets Followers by Radio.

Prior to her arrival here, Mrs. McPherson greeted her followers by radio, speaking over Station KNX, Los Angeles, by remote control from Colton, Cal., where her train stopped 15 minutes.

"It was bad enough to go through the ordeal without having your word

BEST CROPS GROWN IN YEARS REPORTED BY GEORGIA FARMERS

BOND COMMITTEES TO MAKE REPORTS ON EXPENDITURES

City's $8,000,000 Construction Program Expected To Be Outlined at Meeting Monday Afternoon.

ORDERS TO BE GIVEN FOR CERTIFICATES

William Candler Calls Conference To Hear First Recommendations By Five Contact Bodies.

Machinery to begin at once an $8,000,000 municipal construction program in accordance with provisions of the recent bond issue voted by citizens of Atlanta will be set in motion this week, it was learned Saturday.

William Candler, chairman of the bond commission, has called a meeting of the commission for 3 o'clock Monday afternoon at bond headquarters at the Biltmore hotel, and at this time contact committees representing the five projects contained in the bond authorization will make reports, engraving of the bonds will be authorized and first definite steps towards expending the funds for civic improvements are expected to be taken.

The meeting Monday is expected to be the most important and far-reaching session of the commission since its appointment by Mayor Walter A. Sims, as this is the first session since the suit against the bonds was dismissed.

First definite steps in the building program are to be outlined and other meetings to lay plans of expenditure will follow in close order, according to statements of officials.

A fund of $2,000,000 will be available this year, according to the ordinance under which the bonds were voted, and it is believed that preparations to begin at once work on several of the projects in anticipation of the sale of the bonds will be made.

B. Graham West, city comptroller and author of the West plan, under which the $8,000,000 bond issue was floated without an increase in taxes, stated Saturday that the program could begin at once in anticipation of the sale of the bonds without waiting for the sale.

City council at its next regular meeting will authorize sale of the $2,000,000. This action on the part of council is merely a matter of form as council already has expressed itself as being in favor of the bond issue and many of its members took the stump to assure passage of the issue.

Plans for Schools.

Beginning of a school building program to involve expenditure of $1,000,000, not later than August is contemplated by the board of education following settlement last week of litigation involving Atlanta's $8,000,000 municipal bond issue, it was announced Saturday by Dr. R. M. Eubanks, president of the board.

Plans for new school buildings will be ready, it is hoped, for presentation to the school board for ratification at its next meeting on July 13. Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of the Atlanta school system, who is now in Detroit on his vacation, wired Dr. Eubanks Saturday expressing his pleasure over settlement of legal hindrances to validation of the bonds and said he would be home by Wednesday, ready to assist in working out the school building plans.

Of the total bond issue, $3,500,000 is for schools, of which $1,000,000 will be available this year. It is the ultimate hope of the school board to be able to provide a comfortable seat for every child of school age in the city, which will involve, Dr. Eubanks said, elimination of the so-called portable annexes at many of the schools and of all basement class rooms.

City Comptroller B. Graham West stated Saturday that a possible delay in validation of the bonds need not delay the school construction program as it will be possible to proceed with the work in anticipation of the proceeds of the bond sale.

It already has been tentatively agreed to use the $500,000 available this year for sewers on a survey looking to drafting of a topographical map, while the $500,000 available during 1926 of viaduct money will probably be used in the first work on the new Central avenue viaduct over the state railroad tracks.

All school building projects will be initiated by the board of education and then concurred in by the bond commission. Final ratification must come from city council.

KING AND QUEEN OF SPAIN REACH PARIS FOR VISIT

Paris, June 26.—(AP)—The king and queen of Spain arrived in Paris this evening. They had stopped at Bordeaux for a short time on their journey from Madrid.

Jauntily alighting at the Quai d'Orsay railroad station, with which he is well acquainted, King Alfonso extended his hand and aided the queen. The sovereigns were greeted by a distinguished assemblage. Some at the station were old friends. The royal party proceeded to the hotel, and the Spanish colony will turn out in force tomorrow to greet the royal visitors. The king and queen will go later to London.

GERALD BEAUMONT DIES

Famous Author Is Victim of Pneumonia.

Hollywood, Calif., June 26.—(AP)—Gerald Beaumont, author, died at Sylvan Lodge hospital here today of pneumonia. Beaumont was stricken June 16 but his condition was not considered serious until early today. His wife and children were said to be on a motor trip in northern California.

DIXIE RAILROADS ADOPT NEW RATE PUBLICATION PLAN

Under Tentative Program Nine Tariffs Containing 2,500 to 3,000 Pages, Will Be Compiled.

Washington, June 26.—(AP)—What a complete division of class rates in an entire rate territory mean to railroad tariff experts may be visualized in a plan tentatively adopted by southern railroads for publication of intra-territorial rates which was submitted to interstate commerce commission today for consideration in connection with a recently prescribed new scale for application between southern points.

12,000 New Stations.

Under the new scale the southern carriers found it would be necessary to provide new rates between 12,000 stations with routes via 864 junctions.

"This developed approximately 80,000,000 separate and distinct first-class rates," the carriers' statement said, "and as this number cannot readily be published in one tariff, the total aggregate that must be published in tariff form is approximately 144,000,000 rates."

Declaring publication of point to point rates in a scheme of such proportion was practically impossible, the carriers proposed publication of specific rates between certain key points consisting of both local and junction stations throughout the territory, grouping with these key points the smaller local stations and minor junctions.

The rates will be made on the prescribed mileage scale, but will be published point to point in alphabetical order, thus providing a self-index for the tariff.

Nine Tariffs Compiled.

Under the tentative plan nine tariffs containing 2,500 and 3,000 pages will be compiled to apply as follows:

From Alabama key or base points to all key or base points in the south.

From Georgia key or base points to all such points in the south, and from Kentucky and Ohio river crossings, Tennessee, Mississippi and Louisiana (east of the Mississippi river), South Carolina, North Carolina and Virginia, to all key or base points in the territory.

An intra-territorial rate basis book will contain an explanation of the groups and the base point rates to be applied.

WEEVIL DAMAGE TO COTTON CROP APPEARS SLIGHT

Golden Stream of $25,000,000 Flowing Into Georgia in Payment for "Summer Crops."

BIG GRAIN ACREAGE REPORTED IN STATE

Survey of State by Constitution Correspondents Indicates Bumper Yield in All Sections.

BY STILES A. MARTIN,
State News Editor.

That Georgia farmers have prospects for the best crops that have been grown in the state in years is the information contained in a quarterly survey of the state made by The Constitution. Correspondents from all sections of the state report crops in good condition, the only negative feature being the appearance of the hopper flea in many cotton fields. It is thought however that this menace will soon be conquered.

One of the most agreeable features of the survey of the state agriculturally is the report that so far damage to the cotton crop from boll weevils is negligible. A few south Georgia sections report the appearance of this pest since there has been an abundance of rain. Use of poison, aided by several dry growing years, with a good sprinkling of diversification of crops are factors that give the Georgia farmers courage in fighting the weevil, if he does appear. The pest may not be conquered, the reports indicate, but he is being controlled by the Georgia farmer.

Large Peach Crop.

With the marketing of the state's mammoth peach crop, estimated at 12,000 to 13,000 cars with an income to the growers of something like $10,000,000 along with the melon crop, which will be followed soon by a $10,000,000 tobacco crop, a golden stream of money appears headed toward the Georgia farmer. Watermelons are bringing from $350 to $600 a car, with the growers pleased with the peach prices.

From over the state comes the report that the finest grain crop, perhaps in the history of the state, was harvested this year. Berry schools at Rome report a yield of 5,500 bushels on 70 acres, and J. O. M. Smith, of Madison county, reports a yield of 81.4 bushels of oats per acre from a field of 80 acres and a yield of 37.6 bushels of wheat per acre.

The drouth of 1925 having cut the crop of feedstuffs, nature seems to have favored this crop this year, as farmers all over the state report bumper yields of oats and wheat.

With the date set on August 3 for the opening of Georgia's tobacco markets, growers of this weed will now arrange for the curing of that crop. The quality of tobacco this year is reported to be the best yet grown in Georgia and a record average price is contemplated.

It is estimated that 50,000 acres are planted in tobacco by 60 south

Betty Werner Turns Against

:: DECLARES HE THREATENED TO "SHOOT IT OUT" ::

Martin Durkin, Former Lover

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Chicago, Ill., June 26.—Betty Werner, common-law wife of Martin Durkin, got her revenge today. The little flapper, whom Durkin jilted when he ran away with Irma Sullivan, daughter of a village blacksmith down state, took the stand today and did what she could in the way of testimony to send her former lover to the gallows for the killing of Edward C. Shanahan, a federal agent.

Betty has been waiting for this opportunity for months. Ever since Durkin was captured she has been in the custody of the state. It was feared that if she got into communication with Durkin, whom she once loved, the ashes of their old romance would be fanned into vengeance flame and she would be of no value to the prosecution.

But today there was nothing but ashes and cold gray ashes at that. Betty met Durkin's hypnotic gaze defiantly. She looked through and over him, but there was no lovelight in her eyes. Instead she gave a splendid example of the adage that "hell hath no fury like a woman scorned."

She was not there to pose as a stained-glass angel, but to tell the rather sordid story of a cheapened life since she came to Chicago from a little town down state. She realized that her cross-examination would be a withering ordeal, one such as no girl since Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, perhaps, has been called upon to endure.

Yet, it was not 10 minutes until this pretty nemesis broke down and wept so bitterly that Judge Miller, in sympathy, dismissed the jury and adjourned court until she could regain her compo It was a sarcastic allusion to the paternity of her little son, Jack, a phrase like a whiplash, that cut through adamantine front and crumpled her down like a whipped child.

When she had pulled herself together, court procedure was resumed. She told of h Durkin had stolen automobiles, had stolen fine clothing for her, and other women. The prosecutor tried to get her to say Durkin had once struck her boy with a milk bottle. This latter testimony brought flashes of battle from Durkin's eyes. He is fond of the boy and when a fugitive, several times risked his life and liberty to see the lad. She denied it vigorously and the episode was ordered stricken out.

She told of living in various hotels with Durkin and of traveling across the continent with him. Judge Miller interrupted the questioning to say that he did not want anything in the records touching on the Mann act.

Asked who was paying her bill at the Sherman house where she has resided several months, she replied that she supposed the state's attorney was footing the bills. She denied the state had ever given her any money or clothing. She admitted going out to theaters frequently always accompanied by a policewoman who paid all the bills.

Relating to a conversation in August, 1925, between Durkin and his mother, which she overheard, she testified that Durkin said he never would be taken alive. He would "get as many as he could and use the last bullet on himself."

SHERIFF'S POSSE KILLS KIDNAPER

Oklahoma Man Holds Receiver of His Store Prisoner in Effort To Collect Alleged Debt.

Colgate, Okla., June 26.—(AP)—Emmet Bales, abductor of John Simpson, wholesale merchant, was shot and killed tonight by a member of the sheriff's force of 40 men that surrounded the house in which Bales held Simpson prisoner.

Members of the posse led by Fred Sherman, sheriff of Coal county, had entered the house in an attempt to make Bales surrender peacefully. Sherman said Bales was shot by one of the possemen when he reached for his gun. The sheriff refused to say who did the shooting.

Earlier in the day Bales had kidnaped Simpson, his wife and 9-year-old son and held them prisoner for several hours in a farm house near Lula. The boy escaped and notified Sheriff Fred Sherman of his parents' plight. Bales later released Mrs. Simpson.

Simpson was receiver for Bales' store, which failed recently. The grocer insisted that Simpson owed him $15,000, Mrs. Simpson said after she was released. She said Bales forced her husband to sign a certified check for $15,000 while they were imprisoned in the farm house today, and declared he would keep Simpson in custody until the check was cashed.

GEORGIA FARMERS HAVE GREAT CROPS

Georgia counties which will yield from 40,000,000 to 50,000,000 the income from same being set at $10,000,000. Twenty-two markets will be open this year, it is stated.

With the scheme of diversified farming adopted in Georgia, "side or "summer" crops are expected to bring into the state approximately $25,000,000 by September.

The "summer crops," such as peaches, melons, tobacco, early potatoes, tomatoes, will be followed this fall by the harvesting of cotton, corn, peanut, pecan and apple crops, all of which are reported as thriving.

Last fall The Constitution revealed the fact that Georgia reached the billion-dollar mark in production in 1925, this being the first time in the history of the state its products having reached that figure. It appears now that with a bumper crop in prospect and with all other lines of industry, manufacturing, mining, etc., running on full time, the production of the state will exceed the billion-dollar figure in 1926.

Aided by a fairly dry cultivating season, this year's crops are being grown at a minimum cost to the farmers and this fact, further aided by the big yield of feedstuffs, has enabled them to keep the cost of the farm operations down to a minimum.

MACON REPORTS FINE CROPS.

Macon, Ga., June 26.—(Special.)—Unless the rains of the last few days bring out the boll weevils, there is no fear of that pest by the cotton growers of this state this year. So far as known here, there has been no poison used in middle and southern Georgia to kill weevils.

But now comes the Texas cotton flea. While there is considerable concern over the possibility of a fight against the Texas cotton flea this year, agricultural agents do not believe that this newest of pests will get even a toe-hold before being stamped out.

Throughout middle Georgia and all the way south to the Florida line, according to reports brought here, crops are in better shape right now than in years. North of Macon conditions are not as good as south of this city.

The cotton in this section is squaring and fruiting nicely. The final application of nitrate of soda has been made. The rains have been beneficial to the crop.

Corn is growing well and the final application of soda has been made to this crop also.

Sweet potatoes are running. Melons are doing better than usual and will be ready for the market by July 15 to 20. Cantaloupes are better than in several seasons and are ripening now.

Peas, soy beans and velvet beans are being planted, following the rains, for winter fodder crops.

The best grain crops ever grown in this section are being harvested, most of it having been threshed. In parts of Bibb and Houston counties, where there have been some unusually good fields of grain, the yield per acre has broken all records.

Middle Georgia's peach crop is falling below the estimate that had been made by the Georgia Peach Growers' exchange, but the increased crop in sight from the territory north of Macon may run the total up to close to 13,680 cars, the estimate that was made some time ago.

To date middle Georgia growers of peaches have shipped a little more than 1,200 cars of fruit at a price that has been better than usual and has brought into the state probably a million and a half or two million dollars—possibly more. Prices are still good, ranging from $2 to $3.50 a crate, according to quality. New York this week paid as high as $4.50 a crate for some shipments.

The melon outlook is promising. Vines have been pruned to produce big melons and there is every indication that a considerable amount of money will be made from that crop.

The outlook hasn't been better for the farmers of middle and southern Georgia in years.

CROPS OVER STATE GOOD, AGENTS REPORT.

Athens, Ga., June 26.—(Special.)—According to the field agents of the State College of Agriculture crop conditions in Georgia are good as a whole, the Piedmont section of northeast Georgia affording the only possible exception.

Need of seasonable rains has retarded the growth of crops in the Piedmont section, this year being the second consecutive year when this section has suffered for rainfall. In the Piedmont region the growth of the crops that were up weeks ago has not been so much retarded, but the main trouble has been poor stands, bringing the average down to from two to four weeks late.

The reports reaching the Agricultural college from practically every section of the state are that the grain crops have been unusually fine this spring. This is particularly true in the very section where later crops have been retarded in growth by the drouth. All through the northeastern section of the state the yields of grain were high and the farmers are now busy threshing and storing this grain. Yields all over the state were higher than usual this year.

Weevils Appearing.

The State College of Agriculture also reports that the cotton condition now as compared to other years is improved so far as boll weevils are concerned, last year being an exception, due to the drouth. It is reported that practically no weevils have shown up in the northern and middle sections of the state but that in some of the southern counties farmers are already waging the fight to overcome the pests. It is admitted that the dry season last year did much to exterminate the weevils, but farmers are warned that the conditions of last year may not obtain this year and that unfavorable weather will surely see their return in destructive numbers. It is also stated that most of the poison bought last year was carried over and is now on hand and ready for use.

A new pest has made its appearance to further meance the cotton crops this year, it is stated. This is the cotton flea and is reported very prevalent in the northeast sections of the state.

LAURENS CROPS BEST IN YEARS.

Dublin, Ga., June 26.—(Special.)—Crops in Laurens county and in southwest Georgia are considered the best in several years, the major crops of cotton, corn and feedstuffs being well advanced for the season, clean of grass, cultivated up to the minute and promising bountiful yields.

The county's system of rotation of crops and diversification, under direction of County Agent J. F. Hart, Jr., is given credit for the change in Laurens county from the biggest cotton-producing county in the state to one of the most diversified.

The boll weevil is well in hand, ravages being confined mainly to small areas in widely separated sections, no community suffering as heavy as in the past from the pest. Intensive cultivation, poisoning and picking up of punctured squares being responsible for this, according to Mr. Hart.

The watermelon crop is unusually good and prospects are that 400 cars will be shipped from this section alone. Movements are expected to begin within the coming two weeks. Peaches are better than last year, potatoes are good, grain crops are the best in six years and scattered tobacco fields promise heavy yields.

Sugar cane, truck, vegetables, and similar smaller crops are well advanced for the season and are in good shape, it is said.

"Cotton and corn hold the greatest promise in this country," said Mr. Hart.

UNUSUAL GRAIN YIELD REPORTED

Commerce, Ga., June 26.—(Special.)—J. O. M. Smith of Madison county, owner and operator of the Piedmont Pedigreed seed farm, has wheat and oat crops ever gathered in this section, and perhaps in the whole state.

Mr. Smith threshed 6,512 bushels of oats on 80 acres of land. This is 81.4 bushels per acre. On 90 acres of wheat he harvested 3,384 bushels, giving a yield of 37.6 bushels per acre. From one 80-acre field he threshed 400 bushels of wheat.

In addition to his grain crop, Mr. Smith cut and baled 225 tons of hay from 155 acres of volunteer wheat and oats. From records kept on this crop the oats were produced at a cost of 25 cents per bushels and the wheat at 50 cents per bushel. Both wheat and oats are of high grade pedigreed seed and will be sold at a premium over ordinary seed. He says that this grain and hay crop will show a net profit of $10,000.

Mr. Smith attributes the phenomenal success of this grain crop to early sowing, good seed and proper fertilization. He says that 50 per cent of the yield was due to early seeding, 25 per cent to good seed and 25 per cent to proper fertilization. The grain was sowed from the first of September to the 15th of October. Four hundred pounds of acid phosphate was applied at time of planting and a top dressing of sulphate of ammonia was made in March.

CROPS ARE FINE IN THIRD DISTRICT.

Americus, Ga., June 26.—(Special.)—Crop conditions throughout the third district indicate prosperity for the farmers, with excellent grain crops already harvested and the peach crop now being gathered likely to excell in quality and monetary yield any produced here in several years.

Cotton, as always, continued the main "money crop" in this district, with perhaps chief attention being given its culture and marketing. The boll weevil, according to reliable information, has not been "whipped" in the district, but intelligent farming combined with scientific application of poisons recommended by the state college of agriculture and favorable weather conditions have placed the weevil under practical control.

Flour of sulphur is being used generally as a control measure wherever the cotton hopper, or Texas flea, has appeared, and apparently this control measure will prove 90 to 100 per cent effective.

Very little tobacco is raised in the third district, but the yield of small grain already harvested this season was tremendous. It is believed that the average oats and wheat yield in at least one county within the district will approximate 35 to 50 bushels to the acre, and in Sumter county more than one measured acre of rye produced a yield of 40 bushels and more.

Melon growers are worried over the appearance of "squash bugs" in their plants, and heavy damage from this source is reported. The pecan crop, rapidly mounting in importance in this section of Georgia, promises at this time a splendid fall yield. Last year pecans in many counties failed to produce in expected quantities due to prevailing dry weather, it being a characteristic of the tree that pecans produce abundantly during wet seasons and the crop is correspondingly reduced with the absence of moisture.

Hundreds of thousands of young pecan trees have been planted throughout this season, and everywhere in the district cotton and pecans are growing together. It is clearly indicated by this combination that thousands of acres now devoted to the culture of cotton will within the next seven years be devoted almost if not wholly to growing pecans, when nuts will be rated as perhaps the second crop on importance in this section, cotton always to remain the first money producer.

WEEVILS REPORTED IN HANCOCK.

Sparta, Ga., June 26.—(Special.)—Authoritative reports from Hancock county reveal that cotton crops in the county are less infected with boll weevils at this period of the growing season, than in any year since weevil infestation, creating a spirit of optimism among farmers and merchants that is easily discernable.

So far as The Constitution's correspondent has been able to learn by inquiries made of farmers from practically every neighborhood in the county, there is only one community, the Devereux community, in the county that has been threatened by the weevil this year, and there the danger is not thought to be serious because immediate steps were taken to protect against weevil invasion.

Other crops of Hancock county farmers, viz: Wheat, oats, rye, vetch, etc., are turning out well though combined acreage of these crops is believed to be smaller than during 1925, when favorable weather prevented larger crops, making it necessary for farmers to buy much stock feed for the making of crops this year.

While nothing can be learned here with absolute accuracy as to present crop conditions in the other ten counties in the tenth congressional district, automobile travelers passing through en route from Macon to Augusta, and vice versa, and to and from Sandersville and Louisville, give optimistic reports of crops along the highways, indicating healthy crop conditions in all counties in the district. Reports are especially favorable as to crop conditions in Washington and Jefferson counties.

NORTHWEST GEORGIA REPORTS FEW WEEVILS.

Dalton, Ga., June 26.—(Special.)—Agricultural men in northwest Georgia report that there are practically no weevils in this section, but that the cotton flea has appeared and is doing some damage. Rains the past week have retarded the progress or destruction by the flea, it is stated.

The condition of crops in this section are reported as fair with cotton a week or ten days late.

The yield of grain was large and a big crop of oats, rye, wheat and hay has been harvested.

Five 'P' Crops Full of Promise, Atlantan Finds

Georgia's five "Big P" crops—peaches, pecans, peanuts, pimentos and potatoes—will bring farmers of the state tremendous returns provided even average marketing conditions prevail, in the opinion of Frank T. Reynolds, who has returned to Atlanta, after a three-day trip over middle Georgia.

"Cotton, corn, grain and the bigger crops are the best, generally speaking, I have seen in years," Mr. Reynolds said. "The big 'P' crops are in fine shape and have passed the experimental stage. Peaches are moving north in mile-long train car loads; melons already are moving from south Georgia and middle Georgia's crop will come into the market in 10 days; peanut and potato acreages have been increased this year and promise an exceptionally fine yield, and the pimento growing section is enthusiastic over prospects," he said.

Mr. Reynolds said corn is waist-high in middle Georgia on an average, with cotton from 8 to 15 inches high and in a healthy condition. "The corn crop is going to be one of the biggest in the state's history," Mr. Reynolds said, "and there is going to be a big cotton crop provided weather conditions are half-way good during the next three to six weeks."

He commenced interestingly on the new pineapple pear that is being grown along the southern border of the state. "This pear is said to have been 'Burbanked' and certainly looks promising," he said. "Tomatoes in Glynn county, Boston icehend lettuce from the Brunswick section and the blackberry and huckleberry crops around Lyons and Vidalia are the most promising in three years."

Northeast and northwest Georgia apple growers are optimistic over crops and in the section in north Georgia last year where the drouth parched all crops and caused much suffering, Mr. Reynolds said, this year is a veritable garden and green with fine crops of various kinds.

Mr. Reynolds is assistant to President Carling L. Dinkler, of the Dinkler Hotels, Inc., and at regular intervals tours the state to get an idea of conditions.

"The hotel business depends," he said, "upon business conditions—like most everything else—and when conditions are good our business is good and when business is not good, our business suffers as other business suffers."

VICTORY ON DRY PLATFORM SEEN

into the Burmese tongue and translating its saving, regenerating truth with his own heroic life while he tolled seven years for his first convert, that great apostle of light and life, who, with William Carey, of England, fringed the southern shores of Oriental paganism with the beauty and glory of our conquering Christianity, wrote back to his anxious friends: 'The future is as bright as the promises of God.'

"In answer: The future of the democratic party is as bright as the shining path of conquering truth—if—if its titular heads and the rank and file of the democratic masses are willing to 'clean house,' not only in platform platitudes, but in the personnel of its leadership and its affiliations.

Blueprint for Success.

"I frankly believe that I hold in my hand a blueprint for democratic success, not only at the next national election, but for many succeeding elections. Let the democratic party rededicate itself to the vital, basic principles of its illustrious founder. Let it seek no party alliance with any set or section that will consider for one moment any surrender of principle for the sake of campaign expediency. Let it never perpetrate another pitiful, inane straddle like the Cleveland and New York platforms concerning the 'enforcement of all law,' but let it be brave enough to hit the crime that is palpable in its constitutional defiance, recognizing the startling fact that the enemies of decent, sober, constitutional Americanism are blasting at the very foundations of our government, and challenging the very soul of the nation itself, and let the democratic program both in platform and in candidate demand the strict observance and enforcement of the 18th amendment and its supporting statute, not in glittering generalities, but by specific declaration—not by cringing innuendo and indirect inference, but with a ringing, unequivocal pronouncement that will hearten the God-fearing masses of America and electrify the watching world!

"This militant program will win for the democratic party—and nothing else will.

"Nay, nay, says the timorous democratic soul, with his ears and eyes blinded by tom-toms and beer fumes from the great 'wet' metropolitan centers—we will lose New York and New Jersey, Rhode Island, Connecticut and Maryland, if we thus declare our party as sober and as conservative as the constitution of our country! I answer without hesitation, equivocation or fabrication that we want New York, but we want New York sober! We want New Jersey, but we want a state that does not glory in two United States senators, one a republican and the other a democrat, each vying with the other for the crown of greater 'wetness.' We want Maryland in the democratic party, but we want a state that does not glory in the fact that it has never joined its sister commonwealths in supporting the 18th amendment to the constitution of our country.

"And so, if the democratic donkey ever expects to graze on the refreshing verdue of the white house lawn, he must not stop too long in the big 'wet' pastures just mentioned—for if he does, some blind wet politician, caring more for local success than national victory, will load him down with beer kegs and wine bottles, and some 'damp' candidate will jump astride his back and ride him to a brewery instead of the white house. Frankly, we covet the democratic fellowship of our colleagues here who help us in some of our economic battles, but if they ride the democratic donkey next time they will have to 'run and jump up.' We cannot stop long enough to imperil our journey with luggage which the American people have constitutionally declared shall never again enter the white house of this nation.

"If, however, some blinking captain of democratic expediency forgets the lessons of San Francisco and New York when a servile surrender to 'wet' counsels spelled two successive defeats—if he, I say, reminds us of the size of the electoral vote of New York and Pennsylvania, I answer that while 'wet' New York and 'wet' Pennsylvania are big, 'dry' America is bigger; and the fiat is written in millions of happy, redeemed American hearts and homes—written, I tell you, on the 'burnished ceiling' of the American sky, that no party or candidate that surrenders one inch or atom on this great moral, ethical and economic question shall ever again be trusted with the reins of government."

PROHIBITION DEBATE IS WAGED IN HOUSE.

Washington, June 26.—(AP)—Indulging in one of its favorite pastimes of the present session, the house today participated in a round of prohibition debate.

Consideration of the second deficiency supply bill which, among other items, carries $2,686,700 to supplement the $10,635,685 already provided for prohibition enforcement during the fiscal year beginning July 1, served as the vehicle for bringing up the subject.

While Representative Gorman, republican, Illinois, and LaGuardia, progressive-socialist, New York, vigorously assailed the dry law and conditions under it, Representative Upshaw, democrat, Georgia, urged his party to come out with a "ringing" pronouncement in support of the 18th amendment in the 1928 presidential campaign.

Crime Laid to Dry Law.

Mr. Gorman charged prohibition with a grave responsibility in recent crime waves in his home city of Chicago, while Mr. LaGuardia concentrated his attack on Lincoln C. Andrews, assistant secretary of the treasury, who is in charge of prohibition enforcement.

Assailing Andrews as a "typical cringing office-holder who is seeking to please the administration, the drys and the wets," LaGuardia shouted that the proposed distribution of the 235 additional dry agents to be employed under the new appropriation "is not to prevent liquor coming into the country, but to facilitate the entry and to give concessions at certain ports for that very purpose.

Too Much Crime.

Comparing conditions in Chicago as he knew them as a letter carrier eight years ago with those at present, Mr. Gorman said that his route lay in an "orderly community," but now "there is much crime."

"Young boys and girls," he said, "in the days I traveled there, now grown into early manhood and womanhood, instead of drinking beer in their own homes, as was the custom of their parents, now drink poison at house parties, dances, cabarets and elsewhere.

"There is more drunkenness among these young people today than there was among the adults of eight years ago when I worked in their midst. The girls who don't drink strong liquors are rare exceptions, and they all whiff that eternal companion of drink, the cigarette.

"The young men all drink and they get stupidly drunk from the rotten stuff they drink. Other vices have come among these plain folks as a result of strong drinking.

Aggravated Immorality.

"Indulgence in intoxicating liquors at their dances, parties and other gatherings have produced immoral and suggestive dancing among them and a combination of both drinking and dancing has brought on an aggravated immorality," he said.

"These simple people are not better off since prohibition. They are worse off. For the most part, they were a temperate people before prohibition. Now they are a community of drinkers. They make their own home brew and they distill their own booze, strong, vile and unaged concoctions that are destructive to the membranes of the human body. They drink it now with glee and noise because the law says they cannot drink it."

Mr. Gorman urges wets and drys "to compromise a little" and adjust the standard of prohibition so that people who desire it may have 2.75 per cent beer in place "of the poison they are now consuming."

LaGuardia Charges.

LaGuardia charged General Andrews with striving "for enforcement without unduly disturbing the law breakers," and said the general's recent testimony before a house appropriations subcommittee in support of the additional prohibition funds had been misleading.

"I charge further," LaGuardia shouted, "that the distribution of the forces are such as not only to make unlawful importations possible but to facilitate them and that hundreds of thousands of gallons of liquor will be imported into the country, even though after we make this appropriation and nothwithstanding the assurances given by the assistant secretary of the treasury."

LaGuardia said the addition of 235 dry agents would still make it impossible for the prohibition unit to cope with the liquor situation, and that as Mr. Andrews outlined their disposition throughout the country it would leave only a few agents to handle the territory south of the Potomac and west of the Mississippi.

During the prohibition flare-up in the house Representative Hill, republican, Maryland, assailed the program of General Andrews for breaking up the bootleg liquor business. He charged that his proposal for a squad of "under-cover" agents to "spy" on state officials was not in keeping with the constitution and asked what Madison, Jefferson and Hamilton would have thought of a federal government that resorted to such tactics.

When Representative Denison, republican, Illinois, asked what else could be done, Hill inquired if this practice had been necessary in enforcement of other laws. Denison replied that he knew of none, but insisted that state officers in some sections had conspired against prohibition.

"I'd repeal a law that produced such a situation," retorted Hill.

British Defenses To Be Discussed At Imperial Meet

BY JOHN STEELE.

(Copyright, 1926, for The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

London, June 26.—The British cabinet and secretariat is now busy preparing material for the coming imperial conference in October at which the most important question to be submitted to the empire premiers is that of imperial defense.

According to views outlined by experts the question falls into three categories, namely:

(1.) Defense of Britain, the mother country and heart of the empire.

(2.) Defense of the imperial routes.

(3.) Defense of the dominions and colonies.

The first two questions are considered the most pressing and the thesis which are to be put forward by British experts involves, first, a continued and closer entente with France, and second, control of the Mediterranean, which is the spinal cord of British communications. The view of experts is that Britain must either provide men and money for unlimited armaments or form a close alliance either with France or Italy, or both, or, they must choose with France rather than Italy. The reason for this preference is that France has all the territories she wants or can use, and therefore would be unlikely to demand as much, other than guarantees of security of these possessions while Italy has many unsatisfied aspirations of expansion and would be likely to put the price of her support high. This, it should be said, is the view of military experts and has not necessarily been adopted by diplomats who have been working recently in close collaboration with Italy.

Military experts, however, are very insistent that it is necessary to form a close Franco-British collaboration on the Mediterranean policy, which, if carried out might bring Britain into disagreement with Italy, which is jealous of French power on this sea. The Tribune Press Service learns that J. Austen Chamberlain, foreign minister, and Premier Briand, of France, have been working for several months on a basis for a closer entente, and that Italian agents are in London working their hardest to discover a material basis for a new alignment and at the same time offering London cooperation in the near east and elsewhere in the hope of weighting the scales against France.

The results of this policy are seen in the success of Britain in obtaining the Mosul treaty, largely with the help of Premier Mussolini of Italy. Now Britain is bidding with the French for support by the instruction of political agents in the near east to give every possible help to the French in clearing up Syria. Large French forces are now being removed from the Riff to Syria and the final drive is expected soon.

It is believed that the postponed visit of President Domergue of France to London is planned to give an opportunity for a public announcement by the president and king of close Franco-British amity.

Teachers Plan New Spelling Of 12 Words

Philadelphia, June 26.—(AP)—Proposal to simplify the spelling of 12 words will come before educators of the country next week, it was predicted tonight by Dr. J. W. Crabtree, of Washington, D. C.

Dr. Crabtree is secretary of the National Educational association, which will hold its 64th annual convention here, beginning Monday. Twelve thousand teachers, many of whom have arrived, are expected to attend.

The words and the proposed form of spelling are: tho, altho, thru, thruout, thoro, thorofare, thoroly, program, catalog, decalog, pedagog and prolog. The association in 1921 decided to discontinue the use of simplified spelling.

MODEL TENEMENTS IN GOTHAM PLANNED

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

New York, June 26.—August Heckscher, wealthy philanthropist, sailed for Europe today on the Majestic after announcing that on his return to this country he would be able to make public plans for building model tenements in congested districts of Manhattan. He went to Europe as the special envoy of Mayor Walker to study housing conditions.

After Hecksher had sailed Mayor Walker told of a conference he held with the philanthropist Wednesday, at which they had agreed that construction of model tenements in congested districts was one of the first needs of the city. Hecksher then promised that after a study of conditions in Great Britain, France, Belgium and Germany, he would return to New York with concrete plans for relieving housing conditions.

It was reported Hecksher had agreed to invest a specific sum in the construction of model tenements on an agreed return and was ready to fix the rent per room at as low as $6. As a matter of fact the philanthropist has made no commitment except to build such tenements as he considers best for the people and to do so without regard to financial return.

Mammoth Fireworks Display Will Feature Celebration Of July 4 at Lakewood Park

Three-Day Program To Include Singing Contest Between Negro Choirs and Other Features.

A $2,000 fireworks display, staged by the same company that is supplying fireworks for the Sesqui-centennial world's fair in Philadelphia this year, will come as the spectacular climax to the three-day celebration of the Fourth of July at Lakewood Amusement park, beginning Saturday, July 3, it was announced Saturday by Oscar Mills, secretary of the Southeastern Fair association.

A representative of the company, widely noted as a pyrotechnic artist, will reach Atlanta Monday to begin building enormous "set pieces," which will show the famous group, "Spirit of 1776," in colored flames 50 feet high, and a new group, the "Spirit of 1926," in similar size, as one feature of the display.

The fireworks will be one feature of the $15,000 entertainment program for the celebration approved last week by the executive committee of the Southeastern Fair association.

Selection of two negro churches in north Georgia, which will place their entire congregations on the mammoth stage in front of the grandstand on Sunday, July 4, for a contest for the congregational singing championship of the section, will be completed today by a committee headed by W. L. Riley of the county police department, it also was announced.

Mr. Mills also stated that the Elks' Royal Purple band of 35 pieces would be engaged to play each afternoon and night throughout the three-day celebration. Several other big features are being arranged for the celebration, including a "jockey's ball" in the dance casino Saturday night and a "patriotic ball" Monday night, it was announced.

Memorial to American Troops Unveiled at Saint Nazaire

AMERICANS PRAISED BY FRENCH

St. Nazaire, France, June 26.—(AP)—The people of St. Nazaire stood quietly along the seafront nine years ago and watched the American transports heave in sight one by one with heartfelt relief at the coming of the much-needed reinforcements.

Today they were reminded of those serious hours, when to the accompaniment of salutes and every joyous outburst possible they watched five units of the American navy in the harbor and a dozen from the French fleet alongside them.

And on shore they witnessed the unveiling of a bronze memorial, designed by Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, commemorating the landing of the first American troops on French soil. Two ministers, navy and public works, and General Gouraud, governor of Paris, taking the place of the minister of war, represented France.

M. Leygues, minister of marine, in the course of his speech, said: "Never will enough be said of the grandeur and fullness of America's effort to show us faithful memory of France of 1778-1780.

"Americans! You came to us because somewhere on the old continent justice was being flouted and liberty menaced. You showed a generosity that we can never forget."

General John J. Pershing, who commanded the American forces in France, and the American ambassador, Myron T. Herrick, were present.

Helen Keller Pays Visit to Old Home On 48th Birthday

Tuscumbia, Ala., June 26.—(AP)—Helen Keller is back in Alabama, her native state, again after an absence of several years.

The occasion of the visit this time is that she wanted to be here for her birthday on June 27.

"My heart is full of the loving memories for the state where I was born—where I spent many years living and learning and coming into closer touch with the world for which deafness and blindness had shot me out," she said.

Contrary to the popular belief, Miss Keller was not born with her afflictions, but lost hearing and sight at the age of 19 months, following a prolonged illness. Then followed the hopeless months and years of groping in the dark, left only with the sense of feeling until the sunshine was brought back by Anne Sullivan, now Mrs. J. A. Macy.

Miss Keller tells her story as follows:

"I knew somebody was coming to the house even before mother put her hand on my shoulder to signal that she was going away. I could feel the maid fixing the guest room. So, they drove away in the buggy to the station. I seated myself in the door. I couldn't see them and I couldn't hear, but I knew that they couldn't escape me and enter the house without my knowing it.

"She came and the first thing she did was to place her hands on my face so I would know her. I started off with her suitcase, but mother stopped me, shaking her head, no, no, no while my hands were against it."

"I felt she wanted candy because she smacked her little lips with her right forefinger touched next to them," said Mrs. Macy. "She followed me to my room and kept running her hands over the things I unpacked. So I took her by the hand, led her into the hall where we found a trunk, rummaged about in it and, placing her finger tips to my lips, I smacked mine as she had on the porch. She nodded in understanding and her studies had begun."

Mrs. Macy explained that the first lesson was in sign language by snapping the fingers in the palm of the child's hand. The first word she learned was "doll." At this time, however, there was no spelling and Miss Keller was merely learning words by the signs. Then following the years of careful training.

The concluding step, though greatly facilitated by the new accomplished means of talking by hand signs—was unheard of. The teacher was to instruct her pupil in the art of spoken language. The consonants were learned through the feeling of the thumb, resting on the larynx, the vowels with the forefinger resting on the lips. These were aided by the middle finger which rested beside the nose. "It" was her first spoken word.

The result has been the wonder woman of America and the world.

Helen Keller's 46th birthday is June 27 and she comes back home to spend it. She has no speaking engagement during her trip and is only planning to stay in the state a few weeks.

During her stay in Alabama she will visit her old home as Tuscumbia and see the old library she founded there as a little girl, which is still maintained by the people of the town. With the conclusion of her visit she will return to her home at Forrest Hill, Long Island.

President Wins Point in Battle For Farm Relief

BY THOMAS L. STOKES.

Washington, June 26.—President Coolidge today won a temporary victory when the senate farm bloc yielded to his wishes and decided not to shelve all remaining relief legislation. However, a poll of the senate indicates that the substitute measure the president is sponsoring, the Fess-Tincher bill, will go the way of the Haugen bill which the farm bloc wanted. Farm leaders do not like the Fess-Tincher substitute nor any other.

So, despite the eleventh-hour move of the president and the jockeying of the last few days, it begins to look as if congress will go home without farm relief legislation, unless a decided reaction sets in promptly from the country and give the senate a cue. The positions of the administration and the farm bloc appear too far apart to bridge.

Farm Bloc Changes Front.

There were several hours yesterday when the farm bloc, resenting defeat of the Haugen bill, was ready to cast all other agricultural measures into the discard and call it a session. Some of the leaders were still of the opinion after the president stepped in and suggested a substitute. But overnight consideration brought a different opinion. The possibility that refusal to give the president's bill a vote might act as a political boomerang was pointed out, so farm bloc members decided to give it a run.

Senator "Jim" Watson, of Indiana, recent recruit to farm bloc forces, stood up in the senate today and withdrew his motion whose effect would have been to kill farm relief for this session, and temporarily the senate turned to other matters. The showdown will come next week. President Coolidge may be expected to use his influence over the week-end.

"I did not know at the time I made the motion that President Coolidge had favored the Fess plan or any other plan," Watson said, in withdrawing his motion.

"While I do not favor the Fess plan, I have no desire to prevent the measure from being voted upon by the senate."

Embodies Tincher Bill.

The Fess plan, embodied in the Tincher bill, which was before the house several weeks ago, provides a $100,000,000 fund which would be loaned to farmer cooperatives to aid in marketing crops. It is a long jump from the Haugen bill with its equalization fee that the administration dislikes so heartily.

A compromise on farm relief might be reached were not other things in the background—those other things being the presidential ambitions of various men, including Watson, himself, former Governor Lowden of Illinois, and Vice President Dawes, all staunch supporters of the principle of the Haugen bill. These men have set themselves up as leaders of the discontented farmers, seeing thus an opportunity that may flower later.

DR. W. B. CALDWELL AT THE AGE OF 83

Old Folks Need a Mild Laxative —Not a "Physic"

Most men and women past fifty must give to the bowels some occasional help else they suffer from constipation. One might as well refuse to aid weak eyes with glasses as to neglect a gentle aid to weak bowels.

Is your present laxative, in whatever form, promoting natural bowel "regularity"—or must you purge and "physic" every day or two to avoid sick headache, dizziness, biliousness, colds, or sour, gassy stomach?

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin helps to establish natural, regular bowel movement even for those chronically constipated. It never gripes, sickens or upsets the system. Besides, it absolutely harmless and pleasant to take.

Buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine and just see for yourself.

Common Sense Replaces Love As First Marriage Essential

BEST AGE IS THIRTY, SAYS NOVELIST

BY CHARLES M. McCANN.

London, June 26.—Common sense has replaced love as the first essential of marriage, and the question of the right age runs third, according to a symposium of British novelists and others.

Silas K. Hocking, veteran novelist, started it when on his 50th wedding anniversary he advised:

"Marry young and be happy. The right age is 22 for a woman and 26 for a man."

Arnold Bennett, famous novelist, disagreed.

"The disadvantage of early marriage is that the parties know neither life nor sex, nor their own minds," he said. "They marry as babies pick up a razor. The best age for a dangerous experiment is that which is neither young nor old—say thirty."

"The ideal moment would be after sowing one's wild oats and before reaping them," said Mrs. Rosita Forbes, writer and explorer. "Modern marriage is a grown-up job, and I think 25 for a woman and between 30 and 35 for a man are the most suitable ages. But the actual moment is when we cannot help it."

"Between 19 and 26 for a girl and between 26 and 35 for a man," said Mrs. Joseph Conrad, widow of the novelist. "At these ages, if the great adventure is entered upon in the spirit of mutual respect and good fellowship, and with real affection, time should only cement the bond between all married couples."

"No novelist, however clever, can tell the world when to wed; not even Michael Arlen," said Winifred Graham, novelist. "The age of inclination is the only age at which to tie the knot, whether it comes at 17 or 70."

"It is only when the souls of man and wife are in complete harmony that married life can be completely happy," said Princess Andrew, of Russia, niece of the late czar. "In many ways it is better to marry early, say between 20 and 25; then people can get used to each other."

"Some women are made for early marriage; some men are not grown up at 25," said Margaret Bannerman, actress. "The right age is when two ideals meet."

"Sentimentalists say the right age is when you meet a man or woman you cannot live without," said Ruby M. Ayres, sheik novelist. "But often such a man or woman proves to be the very one you cannot live with. It's a riddle to which there's no answer."

"Between 30 and 35 for a man, and about 28 for a woman," said Princess Kropotkin. "But if you want to marry merely as an antidote to loneliness, then any age is right, from 35 to 70."

G. O. P. CONGRESS DRIVE IS OPENED

Washington, June 26.—(AP)—The campaign for the reelection of a republican congress this fall was formally launched today in the senate by Senator Phipps, of Colorado, chairman of the republican senatorial committee.

He declared the republican party would rest its case before the people in this campaign "upon the proof that prior to its assumption of power industrial conditions were in sad contrast to what they are now; that its principles are such in themselves as to create good times out of bad ones; that its record demonstrates that its principles did achieve this result, and that the aims of its opponents are such as to menace our prosperity if made effective by power."

Senator Phipps and other members of the senatorial committee had a breakfast conference with President Coolidge and it was decided to fire the opening gun in the campaign with a review of what the party had done since coming to power after the world war.

As some of the accomplishments, the senator pointed to enactment of the 1922 tariff act, the reduction of taxes by $1,650,000,000, the funding of most of the war debts, the practice of economy in government expenditures and the appropriation of large sums for the care of world war veterans. He contended that all these had combined to bring about general prosperity, with American wage earners enjoying higher wages, greater purchasing power and higher standards of living than exist anywhere in the world.

BIG BETHEL CHOIR WILL GIVE PROGRAM

The Big Bethel church choir will give a special concert this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at the church. A special section of seats has been reserved for white persons.

Included in the program will be many negro spirituals, southern melodies, classical and semi-classical selections.

In drilling an oil well recently near Medicine Hat, a stratum of fish and shell fossils was found. The fossils were struck at a depth of 3,720 feet and it was apparent that they were being washed into the well. Other finds were reported. Iron pyrites and talcum were found at varying depths, the talcum rock being about 700 feet down.

Life in Prison Seen as Help For Colleges

Columbia Professor Says Sing Sing Seclusion Would Aid Students.

New York, June 26.—(AP)—Colleges more like penitentiaries and penitentiaries more like colleges would make better students and better prisoners in the opinion of Professor Algernon de Vivier Tassin, who teaches Columbia students English and Sing Sing inmates art.

"There are too many distractions in the city," Professor Tassin said today after an address before the International New Thought alliance. "The students would be better off if they had more of the seclusion and discipline of prisons. I would like to send half the boys at Columbia to prison for a while. It would do them good.

"The law is an ass for not finding out what all parents know.

"Punishment is not enough in itself. It should be followed by kindness and love. Prisons give too much of punishment, seclusion and discipline. They should be more like colleges."

MOODY REVIVAL ENDS WITH SERVICES TODAY

Resting in preparation for the two revival sermons today which will close his four weeks' evangelistic campaign in Atlanta, the Rev. George Moody, evangelist, yielded the pulpit at his tent tabernacle Saturday night to his assistant, the Rev. Adlai Loudy, who preached to an audience of more than 2,000 persons on "The Divine Sonship."

The final day of the campaign will be opened at 11 o'clock this morning by Rev. Mr. Loudy with a sermon on "Armageddon." Rev. Moody will preach at 2:30 o'clock on "The Unpardonable Sin," and again at 7:45 on "Heaven." All services will be at the tent tabernacle, at the Whitehall-Peters-Park street intersection in West End.

Rev. Loudy's subject for the Saturnight service was "The Divine Sonship," in which he recounted the service of Christ as the Savior of humanity.

More than 600 conversions have been made during the four weeks of the campaign, most of the converts uniting with churches in Atlanta.

From Beauty to Political Race

Republicans of Clearwater, Fla., in seeking for a candidate to oppose the democratic nominee for election to the legislature, have decided on pretty Miss Marie Leist, recent winner of the Florida West Coast-American Legion beauty contest, feeling that the attractive and brilliant young lady will win with ease. It was Miss Leist who introduced the idea of conducting school classes on the Gulf beaches for her young charges.

SENATOR ALLOWED TO ANNOUNCE VOTE IN WOODLOCK CASE

Washington, June 26.—(AP)—The wall of secrecy surrounding executive sessions of the senate was cracked today when unanimous consent was granted to Senator Smith, democrat, South Carolina, to tell his constituents how he voted on the nomination of Thomas F. Woodlock to be a member of the interstate commerce commission.

Consent was granted at the request of Senator Blease, democrat, South Carolina, who declared his colleague, up for reelection, was unable to disclose how he voted on the nomination on pain of expulsion from the senate under the rules. The Woodlock nomination, he explained, is a factor in the primary campaign, in which Senator Smith has opposition.

At first Senator Blease offered a resolution to permit any senator to disclose how he voted on confirmation of a presidential nomination, but was blocked by a motion to refer it to the rules committee. He then threatened to notify South Carolina newspapers himself how Senator Smith voted and take the consequences, but later asked unanimous consent to permit Senator Smith to announce his vote and obtained it.

ITALIAN POSITION WORRIES LEAGUE

Mussolini Now Debating What Action To Take When German Application Is Considered.

Geneva, June 26.—(AP)—Swiftly the League of Nations' attention and apprehension have passed from Brazil and Spain to Italy, from which come persistent rumors that Premier Mussolini, incensed over alleged German agitation in Southern Tyrol, is reflecting as to whether Italy should hasten the entry of Germany into the league. Italy's vote, like Brazil's last year, can keep Germany out.

Mussolini is pictured as fearful of a possible union between Austria and Germany by reason of later revisions of the Versailles treaty. Germany, it is believed, is certain to fight for such revision once she is a member of the league. A union of this kind would put Italy into a position similar to that of France, for Italy, then, like France, would have a common frontier with Germany. Other reports reaching league headquarters allege growing discontent in Italy with the Locarno agreement.

All these considerations have served to render more acute the crisis in the League of Nations, caused by the resignation of Brazil and the threatened withdrawal of Spain.

WATERMELONS MOVE FROM SOUTH GEORGIA

Quitman, Ga., June 26.—(Specia.) So far as reported, one of the first carloads of melons to be shipped from Georgia this season was loaded here Saturday. They averaged 28's and were shipped by the Sowega association. The same day a car of 32's were loaded at Barwick, in Brooks county, and brought $651 on the track.

Up to Wednesday midnight the South Georgia railway handled 94 cars and shipments from other points in the county will total nearly 200 cars. The melons are fine as a rule and C. L. Massey, the Sowega district manager, reports that association members are getting from $450 to $500 per car. The shipping season began 10 days later than last year, but is going with a rush and the peak of shipments will be reached next week. Anthracose has been reported in some sections in this territory, which will shorten both crop and the shipping season.

Prepare for Fourth.

Thomasville, Ga., June 26.—(Special.)—Watermelon shipments are going forward well this week, but will be heavier next week, as the great rush is always on to get them to the markets before the Fourth of July, as that is the great day when the demand for watermelons is on.

Prices are fine for melons that arrive for the celebrations on the Fourth, especially if the weather is good and hot, when nothing is more desirable to the average person who is celebrating the day in true style than an ice-cold melon, and the growers and shippers are always anxious for a typical hot Fourth, as they feel that their chances for good returns from their melons are much more certain than when it is cool.

The melons are particularly fine this season and should bring the best of prices.

Good Prices at Americus.

Americus, Ga., June 26.—(Special.)—Sumter county farmers Thursday brought their first watermelons of the 1926 season to Americus. T. W. Reed brought in the first load of Kleckley Sweets, which were readily disposed of in the local market at prices averaging between 50 and 75 cents each. Other growers brought in melons soon after the Reed consignment reached Americus, these being of the Turpin Gray variety.

Melons about Americus are declared to be in excellent condition at this season, with indications that carload shipments will begin to be forwarded within a week or 10 days.

Sylvester Ships Car.

Sylvester, Ga., June 26.—(Special.) The first car of Worth county watermelons were shipped from Sylvester by C. S. Jones. The melons were 28-pound average and sold for $375. Several cars will be shipped from here by the end of the week.

A. F. of L. Denies Charter to Concert Union in Chicago

Cincinnati, June 26.—(AP)—Application for a charter filed by the Concert and Recital Artists' Union of Chicago was denied today by the executive council of the American Federation of Labor in quarterly meeting here.

The application was denied by the council on the ground that the members of the Concert and Recital Artists' union were within the jurisdiction of the Associated Actors and Artists of America and the American Federation of Music.

REWARD OFFERED IN HART SHOOTING

Hartwell, Ga., June 26.—(Special.) The commissioners of Hart county have offered a reward of $200 for the apprehension of Ruthledge Smith who last Saturday seriously wounded Sheriff A. Britt Brown, of Hart county, near Lavonia by shooting him with a rifle.

Brown's condition remains serious.

Principals in 'Her Regiment,' Second Municipal Musical Comedy

Scenes from "Her Regiment," Victor Herbert's tuneful musical comedy, which will be presented as the second week's production of the Municipal Light Opera association, beginning with the performance on Monday night.

Left: Olga Lester, an Atlanta girl who has an important role in the cast and Francis Tyler, basso, who takes the part of the colonel of the regiment.

Center: Vera Myers, famous star of Ziegfeld's "Sally," and one of the most fascinating prima donnas of the musical comedy stage, who makes her season debut as the star of the week.

Right: Anne Yago, the wonderful contralto and character woman and Lou Powers, principal comedian. Miss Lago portrays the character of proprietor of the inn where the regiment goes for its refreshment, while Mr. Powers has a wonderful role as the colonel's orderly who becomes obsessed with the idea that he is Napoleon.

LIGHT OPERA PROVES TO BE BIG SUCCESS

our appreciation of the marvelous support given the light opera presentations thus far, and there is no longer any doubt of the assured success of the season," Mr. Haase declared.

Records Smashed.

Records of the week at the Atlanta theater show that attendance was greater than during any week of the season last year, when the shows were presented at the auditorium, which has a seating capacity of more than 6,000 people. They showed also that attendance was greater at a $2 top price than any show of any kind ever appearing at the Atlanta theater.

That the light operas and musical comedies scheduled have a direct appeal to all kinds of people was shown by the fact that demand for seats in the galleries and balconies was equal to the demand for accommodations in the orchestra seats and boxes.

"This is the most pleasing feature about the success of the first week," Mr. Candler said. "We are producing this opera on a plan under which the budget will barely be met with capacity audiences attending all eight presentations. The demand for all kinds of seats show that the productions have a general appeal and that they are appreciated by the great mass of the people of Atlanta. The primary object of the association was to bring to Atlanta the best things in light opera and musical comedy, and we did it in the expectation that we would be able to please the great mass of the people of the city. Attendance this week, demand for seats for future productions and universal commendation of the quality and high merit of the productions show that the purpose of the association has been achieved and that Atlanta has responded as we thought it would respond."

Mr. Haase said the success of "The Chocolate Soldier" is but a precursor of further successes.

"The series of operas has been arranged so that there will be no duplication of any kind," he said. "The operas are different from each other in nearly all essentials. Each has an appeal and a personality of its own. 'Her Regiment,' the production for the coming week, is entirely different from 'The Chocolate Soldier.' Good old 'Robin Hood' is in a class by itself. 'Katinka' and 'Naughty Marietta' are as different from each other as they are from 'The Merry Widow,' another of the scheduled offerings. In other words, Atlantans can attend all the operas, see something new in each and enjoy an entirely different kind of music in each."

This week's show, "Her Regiment," will bring Vera Myers and Lou Powers to the front as stars. Miss Myers will have the leading soprano role and Mr. Powers will enjoy his first real big opportunity as a comedian. Both are entirely familiar with the roles, and the production will be presented on the same lavish scale as marked presentation of "The Chocolate Soldier."

Certificates Authorized.

Washington, June 26.—(AP)—The interstate commerce commission has authorized the Western Maryland railway to issue $2,278,000 of equipment trust certificates to be sold to the highest bidder at 100.86 per cent of par.

The issue already has been sold to Kean, Taylor & Co., and Roosevelt & Son, of New York, and Brinkmann & Co., Inc., of Baltimore.

PRESBYTERIANS HOLD REVIVAL AT WINDER

Winder, Ga., June 26.—(Special.)—The revival services that have been in progress at the Presbyterian church for the past week have been attracting large audiences, a number of people of prominence coming to the services each night from nearby towns. Rev. H. A. Forrest, pastor of the Toccoa Presbyterian church, is doing the preaching, assisted in each morning service by Mrs. Forrest.

The music and song services are in charge of Mrs. Smith, a teacher of music at Toccoa Falls institute, and Mrs. J. W. Griffith, of Winder, has charge of the junior choir. It is planned to close the meeting with the services on Friday night. Rev. Taylor Morton is pastor of the church.

CITY'S GLAD HAND READY FOR JONES

off the delegation and land it at the Battery, from where a parade would march up Broadway to City Hall square. This detail, however, depends greatly upon the city of New York. Some members of the committee prefer to let the boat dock and to greet the golfers on the pier. There undoubtedly will be hundreds of persons aboard the Aquitania who will want to witness the demonstration.

There is some divergence of opinion as to whether Bob and Watts will return immediately to Atlanta from New York. Mr. and Mrs. Robert P. Jones, parents of the champion, and Mrs. Robert T. Jones, Jr., his wife, will meet him in New York, and Mr. and Mrs. Will Gunn, parents of Watts, will greet their son there.

Tom Paine Gets Telegram.

Since both will play in the American open tournament at the Scioto club, Columbus, Ohio, they may go direct to Columbus from New York, there to work off the effects of the boat trip and to study the course. The tournament there starts July 8 and lasts for three days.

If the players continue to Columbus the greeting at home naturally will be delayed, but the pitch of enthusiasm will not have lost its height. And, imagine the more intense interest in event one of the Atlanta golfers wins the American open! The golf center of the world then, indeed, would be Atlanta.

That note, by the way, was sounded Saturday when Howard F. Whitney, chairman of the rules committee of the United States Golf association and formerly president, telegraphed Thomas B. Paine as follows:

"I vote that the national capitol be moved from Washington to Atlanta. Don't lose your mind over Bobby Jones' victory."

Mr. Paine read this telegram at the Athletic club luncheon. Major John

CHATTOOGA LEGISLATOR TO RUN FOR SENATE

Summerville, Ga., June 26.—(Special.)—T. J. Anderson, Confederate veteran, who has represented Chattooga county in the state legislature for a number of years, has formally announced as a candidate for the state senate from the Forty-second senatorial district, which is composed of Chattooga, Floyd and Bartow counties. Under the rotation system of electing state senators this is Chattooga county's time to nominate a senator.

Oscar T. House has announced his candidacy as Mr. Anderson's successor in the lower house. Mr. House has served as justice of the peace at Holland, in the Coldwater district, for a number of years and is well known and popular.

KU KLUX PARADE HELD AT AUGUSTA

Augusta, Ga., June 26.—(AP)—Fully 2,000 members of the Ku Klux Klan of Georgia and South Carolina paraded through the streets of Augusta last night in their annual initiation ceremonies, which were held at Julian Smith park. The parade was held without any disturbances.

The parade was headed by a mounted troop of the organization which led the procession to the fair ground where naturalization ceremonies were held in public. About 500 candidates were initiated.

GADSDEN ORDINANCE FORBIDS PICKETING

Gadsden, Ala., June 26.—(Special.) The Gadsden city council has adopted an ordinance which forbids picketing and prohibiting any person from interfering with any other in engaging in peaceful work or lawful industry.

The ordinance becomes effective immediately and it will apply at once to the picketing of a local industry where a strike followed the efforts for the organization of a moulders' union.

CALIFORNIA GREETS WOMAN EVANGELIST

doubted," she said in describing her kidnaping. A crowd of 3,000 was on hand at Colton.

D. H. Greenwood, city building inspector at Tucson, Ariz., boarded the train at Tucson and, after looking at the evangelist, declared she was the woman whom he had seen on the streets of Tucson four weeks ago.

Mrs. McPherson, somewhat taken aback, asked Greenwood on what he based his identification. He declared he recognized her by her hair, the thinness of her face and her figure.

Asked by Captain Cline, of the Los Angeles detective force, if he was positive in his identification, Greenwood replied. "Well, if it wasn't Mrs. McPherson it was her twin sister."

CABIN OF KIDNAPERS IS DECLARED FOUND.

Douglas, Ariz., June 26.—(AP)—A deserted cabin located 18 miles southeast of Agua Prieta, across the Mexican border, was identified today by Constable O. A. Ash, of Douglas, as the one in which Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson, Los Angeles evangelist, reported she was held captive by kidnapers before her escape last Tuesday.

Photographs of the cabin will be sent to Mrs. McPherson at Los Angeles. She offered a reward of $500 for locating it.

"The windows of the shack were barred," Constable Ash said. "There is every evidence that it was the place in which Mrs. McPherson was imprisoned. We traced her footprints to within a quarter of a mile of the place, where we lost them because cattle milling around had obliterated them.

"One of the windows showed evidence of having been broken. There are four rooms in the structure. The larger part of the construction is adobe brick. The cans of which Mrs. McPherson spoke were found inside, and that on which she said she cut the ropes with which she was bound is believed to have been a 40-gallon drum.

"Strands of rawhide and heavy ducking were found in one room and about the outside door. The bonds which the evangelist said she sawed from her arms and legs were not found, however."

COTTON FLEA HITS SUMTER COUNTY FARMS

Americus, Ga., June 26.—(Special.) Considerable apprehension exists among Sumter county farmers regarding damage from the cotton hopper or Texas flea in cotton fields about Americus. Information gathered her today indicates the infestation is widespread throughout the county.

L. G. Council, president of the Planters bank and one of the largest cotton farmer in the county, has joined H. A. Cliett, county agent, in a fight to exterminate the new pest.

Use of sulphur in combination with calcium arsenate upon a 50-50 basis is the usual control agent being used here.

3 Battleships Arrive for Fort Moultrie Battle

Charleston, S. C., June 26.—(AP)—The battleships Wyoming, New York and Utah, three of Uncle Sam's staunchest, today dropped anchor in Charleston harbor, where on Monday they will reproduce the historic battle of Fort Moultrie, fought 150 years ago.

With Vice Admiral McKean, of the Atlantic fleet, were 1,360 midshipmen, 150 officers and 2,250 bluejackets, who will participate in the celebration of the sesqui-centennial anniversary of the repulsion of Sir Peter Parker's fleet on June 28, 1776.

Committees of United States senators and representatives also were due here today from Washington, in addition to other distinguished guests including Governor McLeod, Major General Johnson Hagood, commander of the fourth corps area, and Admiral Thomas Senn.

Huge crowds are expected for the celebration, which formally opens today and will culminate with the reproduction of the century-old battle Monday.

Washington, June 26.—(AP)—The senate voted late today to provide compensation of $50 monthly for veterans of the world war tubercular as a result of their service but in whom the disease has been arrested. The vote on this amendment to the veterans' rehabilitation bill proposed by Senator Ashurst, democrat, Arizona, was 47 to 20.

During debate, Senator Ashurst revealed that he had been approached by persons supporting a movement to obtain a parole for Charles R. Forbes, former director of the veterans' bureau, now serving a sentence in Leavenworth penitentiary for irregularities in his management of the bureau. Senator Ashurst said that he had declined to recommend a parole.

LOWER COTTON DUTIES ASKED

Washington, June 26.—(AP)—A bill to reduce the duties on cotton goods was introduced today by Representative Collier, democrat, Mississippi.

The measure would lower the tariffs materially on most manufactured products of cotton.

A statement commending the bill was issued by Benjamin C. Marsh, executive secretary of the People's Reconstruction league. He termed the proposed legislation "a significant evidence of the sincerity of leading democrats, who have asserted that tariff reduction is essential to secure prosperity for farmers.

FORMER WIDOW OF FITZSIMMONS SEEKS HIS TEETH

Chicago, June 26.—(AP)—Telling a story of poverty, a woman who said she is the widow of Bob Fitzsimmons, once world heavyweight champion pugilist, today requested permission of Superintendent of Police Collins to exhume Fitzsimmons' body to reclaim some of the diamonds which he had set in his teeth.

Loui Houseman, theater manager and friend of the late prizefighter, said he believed the widow wanted the diamonds as keepsakes, for he said they were not of great value. The last time he had heard of Fitzsimmons' widow, he said, was a year and a half ago in southern France.

Superintendent Collins said his caller left no address but said she would call in a week. Collins said he would refer her request to the corporation counsel.

CAILLAUX NAMES NEW BANK HEAD

Paris, June 26.—(AP)—The first administrative act of Joseph Caillaux, as minister of finances in the new Briand cabinet, was to replace Georges Robineau, governor of the Bank of France, by M. Moreau, director of the Bank of Algeria.

This act, which ordinarily would have been received as a sensational measure justifying the reputation of the finance minister for audacity has been received calmly, as it has been discounted for some time.

M. Robineau, who long has been an opponent of inflation, has been at grips with the French ministry ever since the radical socialist coalition came into power in 1924. He also has been a staunch opponent of the use of the gold reserve in the Bank of France in an effort to stabilize the franc.

The first serious crisis in his relations with the French ministry came in the spring of 1925. The Herriot government, then in power, urgently requiring funds to meet demands for the reimbursement of the national defense bonds, demanded advances from the Bank of France in excess of the limit authorized by parliament. M. Robineau, at that time gave way to the demands of the Herriot government rather than be responsible for the consequences of a default of the bonds.

Recently the Bank of France was urged by the Briand government to use part of its gold reserve to protect the franc on the theory that a billion francs in gold would repatriate most of the French paper money abroad and prevent its being thrown on the market continually to the detriment of the exchange. M. Robineau and the regents of the bank refused to acquiesce to this proposal.

Today's announcement that M. Robineau had been replaced as governor was preceded by a conference among M. Caillaux, M. Robineau and several regents of the bank. According to some reports several of the regents threatened to hand in their resignations if M. Robineau was sacrificed.

An official note issued by the ministry of finance said that M. Moreau had been appointed to succeed M. Robineau as governor of the bank, the latter in recognition of his long and eminent services being appointed honorary governor. This communique is felt to confirm information coming from authoritative circles that M. Robineau would not resign under the present situation and that if the government wanted a new governor it would simply have to remove him.

John F. Howard Faces Bigamy Trial in Mexico

Mexico City, June 26.—(AP)—The case of John F. Howard, of Haverhill, Mass., who is accused by his two sons of perjury and bigamy, has been transferred from the Mexico district court to the district court in Cuernavaca. It is not known when it will come up for hearing.

It was learned today that the case was transferred because the Mexico City court felt that it should be heard in the city where the Elder Howard obtained a Mexico divorce from his American wife.

John F. Howard is a former salad dressing manufacturer of Haverhill and is reputed to be wealthy. His two sons, John and Albert, filed charges of bigamy and perjury against him on April 29 in Mexico City. The sons charged that their father deserted Mrs. Howard, obtained a "divorce" in Cuernavaca and then married Mrs. Elonora B. Phillips, of Milwaukee. The sons claim that the Mexican divorce was illegally obtained. Mrs. Howard has brought civil action for support in Haverhill.

WILDA BENNETT GIVEN REDUCTION IN FREY AWARD

New York, June 26.—(AP)—Wilda Bennett, musical comedy star, won a reduction today in the amount of money she was ordered by a jury to pay to Mrs. Charles Frey for alleged alienation of her husband's affections.

The appellate division of the supreme court in Brooklyn ruled on appeal that Mrs. Frey must accept $[illegible]000 instead of the $37,662 granted her, and that within 20 days, or the appellate division will order a retrial of the case.

New York, June 26.—(AP)—A sharp early advance in cotton today was followed by reactions, but prices steadied up again in later trading on apprehensions of continued wet weather in the south. October broke from 16.84 to 16.50 and closed at 16.69, compared with 16.63 at the close yesterday. The general market closed very steady at net advances of 6 to 11 points.

The opening was steady at a decline of 1 point on July, but generally 6 to 16 points higher, on overnight buying orders, reflecting increased fears of insect damage resulting from recent rains in the belt. Covering by trade shorts firmed up July to 18.34, or 26 points net higher, while there appeared to be fresh buying and covering in new crop deliveries.

This demand sent December up to 16.75, or 23 points above Friday's closing quotations, but the higher prices appeared to attract realizing and the market broke rather sharply after initial buying orders had been supplied. July sold off to 18.06 and December to 16.50, net declines of 2 to 4 points on the more active positions, but later months held relatively steady, and the general list steadied up after publication of the western belt forecast. Last prices showed rallies of 4 to 12 points from the lowest.

Bullish comment on the rain news was less concerned with the effect on the plant than with the possible influence in promoting the spread of insects. Many reports have been reaching here regarding infestation of various insect pests during the past two or three days, and recent buyers have been talking of the possibility of damage from such causes during the summer.

Another private report estimated the condition of the crop at 76 and the acreage under cultivation at 46,586,000 acres, but without figures on the indicated production.

MARKET ACTIVE AT NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans, June 26.—(AP)—The cotton market developed a fair degree of activity today and the trend of prices was upward, due to the continued showery weather in the belt considered to be favorable to the spread of insect pests already numerous and to the forecast for continued unsettled and showery weather over Sunday.

After opening five points up, the market continued to advance during the first hour with active months showed gains of 20 to 23 points over the close of yesterday. The advance attracted liquidation and even-tuned by recent buyers for over the weekend and prices reacted 12 to 13 points from the highs but rallied again almost to the early highs in the late trading.

The close showed net gains for the day of 15 points on active months.

Liverpool came in somewhat irregular but the market here opened slightly firmer, first trades showing gains of 5 points. Prices continued to improve after the start which was at 16.30 for October and 17.20 for December. These prices constituted the lows of the day and by the end of the first hour October had traded up to 16.45 and December to 16.38, or 20 to 23 points above the previous close. These were the highs.

Later the market turned reactionary on week-end realizing and evening up, losing 12 points but when this selling was absorbed, the market rallied on the prospects for rain and October traded up to 16.42 and December to 16.32. The close was near the highs.

Exports for the day totaled 13,507 bales.

HANDSOME HOMES SOLD AT AVONDALE

Purchases of handsome homes by Atlantans who have been attracted by the charms of the new suburb, proved the feature of activities at Avondale Estates last week.

Purchasers included Miss Maggie Jackson, secretary of the Ford Plumbing company, who purchased the substantial red brick bungalow at 22 Dartmouth avenue, into which she will move with her sister, Miss Ruth Jackson, within a few weeks. Dartmouth avenue, the center of marked building activity, is the thoroughfare that leads from Avondale road to the wooded park that encircles the beautiful Avondale swimming pool and playground.

Another home purchaser was P. J. McGovern, who bought a bungalow at 5 Fairfield drive, an attractive structure of long lines and spacious side porch. This home is one of the first to be observed upon entrance of the gates of the new suburb.

In addition to the sale of the two homes, sales of lots in Avondale Estates in the last week were reported brisk, the total within that period maintaining a record of $2,000,000 a year and surpassing the quota undertaken with the start of the development.

The week was marked by start of work of paving the seven miles of street frontage in the second unit, under contract with the Meador Construction company, the first street to be touched being Lake Shore drive, which skirts the eastern shore of Lake Avondale.

Old Guards Plan For Caribbean Cruise in July

The Old Guard battalion, of the Gate City Guard of Atlanta, is planning a three weeks' cruise in Cuban and Central American waters, beginning July 28, W. M. Camp, commandant, said Saturday.

Arrangements have been made with the United Fruit company to sail aboard the steamer Turrialba from New Orleans and the trip will include, besides Cuba, Cristobal, Canal Zone, Port Limon, Costa Rica, Puerto Castilla and Honduras. One day will be spent in each of the ports in addition to shore excursions at various stop-over points.

The Old Guard has several trips in view, having been invited to Europe, Canada and other countries, but at a recent meeting the Caribbean trip was decided upon. The party will arrive back in New Orleans on August 13.

The trip will be confined to members of the local unit and their friends. From the many inquiries received it is believed the steamer will be filled to capacity as only a limited number of staterooms are now available, Mr. Camp said.

Total bond sales, (par value), $5,561,000.

New York, June 26.—(AP)—A strong investment demand for the $30,000,000 United Steel works of Germany loan, resulting in its prompt oversubscription, today contrasted with ebbing interest in the bond market. Prices of listed obligations fluctuated unevenly in a dull two-hour trading session.

Due to the accumulation of large advance orders for the German Steel issue, subscription books were closed within 15 minutes with many applications still unfilled. The bonds were priced at 96 to yield 6.83 per cent and a wide public distribution was reported. Outstanding German bonds were strengthened by the success of the offering, General Electric 6 1-2s going to a new high at 108, while the government 7s and the Rheinelbe Union 7s hovered just below the year's high levels.

The character of trading in the list was little changed from that of preceding sessions. Chesapeake & Ohio convertible 5s, Louisville & Nashville 5s and Rutland 4 1-2s advanced 1 to 2 1-2 points in light trading, and a single transaction in Worcester, Connecticut & Eastern 4 1-2s, normally inactive, took place at 86, an advance of almost 10 points over the last previous sale.

Skelly Oil 6 1-2s were the only important feature of the industrial division, moving up 1 1-2 points to 146 1-2, within a fraction of the year's top price.

Dry Goods.

New York, June 26.—Rayon prices will be reduced on Monday, the trade looking for a decline of 35 cents a pound from a basis of $2 for 150 Denier rayon. Cotton goods were somewhat more active in the gray cloth division today and in some colored goods lines. Wool markets were steadier. Raw silk was easier and quiet. Silk goods for fall appear to be in better demand, especially many of the heavier grades. Yarns were steadier. Cutters of linen knickers are now buying for spring in a liberal way, the new offerings of a lighter character than anything hitherto shown.

SAUNDERS OUT FOR REELECTION AS COUNCILMAN

Councilman W. E. Saunders, of the twelfth ward, Saturday announced his candidacy for reelection for a second term. He has been councilman since Kirkwood was taken into the city limits and served for several years on the Kirkwood council before it became a part of the city of Atlanta.

During his three years as a member of the sanitary committee of council and the two years he has been chairman, Mr. Saunders has motorized the department and has reduced payrolls of the department $52,000 annually.

He also has been a member of the streets, parks and pension committees for three years; a member of the finance committee for two years and of the fire board for one year.

"If I am elected for another term, I shall endeavor to establish a new junior high school in the eastern section of Atlanta, make additions to the present Kirkwood school, lay a 36-inch water main through the Kirkwood section and continue street and park improvements already begun in the ward," Mr. Saunders said in making his formal entry.

PONZI REPORTED TO HAVE LEFT U. S.

Houston, June 26.—(AP)—Charles Ponzi, wanted in Massachusetts and Florida on swindling charges, sailed from Port Houston yesterday for points unknown and distant, Sheriff T. A. Binford, of Harris county, said tonight.

The sheriff said that the erstwhile "financial wizard" had slipped by Houston authorities, although a nationwide search has been conducted for him for several weeks.

Deputy Police Superintendent Hall immediately ordered all available data on Ponzi forwarded by wire and notified Assistant District Attorney Alfred T. Shrigley and Inspector John C. Mitchell, attached to the attorney general's office.

Earlier in the day Deputy Superintendent Hall received a telegram from Sheriff Binford which read: "Do you want Charles Ponzi? Advise return wire quick, advise finger print classification and if any reward." Mr. Shrigley was notified of the wire by telephone and replied that there was no reward for Ponzi.

Ponzi has been missing since the latter part of May when he was defaulted in superior criminal court here, where he was to have appeared for sentencing as a "common and notorious thief." The sentence grew out of the collapse of his international postal reply coupon scheme several years ago. His appeal had been dismissed by the supreme court.

EIGHT BEDS ASKED TO CARE FOR KIDS AT GRADY HOSPITAL

Grady hospital is badly in need of eight additional beds for the children's quarters on the roof, according to Steve R. Johnston, superintendent. On account of the shortage of beds, hospital officials recently have been forced to turn away children who needed prompt hospital treatment, it was said.

Mr. Johnston stated that there is sufficient room for the additional beds and expressed the belief that when Atlantans realized this need the beds would be donated at once.

Refusal To Aid Henry Ford Costs Callie Fortune

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

New York, June 26.—The White Star liner Majestic, which sailed early today for Cherbourg and Southampton, breaking all passenger and food tonnage records for this season with 2,343 passengers in four classes, and about 200 tons of food for more than 80,000 meals, had in its first cabin notable, including Carl von Collie, of Detroit.

Mr. Von Collie was the most interesting man on the ship. In the early 90's he had a small restaurant and saloon in Detroit. A regular customer at the noon luncheon was a young inventor named Henry Ford.

"There was an alley back my place," said Mr. Von Collie. "Ford was working for Edison company and kept a machine he was building in the alley. Before and after lunch he would go out and try to make it run. I wouldn't have given $10 for it.

"One day he offered to sell me $1,000 worth of stock, but I couldn't see my way to put good money in such junk. His contraption never seemed to work. First they would get in front and pull it, then they would get behind and push. When it moved a little they would all get excited but I figured they were wasting their time. I'm sorry I didn't make that $1,000 investment, but after all, I have done pretty well."

Although Von Collie refused an opportunity to become one of the richest men in America he started another man on the road to wealth. Another patron of his restaurant was Henry Reckhem, a young lawyer. Reckhem had a small piece of property and Von Collie lent him $500 on it. Reckhem put the money into Ford's invention and is today one of the wealthiest men in the middle-west.

PUCCINI OPERA HAS PREMIERE IN BUENOS AIRES

Buenos Aires, June 26.—(AP)—Giacomo Puccini's last opera, Turandot, which he nearly completed before his death, had its trans-Atlantic premiere last night at the Colon before a fashionable audience.

The leading parts fell to two members of the Chicago Opera company, Claudia Muzio, who sang the part of Princes Turandot, and Giacomo Lauro Volpi, who impersonated Calaf, the unknown prince. Rosette Pampanini sang Liu, the slave girl, a part which the local critics described as reminiscent of Madame Butterfly.

The opera, based on a Chinese legend, was conducted by Ginn Marinuzzi. It will be given its premiere in New York at the Metropolitan next November.

Moore, of Detroit, was made vice president; Thomas A. Cookson, of Bloomington, Ind., secretary, and Edward M. Bassert, of Philadelphia, treasurer.

The next grand arch will be held in Buffalo in 1928.

FRANCE IS VICTOR IN GENEVA DISPUTE

Geneva, June 26.—(AP)—The threat by France to bolt the subcommittee on naval affairs gave a new sensational twist to the disarmament discussions today. Admiral De Jeanne and his French colleagues even went so far as to gather up their documents preparatory to leaving the League of Nations room where the sessions were held, but in the end everything was ironed out smoothly, because the French got what they wanted.

The incident arose during a discussion on the age of warships; it was really a clash between the French and British experts. By a unanimous vote the naval experts had accepted the French proposal that there seemed no doubt that the effective value of the tonnage of naval armaments, generally speaking, decreased with age.

The British then moved that as age was one of the factors which would inevitably be taken into consideration in any standard of comparison between navies, all discussion of the question of age should be closed, or at least deferred until the full military committee was ready to take up the problem of the limitation of armaments and methods of limitation. The British motion was adopted.

HUSBAND FORGIVEN BY FATHER-IN-LAW IN WIFE'S MURDER

Baltimore, June 26.—(AP)—Hazleton Truman Price, admitted slayer of his wife, today was forgiven by his father-in-law, Alonzo H. Abbott, here to take his daughter's body home to Cambridge, Md.

"I fully forgive you," Abbott sent word to the hospital cot where Price is near death from self-administered poison. "I wish you the best of luck and hope you recover."

Price strangled his wife to death when he failed to effect a reconciliation with her.

Rome, June 26.—(AP)—Fifteen years of labor by Benedictine monks under the direction of Cardinal Gasquet bore its first fruit today when the first volume of the reviewed and amended edition of the Vulgate Bible was presented to Pope Pius.

It was said that the task of drawing up the Bible in authentic form soon will be completed. The work originally was undertaken by Pope Pius X.

HUNGARIANS BANQUET JEREMIAH SMITH

Budapest, June 26.—The Hungarian government's farewell banquet to Jeremiah Smith, of Boston, retiring League of Nations administrator of the country, was the most colorful event here in a decade.

Smith predicted a smooth future for Hungary's economic life.

Many Arrests Seen in Probe By Dry Director

New Orleans, La., June 26.—(AP)—Arrest of William A. Cuevas, president of a Gulfport-Mississippi Furniture company, on a charge of conspiracy to violate the Volstead act, was the first of a number of charges to be preferred against well-known men, O. D. Jackson, prohibition director for the ninth district, said here today.

"I cannot tell you all the details," said Mr. Jackson, "because if I did it would stop us from making many important arrests. We expect to make several arrests this afternoon. Some of them will surprise a few people. They will be made in New Orleans and elsewhere. Thes arrests are expected momentarily."

Cuevas was arrested yesterday and released on $5,000 bond, this amount being fixed after a United States commissioner had first set $30,000 as the amount of bond to be required.

The Gulfport man, said to be wealthy and prominent, declared that "I have not the slightest idea what this is all about. I have never been identified with a rum ring or any other kind of ring."

Director Jackson said that the government expected to show that Cuevas was the "brains" of liquor smugglers on the Gulf coast, although he never actually handled a bottle.

DERRICK AND DRILL DROP FROM SIGHT IN TEXAS BLAST

Orange, Texas, June 26.—(AP)—A practically noiseless "blowout" caused the 112-foot derrick and drilling machinery of a Gulf Production company well near here to drop from sight, leaving a crater 40 feet in diameter. The crater today is nearly filled with water. Oil men say it is the first blowout of its kind on record.

Usually blowouts, the oil field term for the occurrence, are accompanied by a loud roar of escaping gas and the noise of the casing being cut by sand and boulders.

In this instance however, there was only a shower of mud and water and a slight upheaval of the earth before the huge derrick disappeared, leaving only the guy wires pointing down into a crater.

Action of the crew in hurrying away to escape the muddy deluge probably saved their lives. The well is within 100 feet of other producing wells.

POLICE SEARCH FOR TWO MEN IN GIRL ATTACK

Louisville, June 26.—(AP)—Police today are searching for two men who, according to a 16-year-old white girl, abducted and attacked her as she was on her way to church where she serves as organist, last night.

The girl was brought to a local hospital by a passing motorist who found her wandering in a dazed condition near her home. Physicians say her condition is serious as an overdose of drug apparently had been given her.

She told police the men, both of whom she knew, stopped her as she was walking to church. While talking, she said they pulled her into their car and sped to a country roadwhere she was forced to drink a beverage, she thought was beer. In a few minutes, she told the police, she was unconscious and remembered nothing until awakened at the hospital.

Crackers Nose Out Nashville in Final Game, 4 to 3

SIMPSON DEFEATS MOONEY FOR CITY TENNIS TITLE

All Doubles Matches To Be Played Today At Piedmont Courts

In a match, saturated with brilliance, Jack Simpson won the singles championship in the city tourney by defeating Jack Mooney after five sets had been played. The score: 1-6, 2-6, 6-4, 6-1, 8-6, is only mildly indicative of the exhibition which was offered tennis lovers yesterday afternoon.

Simpson, carrying a slight mental hazard, was not up to standard in his first match. At the end of those seven games it looked as if Mooney were in for a pleasant afternoon. He was playing a crafty game, cool and collected.

Then came the second set, with Simpson still looking like a loser. All who were fortunate enough to see the match were practically unanimous in conceding to Jack Mooney a win over this worthy opponent.

A comeback is one of the prettiest features in sports. When the under man throws off his burden of handicap and forges to the fore, all are ready to do him homage. And this story is principally of the come-back of Jack Simpson.

Two sets down, and still hitting off top form, Simpson set his jaws and started to fight through. His technique responded to his determination, and he won the third set. The impetus of that third set carried Simpson over the fourth with a 6-1 score.

Both Men Set.

Then both men set for the final thrust. Simpson was in the midst of a glourious effort to fight through. Yet Mooney was not to be robbed, without a bitter fight, of the superb effort which gave him the first two sets.

But, in the parlance of the track, Mooney's stride was broken, and Simpson had just found his. Mooney battled all the way through, forcing that final set into extra games, but Simpson finally triumphed with an 8-6 set.

Two doubles matches were played. Courts and Courts defeated Dillard and Moseley, 8-6, 2-6, 6-3. Later in the afternoon, however, Knox and Rice defeated these brothers, 6-4, 3-6, 8-6, in spirited sets.

This brings the doubles in the city tourney to the semi-final round. Matches will be played this morning at 9 o'clock. It is hoped to play the finals this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Semi-final pairings:

Knox and Rice vs. Gault and Chambers.

Mooney and Simpson vs. Boland and Boland.

Winners of the first named match play the winners of the second for the doubles championship this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

ALL IS SET FOR BIG FIGHT TUESDAYNIGHT

Benny Touchstone, the big crusher from Miami, blew into Atlanta Saturday afternoon, fresh from a spectacular victory over Jack Monroe, of Omaha, in Madison Square garden, and announced himself fit for the fray with Billy ("K. O.") Dugan in the auditorium Tuesday night—a bout that bodes ill for one or the other, in view of their tremendous hitting power.

Pa Stribling, the proud parent, is expected Sunday from Miami to deal out advice, and smelling salts, if necessary, to Baby Stribling in his fight with Hollis Sullivan, Touchstone in his bout with Dugan and Honey Boy Snipes in his match with Benny Regan.

With Pa's arrival, everything will be set for Tuesday night, and the three big 10-round bouts and the four-rounder that opens the show. The Gate City A. C. is promoting, with Herbert Watson in the matchmaking role.

Rattling Fights.

Everybody connected with the show is enthusiastic over the outlook, not only for a big crowd, but for a rattling series of bouts. While Touchstone and Dugan are expected to deal out death and destruction to each other, Sullivan and Stribling will be looked to for the fancy boxing, and Snipes and Regan will be expected to furnish a combination of slugging and boxing.

The four-round boys will be put on at 8:30 o'clock to sharpen the fans' appetites for the big courses to follow.

Matchmaker Watson has overlooked nothing apparently in his efforts to arrange a well-balanced, interesting card, and one that promises to outdo his Stribling-Neuman performance in the matter of rapid-fire action, though the receipts will hardly go as high. Something over $10,000 was taken in for Watson's opening show, which would be difficult to tie.

Hold Final Workouts.

The various boxers to be involved in the Tuesday brawls Saturday took their final hard workouts and prepared to do only light limbering up today and Monday. When Pa Stribling arrives he will supervise the drying out of his three entries.

The prospect of seeing W. L., Ma and Pa Stribling either seconding or leading the cheers for Touchstone, Snipes and young Herbert is bound to have an effect on the gate Tuesday night, and those who have not purchased are urged to do so in advance. Chess' is the only place where tickets can be bought up until 6 o'clock Tuesday evening, when they will be moved to the auditorium box office.

Stars Will Find Course At Scioto Club Difficult

Among the many difficult holes on the Scioto Country club course at Columbus, Ohio, where the national open golf championship will be held July 8, 9 and 10, are Nos. 2, 3, 6 and 8. This quartet is expected to make or break the successor to Willie MacFarlane as United States title-holder in the 72-hole tests.

REDS LEADERS AS SLUGGERS; RUTH FALTERS

Chicago, Ill., June 26.—(By the Associated Press.)—Pounding away in unpretentious fashion since the start of the season, the Cincinnati Reds, hardly regarded as a slugging club, in a week which has seen them step to the front in the National league pennant chase have become the leading hitters in the league. They also have set up the best fielding record among the teams in the senior circuit.

Five of the Red regulars are hitting in the two hundreds, but Hendricks has three players among the first 10 hitters in the league and enough others scattered along above the .300 mark to give them a team batting average of .288. With fewer extra bases on their hits than a handful of other clubs the Reds are tied with St. Louis for the highest run total.

Some significance might be attached to the fact that the Cincinnati club and the Cardinals, having made the most runs to date, among the National clubs, also have turned in the largest number of sacrifices. The Reds have sacrificed 106 times, the Cards ranking second in that department with 86.

The Hendricks men have otherwise avoided credited at-bats by way of the pitcher's box, their 221 walks being more than are shown by any other league club.

In team slugging, the Reds hold only a bare margin over the Cubs, whose drop in the game standing is not reflected in their batting and fielding percentages. The McCarthymen finished the eleventh week of the major's year with a hitting average of .287, just ahead of the .286 of the world champion Pirates.

Kiki Cuyler leads the individual batting with an average of .365 and is still showing both leagues how to steal bases. He has run his total to 15, drawing away from the persistent Frisch, while players above him a week ago slumped. Bressler, of Cincinnati, climbed into second place in slugging with .359. Traynor of the Pirates being third with scant margins over Herman, of Brooklyn; Smith, of Pittsburgh, and Rogers Hornsby.

Ruth Falters.

Babe Ruth has faltered a little in his dash to keep up with his record-breaking home running of 1921, but is well out in front as leading hitter in the majors. Finishing the 11th week of the season with 23 circuit drives, the Babe had an average of .388. His sailing was not so smooth elsewhere, however, his teammate Gehrig going into a tie for the most runs late Tuesday.

Between Ruth and Gehrig and a string of other players slugging right up at the top, the Yankees have most of the major batting honors tucked away. Their .312 average is by far the best in either league and they have turned in more runs, more hits and more home runs than any other major league club. Also more strikeouts than any team except the St. Louis Nationals.

The White Sox rank second in the American league club hitting with .296, and Detroit is third with .290.

Meusel, of the Yanks, failed to increase his total of stolen bases, relinquishing the major theft honors to Cuyler in the other league. Rice, of the Senators; Hunnefield, of Chicago, and Mostil, of the White Sox, are pressing Meusel for the lead in the American.

Having added another winning start, Lee Meadows, of the Pirates, finished the 11th week with eight victories and no defeats. Ted Lyons, pitching for Chicago in the other league, hasn't Meadows' perfect record but Lyons has pitched twice as many games, winning a dozen and losing four. Hoyt and Pennock, of the Yankees, each have 11-and-4 records so far, among the leading American league pitchers.

Rhem, of the Cardinals, has lost the lead in the number of victories but wound up the first 11 weeks with the remarkable record of 11 games won and only one lost in the National.

Nurmi Beaten in 1,000-Meter Race

New York, June 26.—(AP)—The defeat of Paavo Nurmi recently in Finland in a 1,000-meter race by a countryman, P. Lievendahl, details of which were received here today, adds proof to the opinion of critics that the "Phantom Finn" is out of his class in competition under a mile.

It was in a half-mile race against Alan Helffrich here that Nurmi sustained decisive defeat in the farewell race of his 1925 American visit. Paavo's lack of sufficient sprinting ability at the finish cost him that race and accounts of his latest defeat from Finland tell the same story. Lievendahl ran at Nurmi's heels until the stretch, then sprinted past him to finish about seven yards in front.

English Star Sets New Track Record

London, June 26.—(AP)—D. G. A. Lowe today set what was claimed as a world's record at Stamford Bridge by running 600 yards in 1 minute, 10 2-5 seconds.

GEORGE BURNS FIRST TO GET 100 HITS

Cleveland, Ohio, June 26.—(AP)—George Burns, of the Indians, is the first major league player to make 100 hits this season. He made his 100th blow, a single, in the second game at Detroit today.

In 68 games, Burns has been at bat 273 times and scored 43 runs and 100 hits for an average of .366.

FOUR WALKER CUP GOLFERS IN U. S. OPEN

New York, June 26.—(AP)—Four members of the American Walker cup team and four foreign professionals are entered in a field of 153 starters for the open golf championship at Columbus, Ohio, next month, pairings for the event revealed.

In addition to Bobby Jones, amateur titleholder and for several years a leading contender for the open crown, Watts Gunn, of Atlanta, Ga.; George von Elm, of Los Angeles, and Roland MacKenzie, of Washington, will go to the first tee on July 8 for the initial round of 18 holes. A second round of 18 holes will be played July 9, after which the low 60 scores will continue through the 36-hole final on July 10.

Compston Leads Foreigners.

Archie Compston, of England, although a resident of the United States, leads the foreign entry which also includes R. Cunningham, of Kingston, Canada, and Pete O'Hara and Thomas E. Howard, of Australia. Like Walker cup players, they are admitted to the event wtihout having passed the qualification test under the new rules governing the event.

Among morning starters will be Leo Diegel, Al Espinosa, D. Clarke Corkran, Bill Mehlhorn, Harrison R. Johnston, Bobby Cruickshank, Al Watrous, Jock Hutchinson, Willie MacFarlane, present holder of the title; Walter Hagen, Gene Sarazen, Cyril Walker and Chick Evans.

Hutchison is paired with Willie Klein, of New York; Evans with Louis Costello, of Baldwin, N. Y.; Hagen with Ben Wiechman, of Ashland, Ky.; Sarazen with P. O. Hart, of Marittta, Ohio, and Walker with Pete O'Hara.

Pairings for the afternoon include Pat Doyle, of Elmsford, N. Y., and Fred Ford, of Royal Oaks, Mich.; Bob MacDonald, of Chicago, and Fred Bell, of Denver; Jim Barnes, of Tarrytown, N. Y., and C. W. Hall, of Birmingham, Ala.; Roland MacKenzie and Eddie Loos, of Glencoe, Ills.; George Von Elm and Johnny Soltis, of Yonkers, N. Y.; Bobby Jones and C. L. Wolff, of St. Louis; MacDonald Smith, of Great Neck, N. Y., and Eddie Held, of Webster Groves, Mo.; Watts Gunn and James Beaupre of Halway, Mich.; Tommy Armour and J. T. Shea, of Salem, Mass.

Schwartz Breaks Shot Put Record

Chicago, June 26.—(AP)—Herbert Schwartz, giant University of Wisconsin weight star, smashed the central A. A. U. record for the shot put with a heave of 48 inches, competing unattached in the meet today. The former record was 46 feet 9 1-2 inches made by Arlie Mucks, former Badger star.

Loren Murchison, the I. A. C. sprinter, won the 100-yard dash in 9 8-10 seconds, tying the central A. A. U. record.

Sportively Speaking

by H. C. HAMILTON

Atlanta's Champions. Jones Greatest. Watch Watts.

SOMEWHERE out in the broad and very deep, and sometimes choppy, Atlantic ocean, the Aquitania, queen of the Cunard fleet of passenger steamships, is speeding toward New York. Aboard her is Bobby Jones, of Atlanta, the greatest of all sports champions Atlanta has produced, and that is saying a lot.

Somehow the words to express my regard for Bobby Jones will not present themselves. I know he is the world's greatest golfer, whether amateur or professional. Professional golfers have told me that and ordinary followers of the sport have told me that in all seriousness. There is no doubt of it. I wish I could tell Atlanta just how I feel about his winning the British open championship and about his not winning the British amateur championship. But the best I can do is to say I am sorry I could not see him win the open and I did see him lose the amateur.

BOBBY is so great in his own line of sports endeavor that we sometimes lose sight of the fact that in Atlanta we not only have the golfing champion of the whole world and probably the runner-up in a few more years in the person of young Watts Gunn, but we also have as native sons some other scorers in the sporting world. It is not alone in golf that Atlanta has had her name blazoned all over the country and sometimes over the entire world.

There is Mrs. Alexa Stirling Fraser, for instance, who three times held the United States golf championship among women, and, of course, there is Watts Gunn, who, the first time he ever took part in a national amateur golf championship, finished second only to the peerless Jones. We have adopted Stewart Maiden, the genial Scotsman, who taught both Mrs. Fraser and Bob their game.

BUT there must be something in the food they eat in this town—something in the air they breathe, for we can point with pride, but not view with alarm, Bobby Walthour—both the old and the new. The elder Walthour was winning bicycle championships 20 years ago and still pushes a very mean pedal. His son, Bobby, Jr., is one of the world's finest cyclists.

Bob Jones has won the highest honors in the golfing world. He has been twice the American amateur champion and once the American open champion. Right now he is the American champion of the British Isles, which is a much easier way to say it. He has been southern champion and Georgia state champion several times. Mrs. Fraser was supreme among women golfers for a long time, and Perry Adair, another illustrious Atlantan, has gone far in the world of golf. He was feared as a golfer while Bob still was in knee trousers.

AND now, having said nice things about those persons—things all followers of the games know—let me add a word about Watts Gunn, the youngest of all the stars who make Atlanta their home. Watts played in his first national tournament last summer at Pittsburgh and rose to fame this year when he played in his first international tournaments as a proud member of the American Walker cup team.

In Watts we have the player who was runner-up, and a splendid one, to Bobby Jones in the American amateur championship last year. His game is as sound as anyone's game. Being youthful he is inclined to shoot erratically at times, but the time is coming when Watts Gunn will be praised from one end of the country to the other. Make no mistake about Watts Gunn. He can drive and he can pitch and he can putt. When he is at the top of his game only Bob Jones or Walter Hagen could keep pace with him. And he has absolute confidence himself. It is not improbable that we shall yet inscribe alongside other illustrious names of Atlantans that of Watts Gunn, who, although not a native-born son of this city, is at least a Georgian, having been imported from Macon.

Held Winner Of Golf Title

St. Louis, June 26.—(AP)—Eddie Held, of the Algonquin Golf club, St. Louis, 1923 title holder, today again won the trans-Mississippi golf championship. He defeated John Dawson, of Glen Oak, Chicago, 7 and 5 in the final match of the 26th annual tournament over the Algonquin course.

Golfer Wins Title On Fortieth Hole

Cleveland, June 26.—(AP)—In an exhibition of gameness not seen in state golf tournaments for years, Parker Campbell, of Toledo, today won the Ohio amateur championship by defeating Joe Wells, of East Liverpool. The match ended on the fortieth green with Campbell one up.

BOY DROPS DEAD WHILE HURLING BALL GAME

Richmond, Va., June 26.—(AP)—Floyd B. Chewning, 19, of Richmond, fell dead from heart failure today while pitching an amateur game against the Highland Park Juniors. The bases were full when he sagged and plunged to the ground and it is believed his heart failed because of excitement superinduced by the pitching crisis he faced.

WALTER STILL THROWS BALL IN EASY STYLE

New York, June 26—(AP)—In his twentieth year as a Washington moundsman, Walter Johnson still pitches with little apparent effort and is regarded by many fans as the most graceful hurler in the big leagues.

The veteran's style of windup and delivery has not changed since he began his career. But passing years have taken their toll from his great speed and endurance.

Declines to Stay Buried.

There was a time when his fast ball shot by the plate at such a clip catchers barely could hold it. Old timers tell the story of how Johnson once pitched three games in as many days, winning each by a shutout.

Sport writers repeatedly have buried him, especially in 1920, 1921, 1922 and 1923, when he suffered a reversal in form. But the "Old Master" came back in 1924 to win twenty-three games to seven defeats, only again to read his retirement when he lost two out of his three games in the world series.

Last year, Johnson won twenty and lost seven games. This year finds him doing mound duty in good form.

Delivery Not Fanciful.

Johnson warms up slowly and easily. The first ten or fifteen minutes he stands about ten feet within the regulation distance between the box and plate. Then he steps back and begins shooting them across more in earnest.

In the box, there is nothing fanciful about his delivery. His right arm makes a circle swing, the ball touching the glove high over his head, then it shoots downward and far to the back, coming around in a full quick sweep at the waist as the wrist snaps out the ball.

As the swing is starting backward the "Big Train" lifts his left foot slightly and his body sways a little in the same direction and then comes forward with the sweep. One scarcely has time to realize the ball has left his hand before it reaches the plate.

When men are on the bases he naturally discards his brief windup. He lifts his arms above the head, the ball barely touching the glove. A quick glance at the runners, his arms give a jerk upward and come down to the waist, where the ball momentarily is hidden in the glove. Then begins the swing far to the back before sweeping to the front.

Johnson always has been noted for his coolness under fire and those who have followed him say he is even more so now. He watches the fielders carefully and when in a particularly tight place sometimes stops to motion a player to another position. His only indication of tension is patting and scraping the mound with his feet.

Coast League May Adopt 7 Inning 2d Game Rule

The Pacific Coast league may adopt the seven-inning second game rule in double-headers. The idea is popular in Western and International leagues.

Atlanta Overcomes Early Lead of Vols To Win Hard Tilt

BY CLIFF WHEATLEY.

A pennant a day would keep the Crackers away from the second division, was the consensus of opinion among some 4,000 baseball fans Saturday following the 4-to-3 victory of our boys over the visiting Nashville Vols, a triumph which followed immediately upon the presentation of the 1925 bunting of the Southern league.

The ceremonies were enjoyable. There was no band. There were no speeches, save the one Top Sergeant Baumgras made in getting his fine looking marines lined up properly. There was no hitch in the proceedings, if we overlook the fact that the pennant was reluctant in climbing to the top of the pole as a balky mule is in getting out of the way of a street parade.

As promptly as possible after 2:15 o'clock, thus establishing a world's record so far as such diamond exercises are concerned, the pennant, borne by a husky marine, was brought onto the field. Members of both teams lined up quickly. Photographers mercifully did their duties hurriedly—and efficiently, we hope—and the grand march was on.

Cracker fans haven't forgotten their "pennant manners," despite the fact that the occasion marked the first time since 1920 they had been called upon to show them. They stood up like the good folks they are and uncovered like the book of etiquette says they should do. They didn't even ask the marines who won the war, which is still another record. The exercises were run off on schedule and promptly at 2:30 o'clock the ball game was begun.

It had hardly begun before the Vols were making a noise like winning. Hollis McLaughlin was pitching for our lads and he most assuredly had possession of little of his stuff in that first inning.

Fast Fielding.

Partridge, first up for Nashville, rapped a hard liner down the first base line, but Al Niehaus hauled it in and beat the Vol to the bag. Pol McLarry swung from Port Arthur after a fast one and nailed it to center for a single. Ruble nearly knocked down Gilbert with a rap that should have been a two-base hit, but the Cracker third baseman held it to a single. Two sacks occupied. Camp drew a base on balls and "Locker Room" Sam moved toward the furnace to heat the water for Mr. McLaughlin.

The situation took on the color of ink, but Hollis stuck to his guns. He sent in one that Bates liked and it sailed to left for a single, McLarry scoring. Griffith's splendid peg kept Ruble from scoring, but he crossed an instant later when Redfern drove a sacrifice fly to "Mule" Haas. Camp attempted to take third after the catch, but was doubled, Haas to Niehaus to Gilbert, for the third out.

The Crackers reduced the Vols' lead by scoring one tally in their half of the opening session. Durocher walked and reached second safely when Niehoff was tossed out by Johnson. Haas was safe on an infield out and Durocher drew up at third. He scored as Tom Griffith singled to center. Tom reached second when Sikes juggled the ball. Good walked, but Niehaus was retired by Camp.

Crackers Tie Score.

The Crackers knotted the count in

SOX HURLER TAKES LESSONS THROUGH MAIL

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Great pitchers pop up from obscure places. Lyons, the youthful member of the White Sox staff and one of the most prized right-handers in the American league, is an example of this. Moreover, Ted, who has the appearance of a gay collegian and the mannerisms of a true southerner, became a pitcher more by accident than design. He consented to try it in his school days because a pitcher was needed, and at that time he had no ambition to become a big leaguer or any other kind of leaguer.

Ted's last year in high school was 1918 at Vinton, La., and the team was fitted with everything in the way of personnel and equipment except on the slab. Lyons, courageous enough to tackle anything, assumed the job and did fairly well. Then he went to Baylor university at Waco, Texas. Here again was a shortage of pitchers, and Ted again volunteered, although he was more anxious about his studies than making the college nine. He not only made the nine but made it a winner in 1921, '22 and '23.

Schalk Discovers Him.

Before Lyons was two years in college, fate had him ticketed for a baseball career. Scouts began to drift in to watch him work, but he didn't let on he was interested in their proposals. Then a mere bit of luck steered him into the hands of the White Sox.

The team was training at Waco in the spring of 1923, and a local scribe thought it would be a good idea to have a story about the Baylor hero pitching to Ray Schalk. The latter obliged by riding out to the campus and going through the motions. Lyons made no effort to put anything on the ball, but Schalk liked his actions. Coach Bridges, of the Baylor team, used up about two thousand words and a lot of gestures trying to convince Schalk that Lyons was the best college pitcher Texas ever had seen.

Finally Schalk became convinced and carried the story to Kid Gleason, then manager of the Sox. The boss, knowing Schalk's judgment of baseball matters, relayed the report to the club officials. In the course of a couple weeks Lyons, with the enthusiastic coach leading him by the hand, came down to San Antonio, Texas and made an agreement to report for trial as soon as school closed for the summer. He kept his word and never even went back to a minor for seasoning.

He's Still After Degree.

A strange thing about the young man is that he still is a college student. Going into the big league as he did prevented him returning to classes to complete his course, but he never lost sight of the A B degree on which his heart was set when he departed from the homestead at Vinton, La. Hence he made arrangements to finish his studies by the correspondence route. Inside of a few more months he hopes to go back to receive the formal recognition.

Lyons has all the items that go to make up a successful flinger. He is fast and mixes his speed with a good curve. For change of pace, that is essential these days, he employs a knuckler or slows down on his fast ball without changing his motion.

Regardless of his stuff, however, there is no doubt that his style of delivery is about 50 per cent of his effectiveness. He is a pure overhand type of pitcher Most of them at the present time are of the side arm variety Naturally a batter, facing an overhand pitcher only occasionally, is bothered by the angle in which the ball comes up to him.

He Gives Credit to Schalk.

If you ask Lyons to what he attributes his success he'll quite bashfully say:

"Well, I don't know, but I suppose most of it is due to the fact that I had good teachers like Schalk and Collins at a time when I had much to learn about pitching."

LOTZ ANGLING FOR FLOWERS FIGHT HERE

Tiger Flowers' showing against the heavyweight, Young Bob Fitzsimmons, in Boyles Thirty Acres June 18 has encouraged Billy Lotz, Atlanta sportsman, to reopen negotiations with Walk Miller to bring the champion here in July to fight Battling McCreary, the sensational Boston light heavyweight.

Flowers sidestepped a bout with McCreary here last month; his manager feared a mishap that might spoil the Jersey engagement. Now there is nothing between Flowers and a match here with McCreary other than financial differences which are near adjustment, Lotz says.

The deacon, who is the only pugilist who ever brought a world's ring title to Georgia, is in New York now resting after giving Fitzsimmons a lacing. He is looking forward to defending his title in a return match with Harry Greb, from whom he won it, but Miller is reported not to be averse to mixing it once here with McCreary. The Boston negro weighs 180 pounds and therefore Flowers could not lose his title. However, a knockout would hurt his standing and McCreary carries no little threat in his right hand.

A date between July 5 and July 15 will be closed as soon as Miller agrees to the match, Lotz says. It will be Flowers' first appearance in action here since he won the title.

CHANGE TIME FOR STARTING JULY RACES

Changing the time for starting the July 3 and 5 horse races at Lakewood park from 2 o'clock, as originally set, to 1 o'clock, the Southeastern Fair association Saturday was preparing to handle the biggest mid-year race meeting in the history of Atlanta, it was announced by Oscar Mills, secretary.

The change in time was decided upon after 112 entries received up to 6 o'clock made it apparent that an additional hour would be necessary to run off the program set for each of the two days of the meet. Entries remained open until midnight Saturday, those received postmarked not later than that time being eligible for the races, and a large number of additional entries are expected to arrive in Monday's mail, Mr. Mills said.

A series of suprises developed in late entries Saturday, including the entry of Grant Patch, bay horse, offspring of the great Dan Patch, entered by S. C. Burpee; Gordon, bay gelding, by Peter Montgomery, and I'm the Guy by Guy Worthy, entered by George Stiles; Arnold Watts, chestnut gelding by General Watts, Kentucky futurity winner, entered by Tom Coggins, and other noted horses in addition to the long list of descendants of Peter the Great, Kentucky Todd and the noted sires of the last decade on the race track which had been expected.

The first runners also were entered Saturday, four days before the fair association management had expected formal entry from the thoroughbred owners which, it had been expected, would not be entered until after the Tuesday races at Latonia. Although trotting and pacing entries close a week in advance of the races, runners, according to custom, are permitted to enter any time before the start of the event, giving opportunity for surprises.

The first running entries were Clara J., by Pentacost out of Clara M., owned by Captain C. B. Dunphy; Mamie Blaze, by Star Gain out of Bashful Bettie, entered by A. B. Holt; H. T. Platt, by Toney Bornero out of Alleria, entered by Mrs. C. B. Dunphy, and Martin Casey, by Right Royal out of Galotine, entered by Clifford A. Smith.

Very Little Sentiment in a Dempsey-Wills Battle

Each Out for Cash And Refusing Risk, Edgren Declares

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

An endless lot of slush has been turned loose, all about the "sentiment" demanding a Wills-Dempsey fight, the "patriotism" that demands a "fair show" for the large dark man who has been getting unlimited publicity for years by persistently challenging Dempsey.

There is no "sentiment" connected with a Wills-Dempsey match, or the actions of either Wills or Dempsey. Both are trying might and main to get the money—the biggest possible wad—without risking anything. Dempsey has been fooling along without fighting for three years. He hasn't earned any loud cheers. But Wills has been even less appealing to the "sentiment" of sport followers. He has been getting big purses without taking any risk whatever, and he has flatly refused to take risks.

Wills "fought" old Charlie Weinert, and grabbed him around the neck with his left and knocked him groggy with his right although it would hardly be possible to imagine any reason for resorting to fouling to win such an easy bout. He "fought" poor old Floyd Johnson, who had retired from the ring after taking beatings that totally wrecked him, so far as fighting is concerned. Wills got a pot of money for this alleged contest. Johnson was in such poor shape that he walked unsteadily when he came up for the first round, and it was almost a crime to allow him to be sent out to take punches from anybody. Wills was quite the ferocious warrior with Johnson, and the massacre was short and complete. Against Firpo, who was not so far gone, and still dangerous, Harry was extremely cautious—and the bout went the limit without a decision.

Resting on Doubtful Laurels.

Wills hasn't done anything to prove that he is even a fit challenger of a stalling champion. It would be amusing if it came out, some day, that Dempsey and Wills, and their managers, had a standing agreement to pose as challenger and champion for a few years, and make all the money they could out of the publicity they'd get, without risking anything in fights with aspiring young fellows. Such an agreement would be possible, and it would make a lot of money for Wills, at any rate. It might not be so good for Dempsey.

Wills was offered $150,000 by Rickard, whose offers are in real money, to box Tunney. The offer was turned down. Wills certainly is no better than Dempsey so far as willingness to take risks is concerned.

Commissioner Farley's speechifying about "planking himself down squarely upon the platform of fair play," and all the rest of the oratory that went with it, was just a string of words, resounding phrases meaning nothing.

Fair play, bunk! How about a little fair play for the public, that has been expected to pay hundreds of thousands of dollars to see Wills slap over a few cripples? How about a little fair play for the public that will be asked to pay more hundreds of thousands to see fighters who won't fight when they think fighting isn't a good business proposition?

The more I see and hear of modern high-finance manipulators posing as fighting men the more I respect John L. Sullivan, John Flood, Jim Corbett and Joe Choynski, who fought on barges off shore, more to see which was the better man than for the few hundred dollars put up for stakes. There was sport in fighting in those days. Today you can write all the sport connected with it on a cash register.

Present Day Fighters.

This, of course, may be a little extreme when applied to a few other champs and challengers. There are three champions who seem to deserve to be called "fighters." One is Paul Berlenbach. He's a fighter—a regular fighter. He never ducks out of a match or dodges a fellow who can punch or howls for more money because of the risk he is taking. Tod Morgan, junior lightweight, looks like another chance-taking champion. And Pete Latzo, who ripped the welter title from Mickey Walker, has accepted a proposition to fight the winner of Walker's next match and give Mickey a return chance if he earns it. There are lots of regular fighting men way up. Whether they'll be fighters when they get near the top is another question. Probably by that time most of them will suffer from the same timidity that has characterized the work of a lot of others who got into the "big money" before them.

MICHIGAN MEN WIN 4 TITLES IN TWO YEARS

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

The western conference in 1925-26 enjoyed one of the most successful years of its existence. Each of the Big Ten schools either won or shared in a title, but major honors went to Michigan.

Michigan's 1925 football team not only was the champion of the conference, but it was one of the best in the country. Coach Yost claims this eleven was the greatest he has developed in the many years of his coaching career. The team was well versed in all departments of play and although beaten by Northwestern, 3 to 2, under the most adverse weather conditions, that game did not detract from the Maize and Blue prestige.

Tie for Cage Title.

Following the strenuous football season, Michigan placed a versatile basketball team on the floor and at the close of the season the Wolverines were tied with Indiana, Purdue, and Iowa. In basketball it is much easier to determine an undisputed champion as all fives play an equal number of games and each team plays at least two contests with nearly every other member of the association.

Michigan later turned out a baseball team which won the Big Ten title and then Steve Farrell's well rounded team won the conference outdoor track and field championship.

It was about the most successful athletic year ever experienced by the Ann Arbor institution and a lot of credit is due Fielding H. Yost, who not only coached the football team, but who as athletic director has surrounded himself with a staff which can develop winning teams in other lines of intercollegiate athletic endeavor.

Iowa, under the tutelage of George Bresnahan, won the indoor track and field title after an interesting struggle with Michigan, Wisconsin, and Ohio State. It was the first time the Hawkeyes ever won a Big Ten conference track and field meet. In fact, Iowa never was rated highly until Bresnahan came from Wisconsin, where he was a capable distance runner.

Badgers Win Cross Country.

Wisconsin, which has a capable director of athletics in George Little, who also coaches football, won the cross country title. The team was developed by T. E. Jones, a member of the committee which staged the successful championship games of the National Collegiate A. A. in Chicago.

Swimming honors went to Minnesota and the water polo title to Northwestern. Illinois captured the wrestling championship, and the gymnastic honors went to Chicago. The fencing laurels were won by Ohio State and hockey by Minnesota.

Gil Dobie, coach at Cornell, will be a member of the staff which will have charge of the summer school for coaches at the University of Illinois, which opens tomorrow. Two separate styles of football tactics will be taught —the Dobie system and the Zuppke variety. Zuppke, however, will not be connected with the school, but his theories will be exploited by Milton Olander, who learned his football under the Illinois coach.

Carl Lundgren will be in charge of baseball; Craig Ruby and Ward Lambert, the latter basketball coach at Purdue, will teach fundamentals of the cage game, and Harry Gill, assisted by Harold Osborn, a pupil of Gill and holder of the world's indoor and outdoor records in the running high jump, will teach the fine points of track and field athletics. The course will extend over a period of six weeks.

W. Haggard of the University of Texas, who established a new world's intercollegiate record of 6 feet 7 1-4 inches in the running high jump at the National Collegiate A. A. track and field championships in Chicago recently, will be a contestant in the National A. A. U. games in Philadelphia next month. George Guthrie, of Ohio State, who won the 120-yard hurdles, also will compete at Philadelphia, as will E. Spence, of the City of Detroit college, victor in the low hurdles at the same set of games.

Boats Compete For Two Cups

Louisville, June 26.—(AP)—Pilots of speed boats in the 10th annual regatta of the Mississippi Valley Power Boat association, to be held July 3-5, will be competing for the custody of two trophies envied more than the cash prizes.

They are the Elgin trophy and the Webb cup. The Elgin trophy is offered this year for the first time. It will be awarded December 31, to the driver of the boat in the 151 class making the best record during 1926.

The Webb cup, offered for the sixteenth time, goes to the winner of the association's "free-for-all" race.

Those pilots who shoot the trim 151's around the two and one-half mile course will attempt to better the record of "Miss Spitfire," driven by E. H. Rand of Buffalo. During the last Florida season he hung up an average of 40.57 miles an hour and leads the field for the Elgin trophy at present.

In addition to the two big trophies, more than a dozen smaller cups to remain permanently in the custody of the winners will be awarded.

Swimmer Warns Against Autos

Los Angeles, June 26.—(AP)—For those who seek aquatic laurels Duke Kahanamoku, great Hawaiian swimmer, recommends abstention from automobile diving. He says it brought about his defeat in the 100-meter sprint at the 1924 Olympics. Johnny Weismuller was the winner of that race.

Kahanamoku explains that when he came to the United States from Honolulu he drove considerably; the manipulation of the foot pedals developing a new set of muscles along the shin bone. "In the Olympic event," he said, "my wind and strength were fine, but my legs, because of these muscles went dead on me. They meant the difference in inches that Weismuller beat me."

Kahanamoku has rounded out 16 years of active competition. Now he is seeking fame as motion picture actor.

BROWNS, WHITE SOX SPLIT BILL.

Chicago, June 26.—St. Louis broke even with Chicago today in a twin bill by taking the first game, 5 to 4, while Chicago took the second game, 6 to 3. Erratic playing by the locals, coupled with Sisler's steal of home in the ninth inning, gave the visitors their victory. Chicago drove Wingard and Davis off the hill in the second game, while Thomas held the St. Louis team to five hits, three of which came in one inning and gave Sisler's men their scores.

SENATORS BOOT OUT ATHLETICS.

Washington, June 26.—Although they were let down with four hits by Walberg and Pate, the Senators defeated the Athletics, 3 to 2, today in the first of a two-game series. Johnson, after losing seven games, was credited with the victory, although he was relieved by Marberry in the seventh with three on bases. Hale, batting for Walberg in the seventh, was hit on the body by one of Johnson's fast ones, and had to be attended by the Philadelphia club's trainer before he could proceed to first base.

BOBBY SAILS FOR STATES WITH HIS CUP

London, June 26.—(AP)—Bobby Jones, at once the most famous, and, by his own confession, about the happiest man in England, left for the United States today wearing the plus fours in which he won the open golf championship at St. Anne's yesterday.

With Walter Hagen, Jim Barnes, Al Watrous and others of his American colleagues, Bobby traveled all night from the famous golf course in order to catch the boat train for the Aquitania at Southampton at noon and had no time to change from his war kit into civies.

The party was the center of attraction at the Waterloo station. Everybody was in the best of spirits and the new champion was in a particularly happy mood.

"I shall probably be doing a jig all the way across the Atlantic," he said. "Life seems very rosy to me just now and I haven't had time to give vent to my excitement."

Many friends were on hand to wish the Americans bon voyage.

Chatting with reporters, Jones said: "We had lots of luck, you know. I think some of the British players were just off form. Good players can not always be right at the top of their form. Form goes up and down like a weather chart and it very often happens in these big championships that one man—often an outsider—is just coming to his best as the championship is played. The result is that he wins, beating men who are possibly better."

Hagen, who finished in a tie with George Von Elm for third place, walked up to the group and held out his hand to Jones. Grinning broadly he asked:

"Are you Mr. Jones? I hear you beat a fellow called Hagen yesterday. Well, I'm Hagen. How do you do, Mr. Jones? Glad to know you."

Tiger Flowers Pets Terrapins

Tiger Flowers, negro middleweight champion, has adopted some queer pets.

While en route in his roadster from Hot Springs, Ark., to his training camp, about 20 miles north of Atlanta, Flowers made several road stops to pick up a number of shell-back terrapins—better known locally as "stinkin' Jims."

When farther down the road, he turned his car over, the Tiger's first concern was about the safety of his terrapins.

Cozy Dolan Spends Time in Sarasota

A well-known prominent man about town in Sarasota, Fla., is Cozy Dolan, a one-time Giant. He has left Oshkosh, Wis., and is now promoting a greyhound race track at Sarasota. The dog races are held nightly and add considerably to this resort's social life. The track is one of the prettiest in the country and the pari-mutuel system in vogue is one of the added features of the layout.

Leavenworth Was Attractive

Jim Humphries, business manager of the Oklahoma City club of the Western league, believes that he had under his wing at one time one of the freshest rookies that ever graced a payroll. And Jim takes into consideration the fact that the game has seen some mighty flip young men in its ranks.

But this fellow, who went through life with the monicker of Lefty, was the final model in the use of lip, Humphries declares, and no one ever put over the last word where he was involved.

When the world war broke out, Lefty was drafted into the service and his flow of gab was not even ruffled by hard-boiled sergeants who have particularly effective methods for enforcing discipline and commanding respect.

Finally Lefty got into such a serious jam that he was ordered to appear in person before his major. This august person, knowing of Lefty's reputation, decided to screw on the clamps at once.

"What you need is ten years in Leavenworth and you're about to get it," the officer told the nonchalant ball player.

"Fine, major, fine," retorted Lefty, "anything to get out of this outfit. Why, ten years in Leavenworth sounds like an honorable discharge to me. Shoot, let's go!"

Leach To Pilot Tampa Smokers

Tampa, Fla., June 26.—(AP)—Tommy Leach, former big leaguer, who managed several state league clubs, was today selected as pilot of the local team.

Dr. H. E. Opre, club president, stated that Leach would take charge of the Smokers Monday. Charles Allen, former manager, resigned Thursday, because of the poor showing made by the local outfit.

54-Hole Course Planned by Club

A 54-hole golf course at Lakeside, adjacent to San Francisco, is the aim of the Olympic club, according to a recent announcement by William H. Humphrey, president. The first 45 holes will be ready in two years, being reclaimed from the lower ocean holes of the club's course. The additional nine holes, giving the Olympians the only western course boasting three complete 18's, will be added as soon as possible.

Brooklyn Buys Bohne From Reds

Cincinnati, June 26.—(AP)—Sammy Bohne, Cincinnati Red utility infielder, has been sold outright to the Brooklyn Nationals. He was not obtained by the waiver route as reported. Bohne has been notified of his sale and will depart for Brooklyn immediately.

.400 HITTERS ELIMINATED IN SOUTHERN

Memphis, Tenn., June 26.—(AP)—The .400 class of hitters in the Southern association was eliminated in games including Wednesday, Hendrick, New Orleans first baseman, who was the sole survivor last week, having dropped to a .392 per centage for 68 games.

D. Williams, Mobile, was second in line with .386 for 69 games; Carroll, of Chattanooga, was third with .383 for 65 games. In order Taylor, of Memphis, had .377 for 71 games; Yaryan, of Birmingham, .372 for 62 games; Murphy, of Atlanta, .371 for 49 games; and Camp, of Nashville, .368 for 46 games.

Circuit clouts were scarce for the week, and West, of Birmingham, continued to lead the home run list with an even dozen. Yaryan, of Birmingham, was second, with 9.

Cvengros, New Orleans, headed the pitchers with a percentage of .875, with 7 wins and 1 loss out of a total of 16 games; Griffin, of Memphis, was second with 6 wins, 1 loss, out of 20 games, for a percentage of .857; Roy, New Orleans, was third, having .824 for 14 wins, 3 losses and 1 tie, out of 20 games.

Teams high in batting were closely bunched, Nashville, the leader, having a percentage of .316; Birmingham, second, with .310, and Memphis, third, with .309. New Orleans was fourth with .302.

New Orleans held top position in team fielding, with a percentage of .973; Nashville was second with .964; Memphis third with .962, and Mobile fourth with .960.

CAPABLE MANAGERS SCARCE

:: ONLY FEW GOOD RING PILOTS IN GAME ::

ALONG CAULIFLOWER ROW

BY HARRY NEWMAN

While watching Dan Hickey, Paul Berlenbach's manager, handle the light heavyweight champion during Paul's recent fight against young Billy Stribling, we got to thinking just how many good managers and handlers there are in the boxing game. I believe you can count them on one hand. At any rate, there are not many of them.

Hickey belongs to the old school of managers, and those old boys know how to handle their charges and know just exactly what their boys can do. Hickey took Berlenbach when the latter was a wrestler and made a great fighter out of him.

Most fight managers of the present day don't think they need know anything about the fight game except to argue for big purses.

Hickey Old Fighter.

It is different with men of the Hickey type. Hickey is an old fighter himself, and there isn't a trick that he doesn't know and there isn't a trick that he hasn't taught his champion. Berly was a crude kid when Dan picked him up, but he is a champion today, and Hickey must get some credit for it.

In reviewing the field, it is astounding to find how difficult it is to select a group of good managers. Doc Bagley must be included among the managers who really know what to do and what to get out of his fighters.

Bagley handled and managed Willie Jackson for years and later handled Gene Tunney. Lots of other fighters were taken along by Doc and he never let them get the worst of it.

Leo P. Flynn also must be included among the names when real smart managers are being mentioned. Flynn at times has handled and managed the biggest fight stables in the game and he has grown rich doing his stuff. Most of Leo's fighters have been in the money for years and it was due mainly to his careful handling.

Scotty Montieth, the tiny Scot, who discovered Johnny Dundee, is another great manager and handler. There is no one in the game who can get more out of a boy during a fight than the Scotchman. I have seen Scotty keep a fellow fighting to the end of a rough fight when he might have blown up in the hands of a less experienced second.

Billy Gibson, Jack Kearns, Harry Neary also are capable seconds and they also know everything about the managing end of the game. Eddie Long of Chicago is a good manager and a fine second behind his men. Eddie Kane, another westerner, is a good manager and a good man to have in a corner.

There are not many more. The old school of managers is limited, but the game could use more of the Dan Hickey type.

Goullet Will Manage New Hartford Velodrome

Alfred T. Goullet, one of the greatest bicycle riders in the history of the sport in this country, has been named manager of the Hartford, Conn., velodrome which will open July 1. The track, which will seat 15,000, is rapidly nearing completion. Races will be held on Sunday and Thursday of each week.

Don't be fooled. The genuine is sold only in this bottle.

Radical Changes in Amateur Golf Championship

Qualifying Conditions Prior To Last Year Restored by Board

New York, June 26.—(By the Associated Press.)—Radical changes in conditions governing the national amateur golf championship, including restoration of the 32-qualifier plan and adoption of the seeded draw, used in tennis, were revealed by the United States Golf association today in announcement of arrangements for the 1926 tournament at Baltusrol September 13 to 18.

Return to the qualification conditions prevailing prior to last year has been presaged by the protest which followed a reduction of the championship field to 16 last year. Introduction of seeding on the links, hitherto strictly a feature of the more important tennis events, marks a radical departure, however. Its acceptance by the U. S. G. A. has for its purpose the same end sought by the ruling body of the net world—the prevention of elimination of outstanding contenders in the early rounds.

Thus the governing organization of golf strikes two blows at the objectionable features of the 1925 competition at Oakmont, where many links heroes of yesteryear were struck down by the limitation of the championship field.

Francis Ouimet, Bob Gardner and Chick Evans were a few of the favorites who failed to figure in the fight, while it remained for a pair of contenders, Watts Gunn, of Atlanta, and Dick Jones, of New York, to win their way to the closing rounds.

Walker Team Seeded.

Indications were that members of the Walker cup team would draw chief consideration as meriting eight seeded positions, with four in each half of the draw. The seeded men will be chosen from a list of 20 ranking players, to be prepared by the championship committee, on which it was said that such contenders as Willie Reekie, of Upper Montclair, metropolitan champion; Max Marston, of Philadelphia; Chick Evans, of Chicago; Dick Jones, Eddie Held and Jim Manion, of St. Louis, and Keefe Carter, of Oklahoma City, would find places.

To overcome the delay resulting from the allotment of two days for qualification, Monday and Tuesday, the tournament committee has reduced the contests of the first and second rounds to 18 holes. Heretofore, all matches have been at 36 holes.

Both first and second rounds will be played on Wednesday morning and afternoon.

With the remaining rounds at 36 holes, the committee thus will be able to accomplish the result achieved last year by reduction of the qualifying field—the completion of the event within a period of one week.

As in other years, entries for the tournament will be subject to the approval of the championship committee, but for the first time this season the scheduled starts at the first tee will be strictly enforced. In former years, the U. S. G. A. has permitted a 15-minute delay. In the 1926 tournament, however, failure to appear at the scheduled time will result in disqualification, the officials announced.

Many Colleges Enter Net Meet

New York, June 26.—(AP)—Thirty-two colleges and universities, representing every section of the country have filed entries for the national intercollegiate tennis championships, which open on the turf courts of the Merion Cricket club at Haverford, Pa., Monday, according to an announcement by the United States Lawn Tennis association today.

Edward G. Chandler, of the University of California, 1925 champion, will play in defense of his title.

Crackers Nose Out Nashville Clan, 4-3

the fourth, and without ringing up a hit. Good walked for the starter and went to second when McLarry and Johnson handled Niehaus' roller. Brock hit to Johnson, who foolishly threw to third in an attempt to stop Good. The toss was a mile over Bates' head and Uncle Wilbur came over with the tying run, Brock going to second. Gilbert and McLaughlin were easy outs.

Atlanta jumped into a one-run lead in the fifth. Durocher began the damage with a single to left and went to second on Niehoff's sacrifice. Haas drove a terrific liner at Redfern, who made a brave attempt to stop the speeding pellet, only to have it dart away into left field for a two-base hit, Durocher scoring. Griffith reached first when Johnson failed to touch the bag after receiving a perfect throw from McLarry, and Haas went to third. Good hit into a double play, Redfern to McLarry to Mackey.

McLaughlin continued to pitch invincible ball until the seventh, when he threatened to imitate a handgrenade and blow up.

McLaughlin permitted Johnson to single for the start. The Vol pitcher moved to second on Partridge's sacrifice. McLarry and Ruble walked, filling the bases. Camp was thrown out, Niehaus to McLaughlin, on a fast play and Johnson scored. Bates was purposely passed, a move of strategy which paid magnificent dividends, for Redfern was easy for Durocher and Niehaus to handle, retiring the side and rescuing McLaughlin from a most embarrassing situation. The score was knotted again, however, and Cracker fans were somewhat alarmed.

Their fears were groundless, because Niehoff's lads untied the count in their half of the seventh and held the margin to the end. After Durocher had gone out, Manager Niehoff lashed a double to right-center and scored on Haas' single to the same spot. "Mule" attempted to reach second on the throw-in, but was tossed out.

Uses All Strength.

Jimmy Hamilton threw his master mind into full speed in the eighth, trotting out just about all the material on hand in his effort to break through the Crackers' staunch defense, but to no avail. Mackey, first up, singled. Neitzke was sent in to run for the Nashville catcher. Kenna batted for Sikes and hit into a double play, Durocher to Niehaus. Alten batted for Johnson and was retired by Good.

Alten pitched to the Crackers in the eighth, struck out two batters, walked one and hit one, but held the boys scoreless. After the eighth the game was called in order to permit the Vols to catch a train.

The narrow margin of victory indicates the struggle was much better than it really was. Johnson and McLaughlin were wild and had there been the usual amount of pinch hitting the run total would have been much larger. McLaughlin passed five men and Johnson was nearly as generous, granting four passes. The Crackers had nine men left on bases and the Vols had ten.

Both pitchers were given fairly good fielding. The Crackers played errorless ball behind McLaughlin and turned in three double plays, all of which were very useful in giving the Cracker veteran a much-needed triumph. The second of the twin killings, Durocher to Niehoff to Niehaus, came in the third inning with one down and the bases loaded. The third, Durocher to Niehaus, broke up a Nashville threat in the final frame.

The fielding feature, aside from the sparkling work of McLarry at first base for the Vols, was delivered by Good in the fifth. With two down in this inning, Ruble doubled to the right field bank and Good failed by inches to get his hands on the ball. On the next pitch Camp dumped one to the same spot, but this time Uncle Wilbur reached it and saved the day.

Haas was the only Cracker to secure more than one hit, coming through with a single and double in four appearances at the plate. McLarry, Ruble and Mackey shared honors in the attack for the Vols, each getting two hits in three trials.

Following the game the Crackers left for a short road trip. They open today in Chattanooga and then move over to Birmingham for a brief series before returning to Spiller field.

MLLE. LENGLEN AGAIN DELAYS TENNIS GAMES

Wimbledon, England, June 26.—(AP) It is the exceptional day at Wimbledon when Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen, the irresistible, does not provide some form of sensation or thrill, and today was no exception. Between some of the engagements at the jubilee tennis tournament there were alarms and rumors, and Suzanne was responsible for most of them.

It appeared for a while as if the uncertain-minded French star was going to repeat her already historic feat of Wednesday by failing to appear for the match in which she was due to play. The champion finally did come, but was very late; it was well into the evening when she tripped into the picture and went through the motions of a mixed doubles contest, with Jean Borotra as copartner.

In the meantime numerous notabilities and a huge holiday crowd had watched the two matches put on after Suzanne's was due to start, and had grown decidedly impatient at the delay. The spectators, however, were kind to the French girl, and though she really only walked through the match, letting Borotra do virtually all the work, she had a cordial hand when she left the court.

H. I. P. Aitkin and Miss B. C. Brown were the English pair opposing Mlle. Lenglen and Borotra, and they were no match for the French team, who won, 6-3, 6-0. As a matter of fact, Suzanne did not look by any means her best when she arrived at Wimbledon and she pleaded actual inability to play when Borotra over the telephone in the clubhouse early in the afternoon urged her to come and play her game if at all humanly possible. There were reports at Wimbledon that she had had fainting spells at her London hotel, and that she had left for the grounds against her doctor's advice. These could not be verified.

Richards Also Late.

Vincent Richards, due to start with Howard Kinsey in the second round of the doubles, was also tardy in appearing, and it seemed for a time that the crack American team might have to forfeit. The American management offered the opposing pair, E. L. Jones and J. L. Carr, a walkover, but the Englishmen declined to accept.

It was explained later that the trouble was due to a misunderstanding regarding the time of play on Richards' part, and he and Kimsey finally went in and downed their opponents to the score of 6-1, 6-2, 6-2.

The American contingent took part in only three matches today. The feature of these was the upset of Mrs. Molla Mallory and Mrs. Marian Jessup, who were defeated in the second round of the women's doubles by Miss Joan Fry and Mrs. M. F. Hazel, Great Britain, 6-3, 6-2.

The mixed doubles class reached an interesting stage through the victory of Kinsey and Miss Mary K. Browne over E. T. Stowe and Mrs. M. G. Broadbridge in the first round. The American pair will now meet Borotra and Mlle. Lenglen in the second round.

The defeat of Mrs. Jessup and Mrs. Mallory came as a surprise to many who believed that the noted international players would surely reach a place among the last eight teams. The critics noted that Mrs. Jessup was off her usual brisk game and was apparently unwilling to exert herself, and was at the same time inaccurate in her deep-court drives. Mrs. Mallory had difficulty in getting over the net.

Miss Elizabeth Ryan, the American star, who has been displaying high-class form in the tourney, is quite seriously ill, and both matches in which she was to have appeared today were postponed. It is questionable when, or if, she will be able to take further part in the tournament. Last night her temperature was 102 degrees, which in itself is an indication that Miss Ryan is hardly likely to be in form for several days at least.

REDS WIN TWO TO HOLD LEAD IN NATIONAL

Cincinnati held its lead in the National league yesterday by winning a second straight game from the Pittsburgh Pirates, who went into third place while the Cardinals climbed to second by beating the Chicago Cubs. The scores were 9 to 1 and 8 to 7 respectively and the Reds led the Cards by two games. The Cubs are now tied with the Giants for fifth place.

The Brooklyn-Giants double-header was postponed by rain. In the other scheduled double-header, the Phillies beat the Braves 5 to 4 and 7 to 5, shoving them back into last place.

In the American league, the Chicago White Sox split even with the Browns, losing the first 5 to 4 and taking the other, 6 to 3. Thus they failed to gain on the leading Yankees, who were idle at New York and whose huge lead now amounts to 11 1-2 games. Detroit tied the Philadelphia Athletics for third place when the latter were beaten by the Senators 3 to 2, while the Tigers were taking a double-header from the Indians, 5 to 0 and 7 to 2.

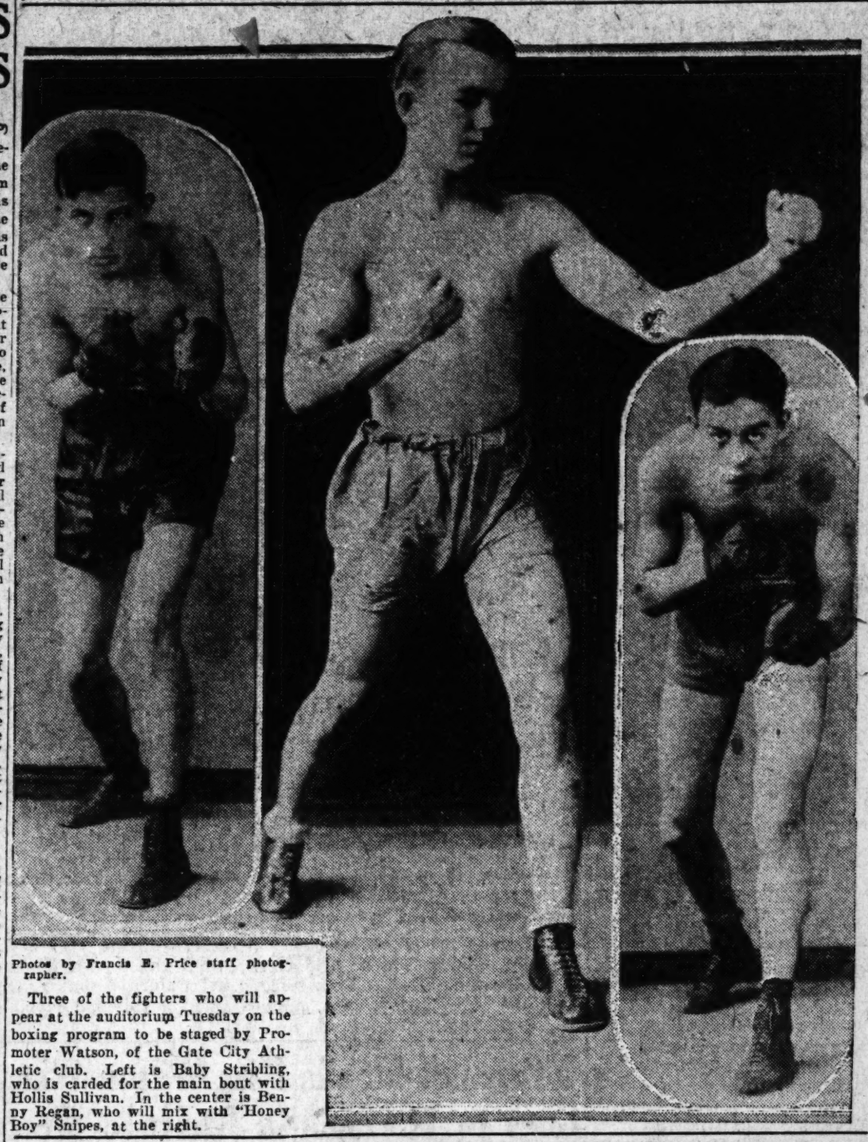

Golf Tournament In Griffin Monday

Griffin, Ga., June 26.—(Special.)—The fifth annual invitation golf tournament at the Griffin Country club will be held Monday and Tuesday, July 5 and 6. The following neighboring clubs have been invited to enter the tournament: Newnan, LaGrange, West Point, Thomaston, Forsyth, Columbus, Marietta, Yatesville, Carrollton and Cedartown. Indications are the tournament will be the biggest and best ever held in this city. Trophies will be given to the low medalist, the team winner, winners of the first eight flights and runner-up in the first and second flights and winner of the consolation of the first flight.

The qualifying round of 18 holes will be played Monday morning, with the first round of match play in the afternoon and the semi-finals Tuesday morning and the finals in the afternoon. A dance to be given at the Country club Monday evening in compliment to the visiting golfers will be the big social event of the tournament. Robert Shapard, of Griffin, was winner of the tournament last year, with Newnan winner of the team trophy. Seaton Bailey and Harry Rogers tied in the qualifying round, Bailey winning later in the playoff.

CRISMAN BEATS GENE COOK IN FINAL PLAY

Montgomery, Ala., June 26.—(AP)—Glenn Crisman, a sterling little youth from Selma, proved too big an opponent for Eugene Cook, strapping Atlanta youngster, today in the finals of the Montgomery Country club's 15th annual invitation affair, in which the Alabama champion swept to his third consecutive victory, the score for the 18-hole final being 3 and 2.

It was a match of many missed putts, with Crisman and his opponent sharing matters about on a par, but in spite of it all the wee little Selmian, cool and unassuming, managed to take advantage of the situation when his opponent was faltering, and hence the easy triumph.

Battle of Champions.

The affair was a battle of champions, with Glenn boasting the Alabama crown, and Cook the Georgia wreath, which he captured by trouncing Watts Gunn, his fellow townsman, in the Georgia state tournament, which was held some time back at Columbus, Ga.

Crisman's triumph might be attributed more to his coolness and experience than anything else. At the start of the melee it looked as though Cook had taken matters well in hand by getting off a beautiful drive while Glenn hooked his initial shot into the rough. But here, as was the rest of the way, Glenn pulled himself through by taking things calmly.

The Selma youngster won his way into the finals by defeating Charlie Locke, Birmingham star, 4 and 3, while Cook eliminated Florian Strassburger, Montgomerian, from the running in their morning match, 3 and 2.

The match between Cook and Crisman attracted a large gallery. They came from far and near to watch this clash of champions and the sentiment mostly was in favor of Glenn.

Bradley Colt Sets a Record

Latonia, Ky., June 26.—(AP)—Boot to Boot, the three-year-old colt of the Idle Hour farm, showed he is a remarkable thoroughbred when he established a new track record for the Latonia course today by running a mile and 70 yards in 1:41 3-5, one-fifth of a second faster than the former mark.

The time of Boot to Boot was just a second behind the American record held by Winnipeg at Maple Heights.

Rhinock finished second to Boot to Boot, and Kentucky Cardinal third. Three others started. The race was for a purse of $1,500.

Bull Fighting Is Second Sport

Barcelona, June 26.—(AP)—Boxing, after only a few years' stern chase, has overtaken bull-fighting in the favor of Catalonians.

The recent fight for the European heavyweight championship in which Paolino Uzcudun, Tiger of the Pyrennes, defeated Erminio Spalla of Italy, drew a gate of 380,000 pesetas, more than double the highest amount ever taken in at a bull fight in the same arena.

Although ringside seats for the bout cost eighty pesetas, four times the amount usually charged for bull fights, the attendance reached more than 31,000. The arena, which ordinarily accommodates 26,000, had never been filled to capacity for a bull fight.

Walter Hagen Says British Golf Stars Not Serious Enough

London, June 26.—(AP)—British golfers need pep and fight while the younger ones are "too gosh darned lazy," in the opinion of Walter Hagen, American professional, as quoted by the London Evening News.

In an interview just before leaving London for the United States, Hagen related what he thinks is the trouble with British golf, especially in view of the sweep which American golfers have made in recent British championships.

Hagen, as quoted by the newspapers, in fact, thinks it would be wise for American golfers to stay at home awhile, let British golfers win their own championships for a few years and then go back to international play. The Evening News quotes Hagen as follows:

"When people ask me why it is you Britishers get licked at golf, I've only got one answer and that is a question—why don't the young golfers of this country go to work at golf; why don't they treat it the same as work? They're too gosh-darned lazy, it seems to me.

A Lazy Man.

"I'm only saying this because I think it is true and it will do good. A lazy man cannot win championships at anything in the world today. He's got to work at golf and then he's got to train himself to be a match player; to cut out the nerves stuff and tell himself there's a hole ahead down which he is sure he is going in the minimum number of strokes. They want to get some pep and fight in them.

"It aggravates me sometimes when I happen to beat some British golfer over here and then some friend of his comes to me and says, 'but still, he is an awfully good sportsman.' Sure, he is a pretty good sportsman, but so are most golfers. What he should be is a darn good golfer. Never mind about the sportsman stuff. That follows if he is a good golfer.

"Now, I don't believe we Americans will come over here for the championships for a few years. What's the good of coming over here if all we are going to do is beat one another? That doesn't do us any good. We could do that at home. I think the best thing would be to let the Britishers win their own championships for a few years, and then we can come over and try to beat them at it.

"You see, you have only a few old timers who are wonderfully good golfers, but poorish match players, who often don't play really well in championships. There are very few young ones coming along who even play golf at home as well as the old timers. I'd like to see some of them take off their shirts and get to work with kick and pep. The English people are too inclined to let themselves be consoled by the sportsman dope."

The Star, commenting on Bobby Jones' triumph, says that Americans have shone on the putting green where the Englishman is weakest.

"The difference," it adds, "is perhaps one of mentality. The Englishman is out in the main for sport and exercise, a desire which is more gratified by spectacular play in long shots than in patient attention to the less strenuous business of holing the ball."

The Star also makes reference to "the far greater material encouragement American players receive than English."

British golf writers are devoting unusual attention to Jones' prowess; his methods are minutely analyzed. Their word is that he is "just a genius."

The Sunday Observer's expert, commenting on the Americans' unquestioned superiority on the putting green, remarks: "One reason is that they cultivate a much fiercer outlook on golf than we do here; to them it is a life and death business."

Black Crackers Home for Series

After finishing a rainy road trip around the colored Southern league loop, the Atlanta Black Crackers are back in Atlanta all set for a three-game series with the Chattanooga colored team. Almost every game of the trip was rained out.

The Black Crackers, during their rainy spell, got a good rest and are in good shape for the series here.

While on their road trip they visited the colored Southern league headquarters for a meeting of club officials at which a schedule for the second half of the season was mapped out. While the last half of the schedule was being arranged the Black Crackers got plenty of home games. They will have several good games for the fans here. Sol Rivers represented the Black Crackers at the league meeting.

The first game of the series here will start at 1:15 o'clock Monday at Spiller field. A special section will be reserved for the white fans.

Scientist Discovers Reason of Ability Limit of Athletes

What fixes the limit beyond which the athlete cannot go? There has been plenty of talk about "gameness," "will" and "competition," much of it doubtless true—but vague. Now, however, physiologists have entered on the question seriously, and an English scientist, Professor A. V. Hill, fellow of the Royal society, is carrying on investigations which have already made valuable additions to our knowledge of the psysiological basis of athletic records—why and when the body calls "stop."

He explains why speed per minute decreases very rapidly for a while as the length of the race is increased, and then, strangely enough, remains almost constant, no matter how long the event. He shows how the body can "borrow" oxygen, and the importance of anyone's ability to contract an "oxygen debt!" how a woman's athletic ability can be expressed as a fractional part of that of a man; and, perhaps most interesting of all, he indicates in what races man has apparently about reached his limit, and in what others there is still a good chance for energetic young would-be record holders.

Three Kinds of Fatigue.

In the first place, Professor Hill distinguishes between three different kinds of "fatigue." There is that which results in a short time from extremely violent effort, and there is the fatigue, which may be called exhaustion, which overcomes the body when an effort of more moderate intensity is continued for a long time. Both of these can be called muscular. Then there is the kind which can be described as due to wear and tear of the body as a whole, to blisters, soreness, stiffness, nervous exhaustion, sleeplessness, and so on, which may affect some one long before his muscular system has given out.

All three of these, of course, affect athletic records, but it is the first and second kinds which have been investigated more fully. The athlete is supposed to keep himself free of the third kind; what he wants to know is: How long can my body hold out, if it starts out in perfect physical shape?

Professor Hill, to start his investigations, kept these different types of fatigue clearly in mind. Then he charted all the important world's records in swimming, running and rowing, and drew curves representing the average speed per second reached in each event, according to length of time the event took.

A man running as hard as he can for 10 seconds can average about 10 yards a second (speaking in championship terms, of course); if he runs for 50 seconds, his rate drops sharply to 9 yards a second; if he runs for one minute and 40 seconds, his average rate of speed drops sharply again, to 7 4-5 yards per second.

But in any races that take 300 seconds or longer, his rate remains almost the same; at least it changes much less sharply.

"Going in Debt" for Oxygen.

All this is due to the fact that at the shorter distances two factors enter to make the speed possibilities totally different from those in the long races. First, a man doubling his speed must use far more than twice as much energy, so the higher speeds are "wasteful" compared to the lower; second, in the shortest races a champion athlete cannot really exhaust himself, because of the capacity his body has for "going into debt" for oxygen.

When a muscle of the leg, arm or any other part of the body is being exercised, it is "burning up" the carbohydrates that have been taken into the body in food, making fuel of them. To do this it needs oxygen. But the muscle does not need all the oxygen right away. Due to a special mechanism, of complicated body chemistry, depending on the formation of lactic acid, the muscle can do without oxygen for a while—run up an "oxygen debt."

The consumption of oxygen is merely put off for a while, and after the exertion is finished and the body is at rest, the muscles take in the oxygen to build up the reserve mechanism in the muscle again.

Debt Capacity Limited.

The amount to which even the best athlete can run into debt for oxygen is strictly limited. Generally speaking, when an oxygen debt of about 15 liters, or 425 cubic feet, has been incurred, the body becomes incapable of further effort. It is then completely fatigued.

But in the shorter races there is not enough time for the athlete to get a maximum oxygen debt; that is the reason a man cannot exhaust himself completely in a 100 or 220 yard sprint. He could still run a little further without furnishing his muscles with more oxygen right at the time. As to the quarter mile, Professor Hill has found an oxygen debt of 10 liters after a 440 yard race in only 55 seconds; and a 300 yard sprint at top speed resulted in a maximum debt of 15 liters. Therefore the British physiologist concludes that a quarter mile, in the case of a first-class sprinter, is enough, or almost enough, to exhaust an athlete.

In anything but these short races, however, the athlete who wishes to break records must finish with something near a maximum oxygen debt, for unless he does, he has not done himself justice. And whether he will or will not break records depends chiefly upon two things, his maximum oxygen debt (the degree to which he can "overdraw his account") and his maximum capacity for taking in oxygen at the time of effort ("his income.")

Skill of Movement Essential.

Besides the ability to go into debt for oxygen, and to draw on an oxygen reserve, the athlete must have skill of movement. All the movements required in violent forms of muscular exertion are much too rapid to be directly guided by the conscious intelligence.

Professor Hill found that the rate of speed per second dropped off for women as the time increased in almost exactly the same proportion as that for men.

In what races has man come nearest to his limit? Professor Hill's charts show that the 100 and 200 yard records are far better than any others in the neighborhood, as might be expected. The quarter mile is extremely good. The 500 yard record, however, is very bad.

PHILS WIN TWIN BILL.

Philadelphia, June 26.—The Philadelphia Nationals climbed out of last place by trouncing the Boston Braves twice today, taking the front end of a double-header, 5 to 4, and then winning the second game, 7 to 3. In both games the Phils came from behind to nose out the visitors. Mokan's batting was a feature, making seven hits for a total of 13 bases in the two contests.

Pittsburgh, June 26.—Cincinnati tightened its grip on first place today by making it two straight over Pittsburgh, 9 to 1, in a well-pitched game by Carl Mays, and a loosely fielded affair by the Pirates. Meadows' string of consecutive victories was shattered at eight, today's defeat being his first of the season.

Bullard Polo Cup Won by Yale Team

Rye, N. Y., June 26.—(AP)—Yale won the Bullard trophy, symbolic of the intercollegiate polo championship, today when the Eli horsemen galloped to a decisive 11-to-4 triumph over the Harvard four in the final round of the tournament at the Westchester Biltmore Country club.

Winifred F. C. Guest, son of Captain Fred Guest, British international, played the leading role for the Elis, shattering the Harvard defense with a total of seven goals.

General Robert Lee Bullard, donor of the trophy, presented the cup to Captain Muir at the conclusion of the match.

Hooper's Catch Saved White Sox

Harry Hooper is gone from the active White Sox. Hooper is one of the few players who have turned the outcome of a world series upside down by an individual play. Had he not caught a fly ball hit over the rope in right field by Larry Doyle, of the Giants, in 1912, the hit would have been a home run and the Giants would have won the series. Hooper has been waning for two or three years. He hasn't come to the age of has-beens, but he has seen the age of get-there slipping away. So off he goes, probably to a

WOMEN'S GOLF TOURNAMENT HERE MONDAY

Nine o'clock Monday morning, June 28, marks the beginning of the one-day medal play tournament of the Atlanta Woman's Golf association. The play will be over the Druid Hills course. This will be a handicap affair and the usual trophies will be awarded for low gross and low net scores in Class A and Class B.

The entrance fee, as announced by the association, will b. $1. It was further announced that any woman living in Atlanta was eligible for membership in the association.

This membership entitles one to play in the present tourney and all others to be held by the association during the current year. One attractive feature about such tourneys is that they, with the exception of the city championship, will be played with handicaps applied.

All entrants are requested to finish their matches in the morning in order that the club members may have possession of the links during the afternoon.

Owens, Partner Win Net Title

Greenville, S. C., June 26.—(AP)—Julian Robertson, of Salisbury, N. C., and Frank C. (Hop) Owens, of Atlanta, won the men's tennis doubles championship of the two Carolinas by defeating L. M. McCutchen, of Bishopville, and R. W. Carr, of Spartanburg, 6-0, 6-4, 6-4, at the Greenville Country club this afternoon. McCutchen and Carr had reached the final during the morning by defeating John Temple Graves, Jr., and Cochran Graves in their unfinished semi-final match.

The ladies' singles title was won by Miss Lillian Paille, of Charleston, who defeated Miss Laura Seabrook, also of Charleston at 6-2, 1-6, 6-0.

Beck & Gregg beat Buick in a 13-inning affair yesterday by a 10-to-9 score. Buick came up in the ninth frame four runs behind but rallied a rally and tied the score, causing the game to go extra innings. In the 13th the hardware boys managed to score the winning counter. The hitting of Kendrick, for Beck & Gregg, was the best individual performance of the game. He got a homer, triple and single out of six times at bat. Rucker pitched a nice game for Buick, striking out nine. He also led his team in hitting, with three out of seven.

The Southern Spring Bed team beat the league leaders of the Atlanta league Saturday when they turned back the Gideons, 10 to 3. Farmer hit a homer with three men on, and the Spring Bed infield functioned brilliantly. The inability of the Gideons to secure base hits led to their downfall. The timely hitting of the Vinson brothers, Etheridge and Ferguson featured the Red company attack. The fielding on both sides was excellent, only one error marring the play.

Southern Railway won one of its rare victories Saturday in a hot game with the Woodward Avenue team, the final score being 6 to 7. Sullivan pitched a good game until the eighth, when he weakened and allowed four hits and three runs. He was relieved by Hipps, who struck out the next four men without the ball being touched. C. Lawson, in center field for Woodward Avenue, made a fine one-handed catch which would have been good for a homer if he had missed it. Crumbley for the Southern carried off the batting honors with a triple and a double, one of his hits winning the game in the eighth inning when the score was tied at 7-all.

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

TRISTAM TUPPER

Jorgensen, which is called "a particularly fine piece of literary craftmanship," is founded on an "actual bit of railroad history." The author at one time was connected with the construction of one of the railroads in the south.

A reviewer in the New York Times says by way of introduction: "We have a glorified version of elemental forces written with some sensitive insight, but in general succumbing to a lyrical paean, to an inflamed romantic vision. The character of 'Jorgensen' is a man of mystery that is almost myth. He is a he-man of the redblooded school, once removed. He is a builder, who cares for little else than to mould raw products to his will."

His coworkers called him "Kingpin," and he had a habit of influencing them to do the things he wanted them to do by silent direction, for he wasted few words on anybody. The tunneling of great Black mountain was no small man's job. It seemed to be too big a job for the chief resident engineer and when he was gradually being conquered by it Jorgensen appeared on the scene to take the lead, for the railroad had to be built.

Then come the eternal triangle, for it is even found in the heart of the hills, and from this time on the principal characters in this realistic story are Jorgensen, Ellen, wife of Marston, the chief engineer; Rosalee, a daughter of the wilderness, and the wife of a blacksmith.

"A memorable story, told with remarkable power and restraint, elemental as the granite face of Black mountain, unconquerable as the chants of the black men on the mucking cars."—Lippincott's.

OUTLINE OF CHRISTIANITY.

THE STORY OF OUR CIVILIZATION, of which Christianity and Modern Thought is the subject in Volume IV. Among the questions asked are "What have been the achievements of Christianity? What it its use today? What can it do for us tomorrow?"

These questions are examined by scientists, statesmen, clergymen and sociologists from the year one to the present time studying carefully the advance of mankind.

In the general preface the editorial director among other things says: "Every writer was selected with the view that he was master of his subject, regardless of his denomination or Christian faith, this determining the most liberal interdenominational basis, evidence of which can be seen in the table of contents of the volume. He also says that the broadest Christian design for these volumes was decided upon, not difficult to accomplish, with the many experienced and learned pens forming the collaboration.

In the closing paragraph of the preface the editorial director says: "Only with a scheme of organization thus comprehensive could it be hoped to present a picture at once challenging and impartial of Christianity's impact on the lift of mankind during the last twenty centuries."

Volume four is one of the most interesting and instructive of the volumes so far reviewed. It is divided into four books—Book I presents the following subjects: "Foundations of Modern Science;" "Religion and Science in Conflict;" "The New Harmony Between Science and Faith;" Coordination in the Physical and Spiritual Worlds;" "Theories of Evolution and The Evolution of Man; of the Bible;" "Psychology and the Scientific Study of Religion," and "Christian Faith in the Light of Psychology."

The subjects of the other books grow in interest, all being the work of students of the Bible, and just at this time, perhaps more than at any other, the world needs this important record to convince it how much it owes to the Christian faith.

The illustrations are in color and black and white. It is published by The Bethlehem Publishers, and distributed by Dodd, Mead & Co., New York.

PHILADELPHIA CHURCHES

Old Churches and Meeting Houses in and Around Philadelphia. By John T. Faris, author of "Old Roads Out of Philadelphia," "The Romance of Philadelphia," etc. With frontispiece in color and with 73 doubletone illustrations.

No more attractive comment can be made of this handsome volume than is found on the cover of the volume: "Churches are the real custodians of romance. The quaintest corners of history are tucked away in parish registers and ancient burying grounds."

This is doubly true of the old churches of Philadelphia, which have been standing for many, many years, looking as peaceful and serene as the old, old mountains of the world. "What tales are stored in the old churches of Philadelphia that have seen their chimes beaten into bullets for revolutionary muskets and stood unchanged since Franklin had a pew in old Buttonwood and Washington came to services at St. Peter's."

It is in a most interesting style that Dr. Faris writes the stories of these landmarks of this old and famous city in which William Penn was perhaps a frequent churchgoer. The book is written in a bright and original manner and tells many a good story of our ancestors. You will like it. J. B. Lippincott Co., Philadelphia. Price, $6.00.

RUSSELL H. CONWELL'S WORK.

This volume covers the complete story of Dr. Conwell's life. He is well known to readers through his books and to many people through his world-famous lecture, "Acres of Diamonds."

The story about his wonderful achievements was written with his approval, and cooperation by Agnes Rush Burr, who was for many years closely associated with his work. It also includes the lecture which made him famous. It has been delivered oftener and to more people than any other lecture.

Dr. Conwell through his famous lecture has been able to provide money for the education of thousands of young men and women who would otherwise probably not have been able to enjoy the advantages that have proven so beneficial to them. There are 17 illustrations. John C. Winston Co., Philadelphia.

Sainte-Beuve. A Biography. By Lewis Freeman Mott, professor of English in the College of the City of New York. This great literary critic of France is called "one of the five or six most useful servants of the human mind produced by France in the nineteenth century."

Sainte-Beuve was Victor Hugo's closest friend, and was closely associated with men and women of world renown. In fact, during his life there was not a single distinguished author with whom he was not on friendly terms. He knew Merimee, Balzac, Lamartine and George Sand.

This is probably the first time a complete biography has been written of this wonderful critic, the most wonderful of his time. D. Appleton & Co., New York.

THE INTERNATIONAL YEAR BOOK.

The New International Year Book—A compendium of the world's progress, for the year 1925. Herbert Treadwell Wade, editor.

In response to many requests there has been included in this volume the pronunciation of difficult or unusual geographical or other proper names. This system is accompanied by a suitable key to pronunciation and is giving general satisfaction to the readers. In a great many countries special interest has been given to political events. Among other features are prohibition, League of Nations, world court, child labor, immigration, marriage and divorce, women in industry, etc. These are followed by the usual subjects on French; English, German and Spanish literature, all of which are properly classified.

Under "Polar Research" the reader will find many interesting discussions on explorations. It also discusses aeronautics, which also is of great interest, the improvements in the American railway, the Scopes trial in Tennessee—also it has seemed advantageous to present a brief summary of scientific thought in this field which is attracting so much attention today.

The 1925 year book will be found quite interesting to all readers. It is published by the Dodd Mead and company, of New York.

HISTORIC CHURCHES OF THE WORLD.

This handsome volume containing hundreds of pictures of churches of historic interest is by Dr. Robert B. Ludy, acting assistant surgeon, U. S. A., who has written other books of special value. The frontispiece is a most attractive presentation of Christ church, Philadelphia.

The introduction, which is also by the author, is filled with real facts and information which will impress the reader with the real truth of the meaning of churches. In the first paragraph he writes:

"The future safety of the world will depend in a large measure upon the religious training of the people who inhabit every quarter of the globe."

Among the most attractive landmarks of the world are its churches, cathedrals, missions, meeting houses, tabernacles and synagogues—these begin in our own community and the world tourist always runs across them in his travels. In fact he sees so many that he speaks of them as "numberless" cathedrals.

Dr. Ludy writes and has illustrations not only of the cathedrals of the old world, but the new world from the old-fashioned meeting house to the cathedrals. It is a wonderfully written book. The Stratford company, publishers, Boston. Price $5.00.

MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS.

Madame de Pompadour. By Marcelle Tinayre. A Study in Temperament. Translated from the French by Ethel Colburn Mayne. The book has been complimented on its style and artistic presentation by a number of critics. One says, "It is a work of art, displaying in its easy grace the artist's mastery of what must have been a great abundance of material. (G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York.)

The Tide. The Extraordinary Phenomena of the Tide Clearly and Interestingly Presented. By H. A. Marmer, assistant chief of the division of tides of the United States coast and geodetic survey. The book is attractively illustrated which will add to the information that is contained in these about 300 pages. (D. Appleton & Co., New York.)

Stars and Their Stories. By Muriel Kinney, with illustration by Gabriel Pippet, with maps by F. Granger. This is really a book for children and it is very entertaining even for grownups. (D. Appleton & Co.)

Going to the Stars. Pictures and Verses, by the author of "Going to the Sun." By Vachell Lindsay. This story of a trip to the stars is cleverly written and is so original that it will prove quite entertaining. It is written in story form. (D. Appleton & Co.)

Financial Independence—How to Win It. By Harvey A. Blodgett, of which is said "There are numberless books that aim to make the novice an adept at golf, bridge, or conversation, others that will help him to become physically fit; still others that will help him to train his memory or polish up his 'etiquette,'" etc.

But this book simply tells the story of how you may become financially independent. Heretofore the ambitious man or woman has had to learn how to start, how to proceed, how to keep what he has, also how to make use of it profitably. But the author is not indulging in theories. He simply lays down ten fundamental principles, and you do the rest. (D. Appleton & Co., New York.)

JUNIOR BOOKS RECEIVED.

The News-Hunters. By Francis Rolt-Wheeler, with illustrations from photographs. The frontispiece is a print of Benjamin Franklin—the first great American journalist. It is a reproduction of the original picture by D. Martin, taken at the age of 60 years.

The summary made by the publishers with reference to the subject of this volume is in itself most interesting. It covers in a way the American Newspaper press, which is the mighty force in the United States.

"A newspaper is the greatest factor in modern life. The most interesting and lively professions is that of the newspaper man—and the profession is big—it covers a wide field—it is like a big family for there's the editor in chief, the managing editor, the political correspondent at Washington, the war correspondent, the star reporter, makeup editor, city editor, cub reporter, etc. Dr. Wheeler says he knows all about a newspaper from "cub-reporting" on a prairie sheet to managing editor on a big metropolitan daily. Boys and girls, too, will enjoy this story, written by a man whose books are always thoroughly enjoyable. (Lothrop, Lee & Shephard Co., Boston.)

The Andover Way. By Claude M. Fuess, author of "All for Andover." Picture jacket in colors and illustrations by John Goss. A splendid story for boys about a boy who has been christened Alfred Tennyson Harris, and who is considered by every one as a badly petted boy. He was educated by tutors in Europe, and on account of his foreign accent and fastidious manners he is made the subject of many a joke; in fact, the boys called him "Oscar." Becoming disgusted with the college boys' opinion of his seeming weakness he begins to take exercise regularly, develops into a good distance-runner and helps to win the relay race against Exeter, this with many other things soon changes him into a "good fellow," and he makes many good friends among the boys.

"All for Andover" was a most interesting book and the characters reappear in this book. (Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Co.)

MAGAZINES FOR JUNE.

Scribner's Magazine for June is an unusually interesting number with its splendid staff of writers and many attractive illustrations.

The Century is also a most entertaining number and with such writers as Le Gallienne, Web Waldron, Issy Clyde Clark and Charles Edward Russell, as well as many others, it will prove of more than passing interest to its many readers.

LITERARY DRIFTWOOD.

General George Armstrong Custer, 7th cavalry, has slept at West Point for 50 years, but the world has not forgot the bravery of his last stand at Little Big Horn. After the massacre no living thing was found on the field but Captain Keogh's pony, Comanche, and the full tale of that hot June day in June, 1876, has never been told. The Custer Memorial edition of James McLaughlin's, "My Friend the Indian," reviews the events leading up to the massacre and supplements these by an account of the battle by Mrs. Spotted Horn Bull, a woman of the Hunkpapa Sioux who was on the grounds at the time. James McLaughlin was United States Indian inspector for 52 years and his book, now reissued, is at once a sympathetic study of the Indian character and a valuable historical document.

Ralph Henry Barbour, well known as an author of boys' books, was married recently in New York to Mrs. Charlotte Cody, of Salem, Mass. "Pud Pringle, Pirate," his latest story, reminiscent of Huck Finn in its humorous and exciting complications, was recently issued.

Although Bill Tilden, tennis champion, and Leroy Scott, author, did not know each other until this year, the fictional Jerry McAllister, of Scott's novel of tennis, "The Trail of Glory," closely parallels in his psychology the actual Tilden, and lovers of the sport should be interested in Tilden's emphatic indorsement of this story of the tennis championship system.

Joel Chandler Harris, author of the "Uncle Remus" books, was at his desk one night when an old-time reporter looked over and said: "Joe, how do you spell 'graphic?' With one 'f' or two?" "Well," said the kindly Uncle Remus, who was too gentle to hurt even a common adjective, "if you are going to use any, Bill, I guess you might as well go the limit." His daughter-in-law, Julia Collier Harris, has translated from the Rumanian, "The Foundling Prince."

The Midland Authors and Bookfellows in Chicago recently tendered a beautiful birthday testimonial to Clara Louise Burnham, whose novels have already delighted two generations of American readers. Among the speakers was one who had computed the approximate length of her published pages. He found that placed end to end they would make a pathway nearly seven miles long and added that feet that trod that path would not touch one line of bitterness or evil. Mrs. Burnham's publishers are Houghton Mifflin company.

CAMP JESSUP BLAZE DESTROYS BARRACKS

Fire of undetermined origin badly damaged an unoccupied two-story barracks building at Camp Jessup Saturday night, resulting in the loss of several thousand dollars. The building was about 60 feet long and 40 feet wide.

Fire apparatus from Fort McPherson and three Atlanta companies, directed by Lieutenant Smith, quickly quelled the blaze, which threatened to spread to other structures in the vicinity. The building was known during the war as Company M barracks.

Does the Old Bus Skip, Knock on Hills, Use Excessive Gas and Oil, Lack Power and Pep?

If so, it's not to be wondered at when you stop to figure out that the pistons on your car travel up and down 1,000 to 3,000 times per minute.

180,000 Per Hour

Just imagine what that means in going 15,000 miles. Other parts on your car wear under such usage, why not the cylinder walls? It's just "horse sense." Two surfaces in constant friction with one another—Results: Wear. New oversize rings without grinding the bore are useless for you cannot fit a round ring in an oval hole. The ONLY LASTING CURE is to regrind the cylinders and fit with new pistons and rings.

We are experts at this work. Call us on the phone or drop in and we will give you all the dope.

You will find the Garages listed below to be reliable as they use only first-class mechanics---

ADAIR'S ACREAGE TRACTS
Something Unusual
LARGE ACREAGE TRACTS INSIDE THE CITY OR NEARBY; THEY ARE FAST BECOMING EXTINCT. BUT WE HAVE THE FOLLOWING TO OFFER:

BRIARCLIFF ROAD CONTAINS about 73 acres and is located just a short distance from Wallace station, at the intersection of Briarcliff Road and Clifton Road. We believe that this is the only tract of land now being offered for sale as acreage in that particular section. Beyond the boundaries of Druid Hills, the Tidwell property is owned by a strong syndicate, holding it for development; and the next tract beyond is that purchased as the site of the Westchester Biltmore golf course. The Sale property is the only other large holding in that vicinity. The land we offer for sale at $600 an acre is the only land that can be bought in that section at such a price. It invites a purchaser who is looking forward to enhancement from the development of surrounding property. We ask anyone to try to buy some other land in that locality at a price of $600 an acre and see how successful he will be. We believe that the purchaser of this tract who will invest, along with his money, a certain amount of patience, will reap the reward which a man with vision and foresight is entitled to gain.

CONTAINS SEVEN AND A HALF ACRES FRONTS about 300 feet on Stewart avenue, just south of Lexington avenue; runs back over 1,000 feet, touching the L. & N. railroad; has a good two-story house. This tract for $15,000. We can make long terms.

FIVE ACRES ON LEE STREET IN WEST END; has a frontage of 980 feet; this is the Anthony Murphy home place; a conspicuous parcel; suitable for subdivision or industrial uses. Price $25,000.

PRYOR STREET ACREAGE CONTAINS six acres; just beyond underpass; fronts 777 feet; also has frontage of 690 feet on University avenue; lies directly on Southern railroad, between plants of Magnus Metal company and Buckeye Cotton Oil company. This industrial site of six acres for $15,000. We can make long terms.

TWELVE ACRES IN WEST END THREE blocks from Cascade avenue, near Beecher street; a wooded tract surrounded by streets. Price only $500 an acre. This cannot be duplicated anywhere in that section.

THE CONSTITUTION'S REAL ESTATE REVIEW

:: :: :: :: CONDUCTED IN THE INTEREST OF DEVELOPMENT OF ATLANTA AND THE SOUTH :: :: :: ::

'Red Seal Homes' on Increase Says Secretary Grady Kirbo

BY GRADY L. KIRBO,
Secretary-Manager of the Atlanta Electrical League.

The Atlanta Electrical league has been active in Red Seal work only for six months, and there are now 90 actually completed Red Seal homes in Atlanta, with applications on hand for five more Red Seal contracts.

Red Seal homes mean homes wired for the most convenient application of electricity. Heretofore wiring contracts were secured by local electrical contractors by a mere low bid, eliminating outlets that should be installed throughout the home for future use of appliances. Now—the contractor members of the league are Red Seal experts and with their knowledge of how furniture should be arranged, and with a fore-knowledge of what electrical appliances shall be used, he is in a position to talk in a most intelligent manner to the prospective home builder.

Placards on Homes.

With Red Seal progressing to a noticeable extent, and with "Electrical Home" placards appearing on so many of the new homes in the residential sections the realtors became interested with the conclusion that quite a few of the leading realtors and building concerns have contracted to wire all of their homes on the Red Seal plan. These realtors and builders found that by giving their contract to a Red Seal contractor the installation would have every possible care, the very best material would be used, the runs of the cable would be straight, bends would be easy, and the greatest care exercised on the part of the workmen.

Each installation is inspected by the league inspector, and if found correct, a permanent label is affixed to the panel board and a certificate is issued to the builder certifying to an adequate and correct installation.

Outlets Per Home Increased.

Through our direct contact with architects, home builders, and the public who have visited electrical shows and Red Seal homes, we know by an actual survey that 54 per cent more outlets are being provided in the homes that have been constructed in Atlanta under this plan the first half of 1926.

The Red Seal plan is the paramount feature of a general tie in of all of the electrical industry in any community for the promotion of electricity.

Appliance advertising campaigns are carried on to the entire satisfaction of manufacturers, dealers and distributors, in conjunction with a "June Bride" and "Give something electrical" campaign possiblity.

Work of Electrical League.

After such a short time in the promotion of this interesting work I think that the organization of an electrical league in any community spells much for the local electrical industry, and that the Red Seal plan is not merely a success for wiring and wiring materials, but is a sound basis and foundation for success for the entire industry and manufacturers and distributors of all electrical appliances.

To the Atlanta Electrical league it has given a new vision of service opportunity, and has already proved itself for a common purpose.

Announcement has been made by various leagues that they are applying for a Red Seal license and every indication is that with its rapid spread in the United States that the plan offers a solution to many of the undesirable features of the electrical industry that have been contended with for years.

Real Estate Men Hear Hansell's Talk on Sewers

Edward M. Chapman and H. H. Robinson, of Adair Realty & Trust company; John J. Thompson, of John J. Thompson company, and A. J. McBride, of the Columbia Realty & Trust company, who attended the convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, in Tulsa, June 8-11, were called upon by President Smith at the meeting of the Atlanta Real Estate board, to state to those present a brief outline of the convention activities and the advantages offered, it was announced here Saturday.

Each stated that the convention was more than helpful and that the side trips offered by the other cities in Oklahoma were very instructive and that the effort and money spent were good investments. They urged that efforts be started earlier next year to work up a large delegation for the 1927 convention.

W. A. Hansell, chief of construction for the city, was principal speaker. He spoke on plans contemplated to bring about a new sewer system for Atlanta. He explained the magnitude of this work and the great need at present of this public improvement.

Mr. Hansell was very clear in his talk and outlined perfectly the advantageous ways of spending the $2,000,000 that would be provided by the bond issue for the sewer system. He also explained in detail the series of maps that will be drawn up to carry out this improvement. These maps include topographical maps, property line maps, and others. The real estate men were very much interested in this phase of work and stated to Mr. Hansell that this would fill a long-felt want among real estate men and would be instrumental in increasing the tax returns of the city as it would definitely establish property lines.

Members assured him of their cooperation in the future in carrying out these suggestions.

HUNGER STRIKER SENT TO KENTUCKY INSANE HOSPITAL

Danville, Ky., June 26.—(AP)—John Middleton, who has been on two hunger strikes in the local jail since he was first confined there on June 4, today was adjudged insane by a jury. He was taken to the Eastern State hospital for the insane at Lexington this afternoon.

Physicians who on Thursday examined Middleton declared on the stand today that, in their opinion, he was criminally insane.

Middleton, placed on the stand, testified that he did not want to go to the asylum nor to the penitentiary, but wanted to go home to his children. His testimony was filled with profanity, and he declared emphatically that if he were released he would not steal again.

Hollywood Cemetery Co. Plans Development of Nature

Hollywood cemetery will be one of the most beautiful spots in the next few years when the program of development now planned by the Hollywood Cemetery company, gets under way. Renewed activity in improving upon nature's beauties has begun in this cemetery and new plans will be carried out as rapidly as possible.

Fully 35 years ago this property was selected for a cemtery site, the natural beauties of the land at that time being so striking as to make it quickly apparent that it was an ideal spot to help nature in enhancing it as a burial place. It would be difficult to find a site which would more readily lend itself to the skill of the landscape artist.

Hollywood cemetery is not a new burial ground, but has been in use as a resting place for the dead for a number of years, there having been approximately 8,000 burials and many monuments and stone markers erected. The vast expense of this burial ground, however, has been such as to need concrete organization, and the Hollywood Cemetery company directors have placed the entire property in trust with one of Atlanta's largest trust companies. Under the terms of this trusteeship it is provided that approximately $2,000,000 will be expended in improvements, to include extensive terracing, road building, walks, trees, shrubbery, flowers, plants, and the like. An old English style chapel will be built with rest rooms for visitors and every convenience provided.

The plans of the committee on improvements call for massive arches at the entrance to the cemetery, and for the expenditure of $150,000 on the initial beautifying of the burial ground. Thereafter the improvement work will be continued as fast as possible.

Eastern Time Is Urged Here At Conference

Adoption of eastern time for Atlanta is urged by the Atlanta real estate board's public affairs committee, of which Mr. A. S. Adams is chairman, it was announced Saturday. A resolution was presented by Mr. Adams at the last meeting of the board and was unanimously approved.

The resolution is as follows:

To the ordinance committee:

The members of the Atlanta real estate board at their luncheon at the Ansley hotel at 12:30 o'clock on Thursday, June 24, unanimously voted and voiced their approval of the ordinance introduced by J. L. McLendon to have Atlanta placed in the eastern time zone, the change to go into effect the first of the month following the enactment of the proposed measure.

It is felt that the placing of Atlanta in the eastern time zone will equalize our time with that of the larger cities of the east and south, will facilitate and be of assistance in business efficiency and, at the same time, bring about longer hours of daylight in the afternoon in which the people of this community can use in helpful and constructive recreation.

Therefore, members of the Atlanta real estate board urge and request the ordinance committee to report favorably on this measure, and, at the same time, the office of the board offers to the committee any assistance that it may afford in carrying this measure to a successful end.

J. R Smith, president; A. S. Adams, chairman public affairs committee; J. C. Robinson, executive secretary.

Mr. Adams, in discussing the adoption of eastern time for Atlanta, stated that in his opinion it was greatly needed and would render a service in a manner that could not be appreciated until the new time was adopted and the operation of same was thoroughly established and that he sincerely hoped that the ordinance committee would see fit to approve of this measure.

Former Wealthy Broker Convicted Of Swindling

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

New York, June 26.—James Milne Smith, one of the "Mayflower Smiths," was convicted of stock swindling by a jury in general sessions court today.

Mr. Smith, a tall, gray man with a dignity befitting his 61 years, gave no outward sign of his perturbation when Judge McIntyre said he would pronounce sentence next Thursday. A five-year sentence may be imposed.

The elderly prisoner, who once was wealthy, a companion of the socially-elect and high in brokerage circles, was convicted of having mulcted Mrs. Grace Barton Randall, of Eastern Parkway, Brooklyn, a life-long friend, out of $17,000 in a stock deal. Mrs. Randall testified that her erstwhile friend and broker had written her verses in answer to her demands for the return of her money.

Several churchmen whose names appear in the social register, testified as character witnesses for Mr. Smith, a former usher in fashionable St. Bartholomew's church in Park avenue. He lived with his wife at 54 East 54th street.

The prisoner was at liberty on $3,000 bail for more than two years after his arrest in the spring of 1924.

In defending himself against the charges, the broker testified that he had bought stock for her without margin, and that her holdings had been wiped out in a market flurry.

NEGRO WOMAN, 115 YEARS OLD, DIES IN CHICAGO

Dollars Saved; Losses of Heat Stopped at Roof

Article 3—The First Place to Insulate.

Most heat losses in the average home are through the roof. If your roof is uninsulated, if your ceilings are ineffectual barriers—out goes your heat. So the first place to install insulation is at the roof, if the attic is used for living quarters, or over the ceilings of the rooms below, if the attic is unoccupied.

Roof and attic insulation also mean greater comfort in summer. We all are familiar with the attic which is "hot as an oven" from June to September—the hot attic that makes comfort out of the question in the living quarters.

Now, what can be done with a heat-leaky roof? Insulating quilting may be laid over the rafters under the roof boards. Or a semi-rigid board of vegetable fiber or a rigid board of compressed cork, or wood, or wood fiber or of gypsum may be nailed to the underside of the rafters.

Statistics show that about one-third of the $50,880,787 fire losses that occur annually in frame houses originate on or near the roof. So the roof insulator should be a fire stop, too. Again, the cheapest way to remodel a home to give additional quarters is to make the attic livable. So an insulator should be used which will provide a ceiling. That means it must be such as can be decorated easily.

Can all these qualities—insulation, fire protection and adaptability to decoration—be obtained in a single material? Yes, one of the mineral wallboards listed above is used by many home owners to solve just this problem. Nailed directly to the rafters as a fire stop and insulator, it can be painted, papered, or calcimined when the time for fitting up the attic comes. When the value of fire-protection is added to the low cost of this remodeling plus the fuel savings, it will be seen that this form of insulation actually saves money.

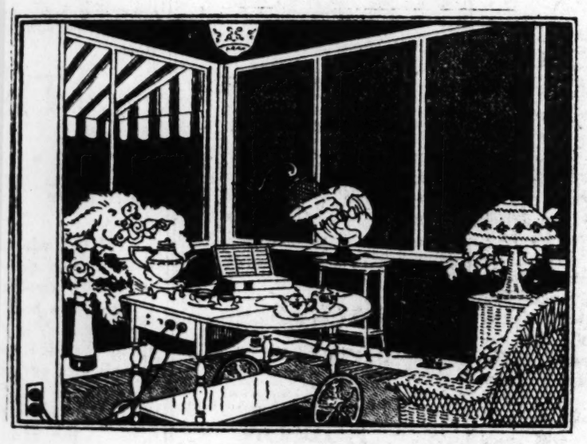

If you are sure you never will want to make living quarters of the attic, then you can ignore the roof and insulate the ceilings of the rooms below. Rigid or semi-rigid boards may be nailed onto the ceiling joists. Or insulating quilts may be laid over them. Or an insulating filler may be poured directly on top of the lath and plaster between the joists.

Whichever plan is adopted, the insulator should be fireproof as well as insulating and it should be light so as not to increase the dead load.

If the mineral fillers are studied, some can be found which possess all these qualities. For example, there is dry thermofill gypsum, which is a flaky, asbestos-like material that merely is poured in place over the lath and plaster of the ceilings of the rooms below, or between rough and finished flooring.

This material does not "dust." It finds its way into every nook and cranny, and it can be installed by the home owner himself. And if the attic walls and ceilings are finished with mineral wallboard to make additional living quarters, the dry fill gypsum can be placed behind the boards for additional insulation.

(The next article will tell how main walls can be insulated.)

Note the handy location of convenience outlets.

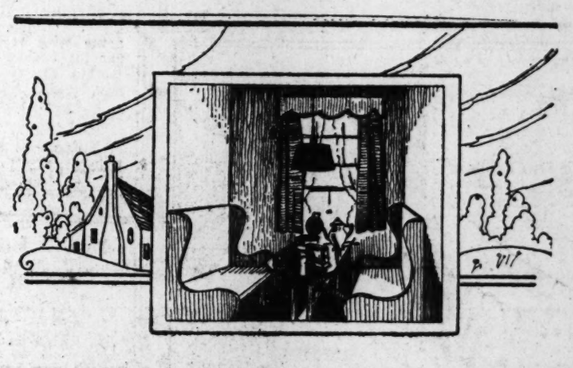

THE RED SEAL PLAN
FITS YOUR HOME FOR SERVICE

No wiring system is adequate unless it makes provision for electric service at every possible vantage point. It is just as necessary that you have sufficient convenience outlets on your porch as in your dining room or living room.

Think . . . what a cool, pleasant spot a shady porch would be . . . an electric fan . . . a wired tea cart fitted to serve luncheon or supper to the family, or refreshments to your afternoon club . . . adequate lighting fixtures to read or sew by in the evenings . . . convenience outlets that can be used day in and day out for the electric sewing machine or electric iron. For breakfast room, work room for mother, or for informal entertaining, the porch is ideal during the hot months.

The Red Seal Plan for adequate house-wiring will insure the availability of electric service in every form desired. Not only may your NEW home be wired Red Seal, but your OLD home also may be brought up to its standard.

JEWETT TO PUBLICLY CLIMB STONE MOUNTAIN TODAY

NEW-DAY JEWETT INVITES PUBLIC SEE PERFORMANCE

First Six-Cylinder Car To Climb Stone Mountain "In the Open," 3:30 This Afternoon.

TEST OF CLIMBING, BRAKING CAPACITY

Lawton Johnson To Pilot Car Over Hazardous Crevices of Granite Monolith.

The zero hour for the New Day Jewett and Lawton Johnson, pilot, is 3:30 this afternoon. The objective is the peak of Stone mountain, where few have reached and many have fallen by the wayside.

The purpose is to publicly demonstrate the unusual climbing power, sturdiness and braking capacity of the "New Day Jewett," one of the new sensations of the six cylinder light car field.

The Paige-Jewett Sales company, local distributors, invites the public to come and witness the performance of this new car. "We are glad to have the public witness this attempt, though we know full well that the hazard is great and that few cars and few men have the capital to stand such a strain," said T. V. Morrison, Jr., vice president, in making the announcement Saturday. "I am informed that only one other make of car has ever invited the public to witness its effort to climb this great barren mass of treacherous granite, and that this car was one much lighter and smaller than the New Day Jewett, but so certain are we of its ability to negotiate this steep ascent that has proven the Waterloo of many a car, that we unhesitatingly invite the public to witness our victory or defeat.

"The car will be strictly 'stock' in every respect. There will be no change in its mechanism and we invite anyone to inspect the car before or after the ascent, as well as to witness the climb and descent."

Mr. Morrison states that Woco Pep motor fuel will be used for fuel and Tiolene, pure Pennsylvania motor oil, will lubricate the motor which because of the strenuous nature of the undertaking, will require the best lubrication possible, as well as a fuel that will vaporize instantly.

Miller tires were selected because of their ability to grip the slick surface of the smooth stretches of granite and to withstand the bumps and bruises which will inevitably be sustained when ascending the roughed places.

The descent, like the ascent, will be a public demonstration particularly to show the remarkable braking power of the Paige four-wheel hydraulic brakes which are standard equipment on the Jewett, and the road-gripping qualities of the Miller tires. All of the items of equipment used are standard equipment, and identically the same as will be found on all owners' cars.

Mr. Morrison states that owing to the treacherous nature of the surface over which the car will have to be piloted, and the inconvenience of the spectators, the climb will not be attempted in event of rainfall during the time set for the undertaking.

PIKES PEAK MOTOR PROVES ITS METTLE

"Americans may take pride in the performance ability of the Chandler six," said C. S. Thompson, of the Marmon Atlanta company, local Chandler distributors, yesterday, "for this powerful six holds world records for hill climbing superiority, for speed and for durability.

"The acknowledged important hill climbing championship contest is the National A. A. A. hill climb which is held annually at Pikes Peak, Colorado Springs, Colo.," mentioned Mr. Thompson.

Pikes Peak World Famed.

"Pikes Peak is the highest motor mountain climb in the world. For 12 1-2 miles the road winds tortuously, in and out around precipitous bends and hairpin curves to the summit of this mighty mountain.

"Yet Chandler smashed all previous time marks up this noted climb, and established a new world record by making the amazing time of 17 minutes 48 2-5 seconds.

"This achievement bids fair to stand for many years to come. The new Chandler record clipped nearly a half minute from the previous mark, and Chandler was almost a full minute ahead of the second best car that competed against it.

"Yet this achievement, important as it is, is not by any means the extent of Chandler's championship performance. Chandler holds other records that are equally impressive, and equally difficult," continued Mr. Thompson.

"No one can dispute the remarkable Chandler speed and durability record made at the Culver City, Calif., race track.

"Here a stock Chandler Comrade roadster with special gear ratio traveled 1,000 miles in the astonishing time of 689 minutes, at an average speed of 86.9 miles per hours.

"To fully appreciate this remarkable performance, just imagine an automobile averaging nearly 87 miles an hour from dawn to dusk—for eleven and one-half continuous hours. To make such an average, Chandler had to exceed 92 miles an hour to maintain its average speed per mile of 41.3 seconds."

PREDICTS STABILITY IN BUSINESS CONDITIONS

"American business should face the second six months of 1926 with genuine confidence. Times are good. Times will continue to be good. There is no ground for any pessimism."

This is the opinion of Walter P. Chrysler, president, Chrysler corporation.

"A great many business men study graphs on which are indicated current economic tendencies," said Mr. Chrysler. "These men have observed business cycles and there is the feeling among certain business men and bankers that the second six months of 1926 should see a certain economic reaction, in fact, a slight depression. That feeling is reflected in the attitude of the people generally who after a period of prosperity begin to look around as if anticipating a change in business conditions.

"There is no sound economic reason for any change in business conditions at the present time, business cycles to the contrary. Times should continue to be good.

"To be sure everyone is not satisfied with the volume of business or its profitableness. But was there ever a time when everyone was satisfied? Banks report that the volume of checks drawn in payment for goods and freight carried by the railroads, has continued to exceed that of any previous year. Demand for labor is the most active since 1923.

"The automotive industry is enjoying good business. Earnings for the first quarter of 1926 exceed those of the first quarter, 1925, for most of the companies. The Chrysler corporation, for example, had earnings of $3,501,000 during the first quarter of last year and earnings of $4,112,000 during the first quarter of this year."

Mr. Chrysler reports that the Chrysler corporation will produce in excess of 15,000 cars during June. Production on the new "60" model has reached 450 a day. Inventories are low and stocks in the hands of dealers are below normal at this time of the year.

SCIENCE ENLISTS AID OF SPARK PLUG CORE

New scientific attention has been directed to sillimanite, the rare mineral used in making insulators for Champion spark plugs, through its utilization in giving much longer life to thermocouple tubes used with pyrometers in testing high temperatures.

The pyrometer is a delicate temperature measuring instrument, with couples of platinum wire encased in protecting tubes continuously subjected to temperatures of several thousand degrees.

Thermocouple tubes have been made for years of the finest refractories obtainable. But because of the deterioration of the tubes due to extreme heat and penetration of gases, the upkeep on the instruments has been a large item of cost in plants where accurate testing of high temperatures is an important part of the manufacturing process.

In Champion spark plug cores, sillimanite had demonstrated its high mechanical strength under severe stress, its resistance to great heats and that it is non-porous and impervious to gas penetration.

This led to the development of thermocouple tubes of sillimanite by the ceramic scientists at the company's insulator plant at Detroit. So successful were they in the great kilns in which Champion cores are fired that the Brown Instrument company of Philadelphia, recognized as a leader in producing high heat testing instruments, has made arrangements for the production of champion sillimanite thermocouple tubes on a commercial basis.

"We regard the adoption of sillimanite thermocouple tubes by the Brown company as a strong indorsement for Champion spark plugs, which are all made with sillimanite insulators," says R. A. Stranahan, president of the Champion Spark Plug company of Toledo.

Power and Durability

You who drive one of America's twenty million automobiles need no one to tell you that a new day is here!

A day of motorized living and working—of swift movement. A day, too, of streets and highways jammed and clogged with traffic—bringing problems of road widening, of new thoroughfares, of traffic control.

The time has now come when the automobile must adapt itself to conditions for which it is itself responsible.

For years, the Paige organization—one of the first ten in the industry—has been devoting its superior skill and its tremendous resources in men and money to a tireless study of new-day motoring requirements. Thus has been evolved the New-Day Jewett which we now present as the supreme dvelopment of engineering science — one which meets in every way the exacting demands of every motorist.

A Test of Performance

To prove the claims of performance attributed the New-Day Jewett, this unusual and gruelling test has been arranged by the Paige - Jewett Sales Company.

Promptly at 3:30 p. m., in the presence of throngs who gather to see the climb — a regular stock model taken from the show room at 469 Peachtree street will start on its more than 1,200 feet of pull, up the largest single piece of solid granite in the world.

Such a remarkable accomplishment will mark another triumph for the New-Day Jewett, and prove conclusive supremacy.

Come out Sunday, June 27, at 3:30 p. m., and see the interesting test.

Public Invited Free!

Catch the Stone Mountain trolley at Pryor and Alabama streets, which leaves on the half hour, or drive out to see this remarkable performance test. Absolutely no admission charges — the public is invited—FREE.

Continuous Poultry Cars in 1927 Planned For Bainbridge Dealers

Bainbridge, Ga., June 26.—(Special.)—Cooperative poultry sales closed for the summer here this week when the pick-up car operating on the Atlantic Coast Line railroad under the auspices of the state bureau of markets, with County Agent D. E. Sawyer and the Decatur County Livestock association with Herbert Townsend, president, in charge of local interests, bought 3,631 pounds of poultry for a total of $799.22.

The car will operate again next fall beginning with the Thanksgiving trade and in 1927 the car will start in February, running continuously every month, according to news of the future plans at this time.

This method of disposing of poultry has proved very popular with local poultry dealers.

MAY CHEVROLET'S LARGEST MONTH

Another monthly production record for Chevrolet motor cars was shattered in May when the Chevrolet Motor company produced 74,617 automobiles, the largest single month's production in the history of the company.

This production also constitutes the largest single month's production of modern three-speed transmission cars by any manufacturer in the automobile industry, and is an increase of 21,620 cars over May, 1925, when 52,997 cars were produced. With sales continuing to break all previous records, the production of Chevrolet cars for 1926 is expected to total approximately 700,000, as compared with 519,000 cars made during 1925.

During the first five months of 1926, up to the first of June, a total of 307,332 Chevrolet cars were produced, an increase of 102,444 cars over the same period in 1925, when total production reached 194,888 units. Sales will continue to break precedents throughout the summer months, Chevrolet sales officials predict.

"Our constant endeavor to improve our product, taking advantage of the most modern appliances known in the automobile industry, with never-relaxing vigilance on maintenance of quality, is meeting with the sincere appreciation of the public," said W. S. Knudsen, president of the Shevrolet Motor company.

"The $10,000,000 expansion program of the company, providing facilities for production of one million Chevrolet cars during 1927, is well under way at this time, with ground broken and building additions being made at Chevrolet plants throughout the country. Machinery necessary for the increase in our production is now in transit from the manufacturers, and by January 1, the company will be fully prepared to go ahead with its enlarged program."

A comparison of monthly production records for the first five months of 1926 with the same period in 1925 follows:

Month.	1926.	1925.
January	45,088	18,292
February	51,903	28,081
March	65,107	43,495
April	71,157	52,023
May	74,617	52,997

'SE-FLY-GO' PLEASES PUBLIC, SAYS MAKER

Se-Fly-Go, the scientific insecticide just placed on the market this season by the Selig company, seems to be meeting public requirements for an insecticide with a "kindly odor" and a "killer instinct," according to an announcement Saturday from the company.

Se-Fly-Go, according to the manufacturer, is guaranteed and may be successfully used for the destruction of most generally known household insects. Discriminating people are particularly favorable toward Se-Fly-Go, because of its very pleasant odor and its non-staining qualities.

The Selig company is one of the largest manufacturers of insecticides in the south and is known to manufacture nothing but high-grade materials. The fact that every package of Se-Fly-Go carries a "money back" guarantee seems to indicate that Se-Fly-Go will assist in maintaining this reputation, says the manufacturer.

The fact that such a product is needed and that it will tend to better health conditions, makes it fill a long-felt want by the people, and up to the present time hundreds of thousands of gallons of Se-Fly-Go have been shipped to various sections of the country and met approval in practically every instance, it was said by representatives of the manufacturer.

4 BRAKES HOLD CAR ON 45 DEGREE HILL

An automobile on a trestle at the precarious angle of 45 degees, restrained only by the holding power of its hydraulic four-wheel brakes from plunging through the plate glass show window into the crowds on the sidewalk, is a striking display made in various cities by Paige and Jewett dealers.

So startling is the pitch of the trestle that very few persons pass by the window without stopping to inspect the car. In fact, the angle is so steep that many suspect that the car is fastened by bolts or chains, but one eastern dealer offered to give away the car to anyone who could prove that it was held by any other agency than the Paige hydraulic brakes.

This is a demonstration that could not have been staged in the days of two-wheel brakes, for the adhesion between the two rear tires and the boards of the trestle would not be sufficient to hold the car from slipping.

Not only does this demonstration prove the power of the brakes, but it shows very conclusively that Paige has developed a hydraulic system that is leakproof. The brakes are held by locking the pedal in its depressed condition, which means that constant pressure is maintained on the fluid in the brake lines and four brake cylinders.

Should the least leak exist anywhere in the system, the pressure on the brake cylinders would gradually ease off, and then the car would take a header through the glass. Only with a brake system known to be positively free from the chance of leaking could this demonstration be attempted.

One wise man in the east did claim the award of the car on the grounds that it was not the brakes that held the car on the grade, but "the friction between the tires and the planks of the trestle." The dealer offered to release the brake pedal if the claimant of the prize would pay the damages —whereupon the wise man withdrew his claim. His technicality was all wrong anyway—for there is no friction where there is no motion.

COLORED KNIGHTS MEET AT BAINBRIDGE

Bainbridge, Ga., June 26.—(Special.)—Plans are being made for the entertainment of the 4,000 delegates expected here, July 13 when Bainbridge will be host to the state convention of the colored Knights of Pythias.

A committee of colored citizens headed by Drs. Hutto and Griffin have met with the chamber of commerce in behalf of the entertainment feature and its cost incident to the convention. A sum of about $3,500 will be needed. The colored citizens will raise $2,000 of the amount and the chamber of commerce will subscribe the remaining $1,500.

A Test for Any Brakes

This demonstration is being put on in the showrooms of the Paige-Jewett Sales company, 469 Peachtree street, and demonstrate clearly ability of the four-wheel hydraulic brakes to stop a car no matter what degree a grade might be.

MARMON REPLIES TO TALK OF SMALL CARS

The unusual volume of anonymous small car propaganda which has been appearing in the last few weeks in newspapers and automotive trade journals has given rise to much speculation and many rumors, founded or unfounded, as the case may be.

This speculation was heard in particularly strong terms at the recent Indianapolis 500-mile race, in which all of the contending entries were small.

Since Marmon Motor Car company engineers and executives have recently made frequent trips to European factories, G. M. Williams, president of the Marmon company, was asked as to his attitude toward small-car development and what it might mean to the industry.

Traffic Conditions Problem.

"For the last 10 years," said Mr. Williams, "every serious-minded student of automobile development has recognized that constantly thickening traffic conditions, particularly in congested metropolitan centers, would sooner or later compel all manufacturers to give increasing attention to small-car production.

"The stronger and more progressive factories have been unquestionably awake to the tendency of the time and have spent much time and money trying to interpolate European swank and style with sound American engineering practice.

"I regard it as highly important that the industry guard against being swept into extreme measures by all this small-car agitation, bearing in mind always that the big, luxurous car has become an inherent part of our transportation system, and utterly indispensable to the type of family of means which loves to go places and do things.

"So far as Marmon is concerned, we have become, during the course of years, so inseparably identified with this large car field that nothing could induce us to even consider departing from it or in any way temporizing with our present large-car program.

"However, it is the Marmon policy to study the requirements of our clientele and to make it possible for Marmon owners to find Marmon cars at all times adequate to their needs, however much those needs may vary or change.

Second Choice Difficult.

"In selecting a second car the type of family educated to Marmon standards has found some difficulty securing those elements of comfort to which they have become accustomed.

"It is a fact that Marmon engineers and executives have recently spent much time abroad, making an exhaustive study of the architectural phases of Europea motor cars, which have found such favor with Americans of means and discrimination.

"Concurrently, our engineers have considered the possibility of adapting European engine practice to American manufacture, arriving at the conclusion that low horsepower prevailing in Europe would be distasteful to the impetuous and more dynamic American temperament.

"It seems that the logical solution is a combination of the best elements of European body design with tried American engine practice. Unquestionably, this country is realizing the necessity for a small, beautiful, high-powered type of car that will go far toward at least temporarily relieving our traffic congestion and solving the parking problem. Beauty, speed, safety and power in miniature seem to be the next call in prospect for the American manufacturer, and, of course, the American builder will, true to tradition, meet the requirement fully.

"If this small car discussion is tending to focus itself on Marmon, we have no means of preventing it, although I am quite sure that other manufacturers are giving as much thought to the matter as are we ourselves.

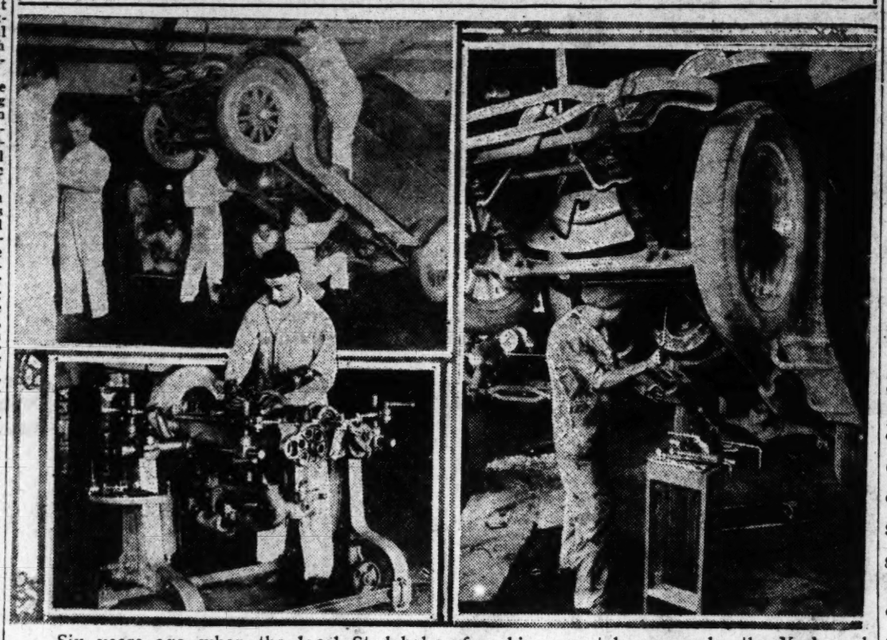

"I have only this to say—we have been very alert to this small-car tendency for over two years, and if we should at any time believe it expedient or incumbent on us, in consideration of the Marmon clientele, to produce a small second car, we are completely prepared, and such a car would be strictly supplemental to the big car on which Marmon reputation has been laboriously built up over a long period of years. In the event of such collateral production we would seriously attempt to make any small car that bore the Marmon name the most unusual and interesting of its kind in the world."

HUGH HODGSON HEADS LUCY COBB MUSIC

Athens, Ga., June 26.—(AP)—Hugh Hodgson, of Athens and Atlanta, well-known southern musician who received his training in this country and abroad, will head the department of music at Lucy Cobb institute here again during the coming session, Dr. W. F. Hollingsworth, president, announces.

Mr. Hodgson will be assisted in the department by several persons to be announced later, it was announced.

Studebakers Repaired Under Ideal Conditions

Six years ago when the local Studebaker franchise was taken over by the Yarbrough Motor company, one of their first moves was to organize and operate a service station with machinery and facilities to meet every demand. Since the inauguration of this policy they have constantly added every new feature that would insure better service. Today they have perhaps one of the finest repair shops in the country, and is largely responsible for the fact that over 90 per cent of the Studebaker owners in Fulton county use Yarbrough's service when needed.

The above photos made in their service plant recently give an excellent idea of the conditions under which their men work. They are not required to get in unnatural positions at any time, thus assuring the owner absolutely accurate adjustments.

Peach Values Increase.

Fort Valley, Ga., June 26.—(Special.)—The Peach county board of tax equalizers has finished the review of the tax returns and the digest is expcted to show an appreciable increase over last year.

ENROLLMENT LARGE AT ATHENS SCHOOL

Athens, Ga., June 26.—(Special.) Registration at the University of Georgia summer school has broken all previous records with 1,438 students enrolled before the first week ended. These are students seeking degrees. It is expected that 2,000 will have registered before the nine weeks' session closes. This will include the superintendents, women's club members, and agricultural agents here for conferences.

The Woman's club conference will open Monday and many leading Georgia women will be here for the sessions. It is expected that a large attendance will feature this year's conference. The P.-T. A. work will continue through the session.

Among the persons to speak during the week are Mrs. C. S. Selover, of Cleveland, Ohio; Mrs. J. N. Fleming, of Cleveland; Mrs. A. P. Brantley, Georgia; Chancellor C. M. Snelling, Dr. J. S. COTTON FLEA HITS BIBB COUNTY FARMS

Macon, Ga., June 26.—(Special.)—Fifty acres of cotton on the farm of J. T. Gantt, in Bibb county, where the cotton was beginning to square, has been ruined by the Texas flea, it was discovered this afternoon.

Small squares have turned brown after being stung by the pest and have fallen from the stalks. There are not two squares to the stalk left in this field.

"Farmers don't realize that the Texas cotton flea is in their fields," said D. R. Bruce, county agricultural agent, "but in most fields, if they will shake the stalks and watch, they'll find the tiny fleas hopping back toward the stalk. They are little larger than the gnat and are doing greater damage than the boll weevils. We have no boll weevils in this county."

LAMAR FARMERS REPORT FLEA INVASION.

Barnesville, Ga., June 26.—(Special.)—Farmers of Lamar and adjoining counties are greatly concerned about the damage being done to cotton by the cotton flea. It is reported that the insect is numerously found in nearly all cotton fields.

The squares are being eaten and some farmers are almost panic-stricken over the situation because of the numerous misfortunes they have had to their crops in recent years. They became much alarmed recently over the worm which developed in their vetch, which did damage to other crops, but that excitement has entirely subsided.

The farmers of this section have just harvested the best wheat and oat crops they have had in many years.

MELONS MOVE SOON FROM TERRELL FARMS

Dawson, Ga., June 26.—(Special.)—Melons are expected to begin moving out of Terrell county about the first week in July, according to those in close touch with the crop. The peak will probably be reached about July 20-25, says County Agent Gibson and it is expected that between 500 and 600 cars will be shipped.

A special campaign is being waged to get the growers to prune their vines to not over two to the vine and produce a high quality product.

HEAVY RAIN HELPS CROPS IN HANCOCK

Sparta, Ga., June 26.—(Special.)—Practically every section of Hancock county was visited yesterday afternoon by a heavy rain which continued for several hours. Although showers had fallen in some parts of the county, this rain was the first some sections had received. Local farmers predict that this rain will almost make the cotton and corn crop. Prospects are better in this county now than for the past five or six years, according to leading farmers.

DECATUR PRIMARY SET FOR SEPTEMBER 8

Bainbridge, Ga., June 26.—(Special.)—The Decatur county democratic executive committee in session with J. C. Hale, chairman, presiding has called the date of the primary for September 8.

TRUCK GROWERS REAP HARVEST IN BROOKS

BY EDNA CAIN DANIEL.

Quitman, Ga., June 26.—(Special.) Truck crops all over Brooks county are bringing big returns this season and it is evident that farmers have their trucking operations organized on a profitable basis and have solved the marketing end of the game.

Pavo is being likened to Plant City and similar trucking and plant raising centers in Florida. A tremendous volume of farm produce is shipped from there and the Ballard plant farm near Pavo is one of the largest in the country and has established a new record in Georgia in this line. W. W. Williams is another grower of plants and shipped in carload lots this spring.

Income is Large.

Barwick has developed this season as a big trucking center, following in the footsteps of Pavo, its neighbor. For days from $1,000 to $1,500 per day has been received there for truck shipments. At present this place is leading the county in the volume of watermelon shipments and has the largest acreage in the county.

R. E. Bower, of Dixie, is regarded as the pioneer truck grower of the county and is leading in large shipments from Dixie. Near Dixie the Evergreen and Ozell sections are almost solid truck with Ozell as shipping point. Some of the individual records give an idea of the amount of money received. The crops are mostly beans, squash, cucumbers, and the farmers have learned to plant a small acreage of each crop.

W. F. Boles has received $389.16 from one and a half acres planted in beans and squash; C. E. Gilmer got $800 from four acres of squash and beans; J. F. Carter received $300 from less than an acre of these crops; D. M. Highsmith $300 from one acre and C. E. W. Scales has made over $600 from three acres.

Local buyers handle the shipments and G. W. Ward has bought and shipped 2,222 hampers of beans and squash from Ozella. J. P. Ward was the first farmer in this section of Ozella to grow beans for market.

At Morven a local man, B. F. Chambers, is in charge of the packing house and Hugh Griffin, a former man from Morven, who has been in Florida 15 years is spending the summer there and buying and shipping to Florida markets. Other local business men are buyers and the whole situation in this respect is better than when the growers depended on outside buyers.

The same thing is true at Barney. The farmers have planted small acreages in beans, squash, peppers, tomatoes, beans, Irish potatoes and local men are buyers and shippers. J. C. Hiers, of Barney, received $500 from three acres and is not through shipping.

It will be seen the growers are getting an average of $300 per acre. All of them will raise staple crops on the land following the truck. The prices for farm products are good; trucks come up from Florida and buy chickens and truck products at the door, paying good prices. The truck crops have brought thousands of dollars into the county; the watermelon sales have started off well. Tobacco will be next and prospects for this crop are splendid. Altogether it looks like a prosperous year in Brooks county.

FRANKLIN'S 25TH ANNIVERSARY CHALLENGE TO THE WORLD!

A Nation-Wide, Non-Stop, 100-Mile, Low-Gear Run

Next Thursday, July 1

Watch for This Amazing Demonstration of the Superiority of Franklin Principles—A Test No Other Car Would Dare Attempt!

ONE HUNDRED MILES in low gear without once stopping the engine, without extra lubrication! Franklins in all parts of the country will undergo this gruelling test on Thursday next, their 25th anniversary.

No water-cooled car would dare attempt such a feat. Franklin performs perfectly under conditions that would stop any other motor made. That applies to operation in any gear, on any grade, through any sand or mud, in any temperature.

There is nothing mysterious about this. Franklin is the only car that is air-cooled. The only car that has no radiator—uses no water. The only car that nothing can make overheat—that nothing can make freeze—that never can leak—whose cooling system never requires even a thought!

This run is not designed to prove that air-cooling is a success. The very fact that Franklin is now beginning its 26th flourishing year is proof positive of that. Remember, too, that aviation is turning to air-cooling, and that Byrd's North Pole flight through arctic cold and Cobham's burning African desert flight were both made with air-cooled motors.

What this run will do is to show how far superior air-cooling is. Not only because it eliminates radiator work and worry, but because only an air-cooled car can be flexibly constructed and free from excess weight.

The effect of this construction on riding comfort, handling ease, efficiency and speed in a day's run is startling to those who drive today's Franklin for the first time—a revelation of what a modern motor car can be. Let us send a car to your door for a trial ride today.

Its mileage limit has never been discovered

Today more than 300,000 Willys-Knight cars are in active service. Many of these date back to 1913. Many have traveled 300,000 miles and over. We know of no instance in which a Willys-Knight engine has ever worn out.

Willys-Knight Great Six Sedan $2295

Lighting control within easy finger-reach, directly under steering-wheel, gives greatest degree of safety in night driving with least possible personal effort.

The Knight sleeve-valve engine—patented, protected, exclusive. An engine you'll never wear out. The only automobile engine in the world that actually improves with use.

In this modern, extremely efficient motor of the Willys-Knight Great Six Sedan you have one of the great features responsible for the sale of more than 25,000 of these superb Sixes within the last 12 months—a success-record never before equaled in the same length of time, we believe, by any other luxury car.

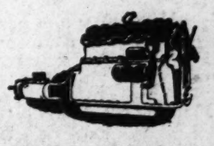

With no carbon troubles, no valves to grind, the Willys-Knight Great Six Sedan cuts the customary up-keep costs in two. Its engine requiring practically no adjustments, no repairs, you have a car that stays out of the repair shop and in your service, uninterruptedly, day in and day out. Owner after owner will tell you that, throughout his entire period of ownership, he has never been without the use of his car, because of engine troubles, for a day or a single hour.

From the first turn of its sleeve-valve engine, the most powerful, most efficient and quietest in operation of all cars of its type or class—the Willys-Knight Great Six Sedan—to a mileage point still undetermined—gains in power, gains in efficiency, gains in smoothness and silence with every mile. Thus you are forever protected against that weakness inherent in all poppet-valve cars—their tendency to become noisy, less powerful, less efficient after a few tens of thousands of miles.

Ingeniously located under left head-lamp is a ditch-light, for road safety, when the dimmers are on. Another invaluable feature exclusive with this Great Six.

With its power-plant lending itself so marvelously to flexible, high-torque development, the Willys-Knight Great Six Sedan has upset all previous ideas of motor-car speed and power. Super-efficient, it has established standards for smoothness and quietness of operation and records for economy beyond anything ever before achieved. It is inevitable that the public should recognize and reward such superiority. Last month we built more Knight-engined cars than in any month in our history.

Here's the reason

The super-efficient Knight sleeve-valve engine is patented. But two makers of privately-owned passenger cars are entitled to build it. Willys-Knight is one of the two.

The new Willys Finance Plan means less money down, smaller monthly payments; and the lowest credit-cost in the industry.

ANNOUNCING THE APPOINTMENT

OF

Reo-Atlanta Motors, Incorporated, as Atlanta Distributors for

REO

The Gold Standard of Values

Wholesale and Retail Salesrooms, West Peachtree at Third
Twenty-four-hour Service, 15 Currier Street

Since the formation of the Reo organization 22 years ago, it has been our policy to be particularly exacting in the selection of our Distributors.

This is not only in order that our own policies and principles be enthusiastically supported but also that the interests of Reo owners be safeguarded 100 per cent effectively.

Therefore, the appointment of the Reo-Atlanta Motors, Incorporated, West Peachtree at Third street, to represent Reo in Atlanta territory is a definite tribute to the spirit, ideals and reputation of this company's personnel.

It is full recognition of the Reo-Atlanta Motors' desire, determination and facilities to keep faith with Reo owners and to uphold Reo's reputation for integrity and honesty of purpose.

It is also assurance that the same courteous treatment and dependable service which have always distinguished Reo distributors will be continued, as we are confident that this new organization is in a position to extend this service in full measure to Reo owners.

The members of the new organization will be happy to meet you and show you the new and improved Reo with its many exclusive advantages plus the qualities which have made Reo famous.

Reo does not claim to be the "best" car. But there must be some reason why the Reo, always a moderately priced car, outlasts even the finest creations of all other American manufacturers.

Surely Reo must be well built to make such a record.

Reo does not claim to be the fastest car built. But for emergencies there is the 62 to 65-mile speed that a Reo's honest speedometer will register when you let a Reo out.

More actual speed would mean that Reo's surging acceleration, unflagging pulling power on long and steep grades, huge reserve power at moderate speeds, would be hampered by changed gear ratios.

Reo does not claim to be more beautiful than all other cars. Automobile beauty to one person frequently means something different than it does to another.

But if you are judging Reo appearance by the eight to twelve-year-old Reos still so common today, the very good-looking New and Improved Reo will surprise you.

Reo does not claim to be the cheapest car to run that there is. But Reo's extraordinarily long life means that depreciation, the largest single expense of automobile ownership, is cut to the minimum.

Come in and see the New Reo.

REO MOTOR CAR COMPANY, LANSING, MICHIGAN

REO ATLANTA MOTORS INC., OPEN THEIR DOORS

Coincident with the opening of the Reo Atlanta Motors, Inc., at 320 West Peachtree, C. D. Taylor, vice president and general sales manager of the newly organized company which is formed as headquarters for Reo machines and parts for Georgia, and parts of South Carolina, Alabama and Tennessee, announced that a service department will be established immediately at 11 Currier street. This new annex will be under direct supervision and direction of the Reo plant and will be able to furnish parts anl perfect Reo service to patrons on short notice.

While hundreds of prospective customers during the latter part of last week visited the new home of Reo motors for this section and its popularity increased, high officials of the newly organized firm were engaged in careful selection of a corps of employees to man the service annex in order to assure Atlantans and their friends the most up-to-the-minute automobile service in the entire south.

The annex will be in a three-story brick structure, which now is being thoroughly remodeled to meet every requirement of the automobile industry in this section of the south, and no expense is being spared in construction and equipment in completing the plant.

Complete organization of the wholesale, retail and service departments is going forward steadily but with a degree of care in selection of the personnel seldom shown, it is pointed out, on account of the desire of the concern to select the best equipped men for their respective positions.

Selection of Atlanta as headquarters of the company is another indication of the importance large manufacturing and distributing concerns attach to Atlanta, and is another recognition of this city's leadership of the southeast.

A sales force of 10 or 12 men will be employed at first and this will be increased to meet the demands of the business, Mr. Taylor said.

S. W. Bollinger, formerly of Pittsburgh, who has had a wide and varied experience as a manufacturer of machinery and mill supplies, is head of the newly organized company, while Mr. Taylor is vice president. Mr. Taylor is a former Atlantan, and was for many years connected with the Holt Manufacturing company, known all over the world as makers of the famous Holt "caterpillar" tractor. He is a gasoline engine expert and is widely known throughout the entire south.

E. Russell Baldridge, secretary and treasurer, is a former resident of Dayton, Ohio, and is in active charge of the office force, including clerical and bookkeeping departments.

Retail sales of the concern will be in direct charge of R. L. Lott, for many years connected with Pierce-Arrow, Buick and Hupmobile sales forces, and the commercial car department is directed by A. W. Kirk, native Atlantan, but who for the past four years has been with the Toledo Reo branch. E. B. Baldridge, another veteran of the Reo company, is supervising the service department. He has a long record for efficient and mechanical knowledge of the Reo machine.

"A complete stock of parts will be carried here and will assure Atlantans and buyers in Atlanta of prompt and efficient service at all times," Mr. Taylor stated. "Branch houses will be opened in the near future in Macon, Augusta, and possibly other points in Georgia.

"We feel that Atlanta and the southeast offers a field of golden opportunity for our machine and are confident that we can meet the demand for a reasonably-priced, high-typed car. That is the reason we have selected Atlanta as the seat of our operations in this territory. We know that the south is just entering an era of unprecedented prosperity and have faith enough in our product to believe that our efforts will be amply rewarded by unstinted support."

GERMANY'S ANNUAL UNEMPLOYED BILL IS $240,000,000

FRANKLIN IN LOW GEAR RUN HERE THURSDAY

The Franklin Motor Car company, local Franklin dealers, is preparing to enter a car in a nation-wide reliability run of 100 miles in length, with the car driven in low gear throughout the distance. The feat is one, it is said, which cannot be duplicated by any other American made automobile. Local newspapermen will ride in the Franklin in the 100-mile drive, acting as official observers and reporting events of the trip.

The local run will be just one of hundreds, since dealers in all sections of the country will stage a similar test on exactly the same day starting from their respective points at the same hour, and reports of the accomplishments will be sent to the central offices at Syracuse N. Y., where a celebration of the triumph of air-cooled motors will be taking place, the occasion being the twenty-fifth anniversary of the establishment of the Franklin company.

In all that quarter century period, the firm has made air-cooled cars, and it is stated that the silver anniversary year of the Franklin company witnesses the greatest advances in the progress of air-cooling that have been made in that time.

In making the statement, the local dealer referred to the use of air-cooled engines in aviation and the amazing aeronautical feats, including the successful flight to the north pole by the giant Fokker, equipped with three air-cooled Wright power plants.

CINCINNATI UNION IS HOST AT DINNER TO LABOR LEADERS

Cincinnati, June 26.—(AP)—Members of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor and scores of other prominent and nationally known labor leaders were guests tonight at a dinner given by the Cincinnati Teamsters' union to James Wilson, Cincinnati, president of the Pattern Makers' League of America, who has long been a friend of the teamsters' organization. Among those who took part was William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

THE STANDARD OF THE WORLD
BODY BY FISHER

Who Is Best Able To Give Good Value In Automobiles

In general, there has been too much "horse-trading" and too little quality merchandising in connection with used automobiles.

In the hundreds of thousands of cars that are turned in each year on the purchase of new cars there remains a vast amount of unused mileage.

Thousands of people want just such cars—provided they can buy them on a sound, honest basis.

But they do want to be safeguarded in their purchase of used cars and the only final safeguard is the dealer. No automobile dealer can escape the penalty or the reward of his methods.

If he is a good dealer, permanently established, giving sound values at fair prices his business will prosper.

The great reputation of Cadillac—its position as the Standard of the World—is reflected in a dealer body of high standing and of fair, sound methods.

The integrity and standing of Cadillac dealers is woven into the warp and woof of Cadillac's prestige.

The Cadillac dealer looks upon every sale of a used car as the first step in the purchase of a Cadillac by that customer.

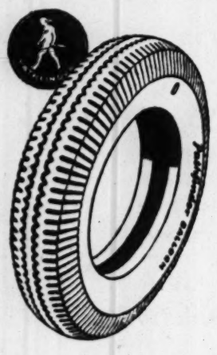

As a result he bends every effort to gain and hold the good-will of his used car customer.

In this way he safeguards his future business, and thus safeguards every purchase of a used car.

Furthermore, because of the tremendous sales success of the new 90-degree, eight-cylinder Cadillac, the Cadillac dealer has the very choicest used cars on the market.

The Hardaway Construction company, builders of the new bridge, announce that the old structure will be entirely done away with by that date.

Overland Six Standard Sedan Has Modern Seating Arrangement

Another stride toward refinement of present day motor cars has been taken by the Willys-Overland company, it is evident, with the announcement of a new and improved seating arrangement for the Overland Six Standard sedan.

Overland engineers are constantly working on the development of minor refinements in the company's product and the latest improvement is individual chair type front compartment seats for the two-door sedan models.

Formerly, the front seat in the Overland Standard was of the one-piece cushion type, with close fitting individual backs. The new seating system introduced by the Overland has many attractive and desirable features.

The new individual seating arrangement consists of two separate chairs. They are hinged by sturdy floor "swings" and tip forward completely out of the way of passengers entering or leaving from the rear compartment. They are installed far enough apart to eliminate disturbance to the driver by a companion passenger.

The folding feature of both front seats allows much more room in the rear compartment. It is an important safety factor, allowing free and unobstructed passage from the rear of the sedan.

Women drivers especially favor this design of seating because of the ease of riding and entering the car. The seat hinges are so designed that all joints and protruding parts are concealed, eliminating any danger of catching clothing while entering or leaving the car.

The fact that the driver's seat also tips forward is a pleasant and improved feature. This allows free passage from either side of the car.

SWEDISH PRINCE ENJOYS GOLF GAME IN CHICAGO

Chicago, June 26.—(AP)—Golf took its turn today in entertaining the Crown Prince of Sweden. Playing against a cool wind, his highness teed off at the exclusive Old Elm Country club, which has no women among its membership list of only 150.

Arriving at the club with McCormick Blair, James Simpson and C. H. Schweppe, the crown prince went immediately to the first tee. He was presented with a box of golf balls by Alex Pirie, professional at the club, and posed for the photographers.

Using his own clubs, he made fives each on the first and second hole, both of which are par fours.

The royal and ancient game took traces of tenseness and lines of fatigue from his highness' countenance. He appeared to enjoy himself immensely and laughed and chatted with members of the foursome.

This evening the prince will be a guest of Ira Nelson Morris, former united States minister to Sweden. He will leave tomorrow for Rock Island, Ill.

MAN ENDS LIFE ON WEDDING EVE

Pittsfield, Mass., June 26.—Engaged to marry Miss Edith S. Van Gelden at Saugerties, N. Y., tomorrow, Frank Fillebrown shot and killed himself in his brother's garage at Lee Saturday.

Relatives of Fillebrown, who was a member of a dry goods firm in Lee, were unable to ascribe a cause for the suicide.

Presidential Nominations.

Washington, June 26.—(AP)—Presidential nominations today:

To be collector of customs, district No. 14, at Norfolk, Va., Joseph L. Crupper, of Alexandria, Va.

To be United States attorney, western district of Tennessee, Tilmon A. Lancaster, of Tennessee, succeeding District Attorney Murray, whose term has expired.

LARGEST YEAR IN HISTORY FOR OLDS

During the fiscal year which closes July 31, more Oldsmobiles will have been sold than during any similar period in the 28 years history of Olds Motor Works, factory officials report. Although only 11 months of the present fiscal year have elapsed, all previous records for an entire sales year have been broken.

Sales of Oldsmobiles since January 1 have been particularly high, surpassing previous peak records. Monthly records for retail sales of Oldsmobiles were broken twice during this period, in both April and May.

While the automobile industry as a whole has enjoyed a substantial increase so far in 1926, the gains made by Oldsmobile have been four times greater. During the first four months of the year (the latest National Automobile Chamber of Commerce figures available) the industry made a gain of 18.4 per cent over the same period in 1925. For the first five months this year the General Motors corporation which produces approximately one-fourth of all automobiles made in this country, netted a gain of 56.9 per cent. During the same months Oldsmobile retail sales to consumers increased 75.2 per cent.

This gain by Oldsmobile is the more remarkable inasmuch as it represents the increase over one of the best spring selling seasons of the company previous to that of this year.

When Thoroughbreds Meet

When designers were planning Lincoln's Sport Phaeton, surely they had in mind the graceful lines of a thoroughbred horse. No more convincing proof of their success could be found than the picture shown above. This picture made the past week of two prominent society women of Atlanta, shows Miss Lois Thompson on her prize-winning horse, Bit O' Glory, greeting Mrs. John G. Foster, seated in her new Lincoln Sport Phaeton. This and other Lincoln models are on display in the display rooms of the Rippey Motor company, 289 Spring street.

HEMLOCK 3500 CO. EXPANSION STARTS

Announcement was made by S. Roger Jones, manager for the Hemlock 3500 Tire company, local distributors for the Seiberling Tire and Rubber company, of the beginning of alterations to enlarge their present sales and service station at the corner of West Peachtree street and North avenue.

"These alterations," said Mr. Jones, "will in no way affect our ability to render the same high-grade service as in the past, as we are merely enlarging our quarters to take care of a business that has grown beyond our fondest expectations."

When completed, the Hemlock 3500 Tire company will have one of the most modern and up-to-date tire service stations found in this section of the country, having planned a very attractive drive in space, and their immaculate sales and service rooms having brought them many favorable comments, especially from lady customers, are completing even better and finer rooms than at present.

FRANKLIN DEALER WANTS OLDEST CAR

S. B. Dodge, sales manager for the Franklin Motor Car company, is going over his territory with a fine tooth comb. He is searching for the oldest Franklin car which is registered and in use in this community.

Mr. Dodge, Franklin dealer, states that the Franklin factory, which will celebrate its 25th anniversary in the automobile business in July, plans to give the oldest Franklin automobile which is still registered and in use a prominent place in the country-wide celebration. So, if you have such a car you have considerable to gain by sending the data and photographs to Mr. Dodge.

He states that it doesn't matter whether the car has been converted into a plumber's truck, a dairyman's milk collector, or a garage man's hurry-up wagon, just so long as the original car is intact, registered and functioning regularly, it is still eligible for the honor of being the oldest Franklin in service.

Current statistics show that better than 75 per cent of all Franklins made since this firm began business are still registered and in use. It is expected, accordingly, that the Franklin proposal will bring to light an amazing list of archaic air-cooled cars in use.

STUDEBAKER SMASHES CROSSCOUNTRY RECORD

J. D. Jenkins and Ray D. Peck, driving a Studebaker six "Sheriff," pulled into San Francisco at 12:27 p. m. on Thursday, June 17, Pacific standard time, having smashed the transcontinental record by 16 hours and 25 minutes. Total elapsed time from New York was 86 hours and 20 minutes, beating the fastest train time by 6 hours and 25 minutes. The previous record was 102 hours and 45 minutes.

One of the outstanding facts about this remarkable run was the fact that the car, lubricated by Pennzoil, made the entire trip with its crankcase sealed. The oil was not changed throughout the trip and only 11 quarts were consumed, an average of 315 miles per quart.

This low oil consumption was in spite of ceaseless high speeds on open roads and the hardest kind of going on western dirt roads which had been inundated by almost constant rainfalls during the run.

The record is all the more remarkable in view of the weather conditions that attended it almost from start to finish.

The coast-to-coast dash started at 2:07 a. m. Monday, June 14, when car and its two drivers, both of whom were amateurs, were checked out of New York by Western Union officials. Within the next 12 hours they were met by a driving rainstorm which became a veritable cloudburst, inundating bridges and roads. Dirt roads encountered in the west were veritable quagmires.

In spite of these handicaps the Studebaker reached San Francisco on Thursday—the fourth day out—beating the best time ever made previously by a wide margin.

Reports from subordinate lodges by the representatives to the recent grand lodge convention showed the order to be in good condition, it was announced.

Many Weddings Are Solemnized In Griffin, Georgia

Griffin, Ga., June 26.—The wedding of Miss Nell Bridges, of Griffin, and Eugene Thomas Underwood, of Norfolk, Va., was solemnized Wednesday, June 23, at 5:30 o'clock at the First Methodist church. The Rev. H. B. Mays, of Atlanta, uncle of the bride, officiated in the presence of relatives and friends.

Mrs. Frank S. Pittman presided at the organ and played "Entre du Cortege" by Duboise and "Chant Seraphique" by Frysinger as the guests assembled. Miss Elizabeth Norman played "Midnight Bells" by Kreisker and Lamont Gresham sang "Until," both accompanied by Mrs. Pittman.

The bridal chorus from Lohengrin was played for the recessional and the altar was banked with palms and ferns with two tall floor baskets filled with white lilies at either side. Two seven-branch candelabra held burning white tapers. Quantities of white and green flowers were used at every available place.

The ushers were W. L. Joiner, Jr., Beverly Rogers, Joseph Persons, Jr., and George Wheaton.

The bride's sister, Miss Eugenia Bridges, her maid of honor and only attendant, was gowned in pink taffeta, the bottom of the skirt edged with a deep band of pink tulle. Her small polk bonnet of neapolitan straw was trimmed with French flowers and velvet streamers. She carried a bouquet of orchid sweetpeas, showered with the same flowers.

The lovely bride entered with her father, Edward P. Bridges, and was met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Thomas Burke, of Salisbury, N. C.

The bride was radiantly lovely in her wedding dress of white taffeta, fashioned bouffant style. The full skirt, short in front and long in the back, was edged with a deep band of Chantilly lace. The full skirt was embroidered with circles of seed pearls. She wore a white tulle hat trimmed with orange blossoms and a streamer of Chantilly lace and tulle. She carried a bouquet of white sweetpeas, valley lilies and orchids, showered with valley lilies.

During the ceremony Mrs. Pittman played "To a Wild Rose" and Mendessohn's wedding march for a recessional. Mr. and Mrs. Underwood left for a motor trip, after which they will make their home in Norfolk, Va.

Georgia Tech Professor Weds Beautiful Young French Girl

When, in 1917, the United States called its young men to the colors for its fight with the Germans, George Hollady McKee, then professor in the modern language department at Georgia Tech, did not wait to be conscripted. He took the officers' examinations at Fort McPherson and was sent to Fort Leavenworth for further preparation as an infantry officer. At the close of this short but intensive course, Professor McKee passed examinations ranking him one of the first two in a class representing the best colleges and universities in the country. Professor McKee received his commission and was sent immediately to France.

On account of his ability to speak both French and Spanish, efforts were made to shift him from the infantry to the bureaucratic division of the service. Professor McKee preferred to remain with the army in the field, and saw service at St. Mihiel, the Vosges and at the second battle of the Marne, where his whole regiment was decorated for distinguished valor. In these different campaigns he was wounded several times and sent back to the hospital till ready for the front again.

Resumes Work.

After he was mustered out of the service he took up his work again at Georgia Tech and was granted in 1925 leave of absence to pursue his studies in France with the object of taking his doctor's degree in one of the French universities. He was well equipped for this work, as he had graduated at Washington and Lee, had taken post graduate courses at Pittsburgh university and at Harvard university, and from his contact with French during the great war had learned to speak the langauge fluently. During his present stay in France which will be extended another year, he has studied at the University of Besan Con, and since October, 1925, has settled down at the University of Grenoble to the task of winning his degree before coming back to Georgia Tech in 1927.

The official French announcement, received by faculty members at Tech, shows that Dan Cupid is no less active in "La Belle France" than in these United States. Professor McKee was married April 6 last in St. Joseph's church at Grenoble to Miss Mathilde Manguy, a beautiful French girl of the brunette type, a cultured woman and a talented musician. She comes from an old Breton family which has lived at Vannes, France, for centuries. The bride's brother, Henri Manguy, was a cavalry colonel in the French army, who distinguished himself in the great war, holder of the Legion of Honor and many other decorations. Captain Manguy, the bride's father, was a general in the French army, is also "Chevalier de la Legion d'Honneur." The groom comes from an old Alabama family in which are found all the fine qualities and chivalrous traditions of the old south.

Will Return to Atlanta.

Professor McKee will return to the United States in 1927 and will take up again his work as professor of modern languages at the Georgia School of Technology. He will bring with him his bride who will be a most welcome addition to the French colony of Atlanta and should prove a very helpful member of the "Alliance Francaise" whose aim is especially to foster and develop an interest in the French language and literature. Certainly Madame McKee will have a most cordial reception from the many friends of Professor McKee, who has proved his worth as an unexcelled teacher in times of peace and a true

SOCIALLY SPEAKING

Of Engagements, Visitors, Opera Stars and Children

By Bessie S. tafford.

NOW THAT the June brides are safely launched on their respective matrimonial sear, and the wedding gowns of traditional white satin and rare old lace are packed away in blue tissue paper to preserve that pristine shimmer, the next event of national importance is the Fourth of July celebration, marking 150 years of blessed independence for the happy United States with its glorious beliefs and ideals. The patriotic July day also falls on the anniversary of the death of Thomas Jefferson, the revered Virginian who drafted the famed declaration wherein "we pledged to each other our lives, our fortunes and our sacred honor" in that immortal document.

A pretty Atlanta maiden who has outlived numerous engagement rumors, and whose great-great-grandfather signed his name in fine, legible penmanship at the end of this great proclamation, intends soon to publicly declare her engagement to an erstwhile Atlantan whose successful business ventures have carried him into a sister state for residence. The contracting parties in this interesting bit of news were educated in Virginia, where the roseate romance, so it's said, blossomed at the commencement gaities of an old and famous institution of learning, attended by the Atlanta belle on another beau's commencement bid.

Opera Favorites.

SOUTHWARD from Chicago drifts a bit of gossip concerning the summer plans of several favorite Metropolitan stars on the opera roster of the music festival at Ravinia, in Chicago's shrine of music, called "The Opera House in the Woods." Little Lucrezia Bori has settled down for three months of gentle, domestic life in a cottage with Marianna, her devoted Italian maid, as general supervisor for the establishment. Although she is Mademoiselle Bori's personal attendant, Marianna is a wonderful cook, filling in when the culinary artist fails to please mademoiselle, and even cuts the grass if the yard man falls down on his job. Edward Johnson and Martinelli have cottages close by, the trio enjoying the pleasures that only a home far removed from the roar of a city can offer.

Apropos of summer opera, Miss Mary Leila Patterson, the new and charming personality in the attractive company booked for eight weeks at the Atlanta theater, affectionately termed "Pat" by her intimates, has, with her pleasing personality and a voice of exquisite quality and sweetness, won a large and enthusiastic following, and the summer season is but one week old. After studying under the famous Estelle Liberling in New York, who has coached many opera stars, Miss Patterson accepted a part in a Broadway musical production, refusing an offer to sing in "The Student Prince," to accept the one from the Southern Metropolitan Light Opera company, which brought her here to sing in this unique theatrical venture.

Bridal Bouquets.

"WHAT BECOMES of all the marvellous bridal bouquets?" curiously queried somebody in a tea-drinking group the other day. Telephonic inquiry revealed that Mrs. Charles Harman Cox tenderly placed her waxen calla lilies upon the grass-sodded mound at West View designating the last resting place of her sainted maternal grandmother, the late Mrs. W. W. Boyd. The bridal beauty of the flowers carried by Mrs. Wilbur King have been made an addition to her family archives by being preserved through a pressing process. When covered with glass and mounted into a serving tray, it will adorn her new home in Wilmington, N. C.

If there's any truth in the time-honored statement declaring that the one who catches the bride's bouquet will, in turn, be the next bride, Mr. and Mrs. Louis F. Pairo may as well be prepared for another marriage, following close upon the junior Mrs. Edwin Duff Crane's. Her fragile valley lilies fell into the outstretched arms of Miss Mildred Pairo, when the bride tossed it from the stairway before she started on her honeymoon.

Atlanta's Long Suit.

"DISTINGUISHED VISITORS" are Atlanta's long suit, and although it was hail and farewell to Captain Howell Woodward and Mrs. Woodward, it was good to have a fleeting glimpse of them. Mrs. Woodward entrained for the west last Monday with California as a destination, marking her first visit in three years to her parents and daughter, and the dear little granddaughter, who was a wee baby when she went to Peru with her husband when the United States navy loaned Captain Woodward to the Peruvian government.

Captain Woodward left a few days after her departure for Newport, to assume command of the cruiser, Milwaukee, to be joined later by Mrs. Woodward, their presence adding luster aid gaiety to the social program of that internationally-famous resort.

Snookie Tunes In.

"SNOOKIE," the adorable 3-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Tiff, overheard her parents discussing the beauty points of a very attractive friend, agreeing that So-and-So would be far prettier if she did not rouge her cheeks and lips quite so heavily.

Neither parent realized that "Snookie," whose real name is Catherine, was listening to their conversation until she tuned in with: "Her don't paint her face muvver; her has high blood pressure."

Plea Made for Funds To Erect Monument In Authors' Grove

The last plea for contributions toward the funds to erect a monument in Authors' grove, that will permanently mark the trees planted by local organizations to honor favorite authors, among whom was the late Lollie Belle Wylie, Atlanta poet and journalist, has gone out to the personal friends and admirers of Mrs. Wylie, and the committee asks that every friend and admirer of Mrs. Wylie, feel free to make his or her contribution, no matter how small, as it is more desirable to have small donations from the great number of friends than to have the full amount donated by an individual.

Those intending to contribute, please forward checks promptly to the chairman of the committee, Mrs. Julia Cope, 186 Ponce de Leon avenue, as the order for the tablet will be made soon, so that the monument may be unveiled early in the fall.

Organizations and individuals whose names will appear on the tablet are: Atlanta Writers' club, Daughters of the American Colonists, Atlanta Chapter D. A. R., the Reviewers, Altar Society of Sacred Heart church, Williams F. Williams, Founders and Patriots' society, Witches' club, L'Alliance Francaise, Mrs. J. M. Dr. Porter was the beloved pastor of the Second Baptist church in Atlanta for several years, and is at present pastor of the Third Baptist church in St. Louis, where he has a large congregation. He and Mrs. Porter have a wide circle of friends in Atlanta who will extend a cordial welcome to these distinguished visitors, around whom many informal social affairs will revolve as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Dodson.

W. M. S. of St. Paul's Holds Meeting.

The regular third Monday meeting of the W. M. S. of St. Paul's church met at the church Monday afternoon with Mrs. W. W. Jackson in charge. The devotional was very interesting, given by Mrs. J. E. Andrews. Miss Mary Tant sang beautifully "Can Others See Jesus in You?" Mrs. Marvin Williams, of the Wesley Memorial church, was introduced and made a very interesting talk, her subject being, "The Moving Picture Industry," and was very much enjoyed by all.

Mrs. W. L. Ballenger, the president, took the chair and entered into the business session. The minutes of the last meeting were read by Mrs. Hamilton, the secretary.

D. A. R. Chapters Planning Independence Celebration

Mrs. Herbert M. Franklin, state regent, wishes to urge every chapter in Georgia to join in the patriotic observance of American independence week and to assist in the echo of the liberty bell celebration which will be held on the morning of June 28, tomorrow.

Particular information concerning this celebration is given in the following letter recently sent out by the president general:

"By an act of the congress of the United States a commission was established to make plans for the fitting observance of the 150th anniversary of the signing of the declaration of independence and the 100th anniversary of the death of Thomas Jefferson.

"The week of June 28 to July 4 was established by the commission as American Independence week. The chairman of the commission has asked the president general of the National Society Daughters of the American Revolution and the national officers to act as an official committee on arrangements for the Echo of the Liberty Bell celebration which will be held in Washington on the morning of June 28 and to urge chapters throughout the country to cooperate as far as possible by having patriotic programs in their own communities on that day."

The dramatic opening will be at 11:11 o'clock tomorrow morning, when the mayor of Philadelphia will ring the old liberty bell. That will be the signal for the ringing of bells in schools, churches and all public buildings throughout the land as the patriotic echoes, as the voice of our own liberty bell. The program, which will be held in Washington is given here and may be used as a guide to those who are arranging local celebrations throughout the state:

Music by band. Ringing of bells promptly at 11:11 o'clock. Presentation of American flag by color guard, followed by general pronunciation of the American's creed or patriot's pledge of faith. Solo, "The Star Spangled Banner." Mass singing of "America." Patriotic address. Music by band. Benediction.

While this program may not be carried out in full, the state regent hopes that every chapter in the state will at least have the bells of their city ring in echo of the liberty bell, and hold a patriotic meeting, however simple the program.

The program for the entire week of the celebration of this great anniversary is as follows:

Monday, June 28—Patriots' pledges of faith day.

Tuesday, June 29—Universal education day.

Wednesday, June 30—Founders' day.

Thursday, July 1—Greater American day.

Friday, July 2—Signers' day.

Saturday, July 3.—Montecello day.

Sunday, July 4—Jefferson centennial day.

Monday, July 5—Sesqui-centennial independence day.

Following is the patriot's pledge of faith, which everyone is requested to read and memorize:

"I do hereby pledge and declare my sincere belief and devout faith in the fundamental ideals of my country so bravely proclaimed to the world by the immortal signers of the declaration of American independence; and in their words and noble spirit 'we pledge to each other our lives, our fortunes and our sacred honor' to the support of those ideals; and as a token of my sincerity and as an evidence of my gratitude for the blessings which that immortal document has assured to all Americans, I do hereby make this contribution for the preservation of Montecello, the home of Thomas Jefferson, as a national memorial to the author of the declaration of independence and as a patriotic shrine for the children of America."

Site of Old Frederica Sought for Public Park

Congress may or may not accept the generous proffer of the Colonial Dames of Georgia of Old Fort Frederica on St. Simons island, Ga., that what remains of the fort may be preserved to posterity.

But there is as strong a call to the patriotic and historical societies of Georgia to mark the grounds of what was once the town of Frederica and the walls that surrounded it in the early days of the colonies.

Many, nay thousands, traverse the roads of St. Simons all seasons of the year and there is not a day and scarcely an hour that there are not those who pause to gaze for a few minutes on what is left of Fort Frederica on the waters edge, little realizing the ground all around them is indeed sacred history.

There was an Indian field of 20 acres where the Indian women delved and dug the ground with a shell-like instrument in the hand with which to till the soil for raising their corn. This General Oglethorpe decided upon as the location of his town where the soldiers could bring their families and be rested at times, as they were relieved from guard duty further down the coast on the islands as far as the mouth of the St. John's river.

With the town of Frederica as a home for families and a base of supplies the fort on the river was constructed and tabby walls were built around it with a moat below them, which was filled with water at high tide and kept full by water gates at the river's edge. On the walls were turrets where watchmen stood guard day and night. The moat is dry, the walls have become mounds of earth where trees have grown, but their outlines may be seen extending entirely around what was once a town of a thousand inhabitants—should one care to penetrate the tangles of undergrowth in some places beneath the trees.

The remains of the foundations of a few of the houses may be seen. No one beholding these things, could fail to have the stirrings of awe and reverence for those who have passed on from a life of courage, obedience and heroic enthusiasm.

With only a little effort and concerted action on the part of our citizens, the plans could be formed for a show place of Georgia, as interesting as that of any state. Each society should choose one of its members, and should all the historical societies do this, a goodly company could be formed for raising of funds to be applied later to this purpose. Will not the D. A. R. of Georgia inaugurate this fine movement?

Opportunity knocks, and shall we not open the door for so fine a work as this of obtaining and preserving the site of old Frederica, Georgia, as a national park, for the pleasure and edification of the thousands who would surely visit it annually?

CONTRIBUTED.

Miss Frances England Is Honor Guest.

Mrs. Richmond Paul and Mrs. O. C. Robins entertained recently in honor of Miss Frances England, a bride-elect of July, at the home of Mrs. Robins on Park street in West End. The house was attractively decorated with ferns and cut flowers, the color scheme of pink and white being carried out in all refreshments and flavors. Suspended from the chandelier was a shower boquet of roses, with a wedding bell suspended from this, over a miniature bride and groom standing in the center of the dining table on an altar of rose petals. Flower contests were enjoyed by all and prizes awarded. After the refreshments, the bride to be was showered with many attractive and useful gifts.

Mrs. Paul and Mrs. Robins were assisted in entertaining by Mrs. England, the bride-elect's mother. Miss England was very attractive in a beautiful model of bois de rose georgette.

Miss Lucile Carswell Weds Mr. McCurdy in Lizella, Ga.

An event of outstanding interest on Saturday, June 26, was the marriage of Miss Ruby Lucile Carswell to Robert Hughey McCurdy, of Stone Mountain, which was solemnized at the Lizella Methodist church. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Marvin Pharr, of Stone Mountain.

The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion with palms, ferns and southern smilax. The altar rails were entwined with southern smilax and studded with yellow roses. Placed at intervals within the chancel were wicker baskets, filled with brown-eyed susans and graceful foliage, the handles of which was tied with bows of white tulle. The pews reserved for the family and near relatives were marked with bows of white tulle.

Preceding the ceremony Miss Frances L. Tucker sang "The Sweetest Story Ever Told" and "I Love You Truly," accompanied by Miss Marguerite Hall, pianist. For the entrance of the bridal party Miss Hall played the bridal chorus from "Lohengrin," for the recessional, Mendelssohn's wedding march. Schubert's Serenade was rendered softly during the ceremony.

Bridal Party.

First to enter were the ribbon bearers, little Misses Mazie D. Davis and Katherine Carswell, gowned in yellow and orchid geogrette, trimmed with taffeta ruffles.

The groomsmen were C. G. Davis, of Stone Mountain, and W. F. Nash, of Atlanta. They entered singly down opposite aisles. Next to enter were the bridesmaids, Miss Clarice Carswell and Mrs. L. W. Abel, dressed alike in yellow taffetas, fashioned with basque waists and bouffant skirts edged with self-colored malines.

Following were two other groomsmen, Douglas McCurdy and Dr. E. L. McCurdy, of Stone Mountain. Miss Thelma McCurdy and Miss Lucile Williams, bridesmaids, entered next. Their gowns were of orchid taffetas with basque waists and bouffant skirts edged with self-colored malines. The bridesmaids carried arm bouquets of yellow roses showered with orchid sweet peas.

Miss Greta Bradford, of Atlanta, was maid of honor. Her costume was of orchid taffeta, made bouffant with three scalloped overskirts, each edged with orchid ribbon and malines.

The matron of honor was Mrs. O. V. Werdt, sister of the bride. She wore yellow georgette, made with a short cape effect and a three-tiered scalloped skirt. Miss Bradford's and Mrs. Werdt's flowers were shower bouquets of yellow roses and orchid sweet peas.

Little Peggie Tucker and Margie Griffis, niece of the bride, were the dainty flower girls and wore frocks of orchid and yellow georgette. They carried arm baskets of yellow roses tied with orchid tulle.

The ring bearer, Earl Mosley, Jr., carried the ring in the heart of a lily showered with valley lilies.

Lovely Bride.

The bride entered with her father, M. E. Carswell, and was met at the altar by the groom and his best man, J. B. McCurdy, of Miami, Fla. The bride formed a lovely picture in her bridal robes of white taffeta, fashioned with a basque waist and bouffant skirt with inlets of gathered malines forming an uneven hemline. On the left shoulder was a shower of handmade taffeta flowers. Her veil, falling from a coronet of Duchess lace embroidered with seed pearls, was caught at the back of her head with a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried an exquisite bouquet of bride roses showered with valley lilies.

Mrs. C. G. Tucker, sister of the bride, kept the bride's book.

Immediately following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. McCurdy left by automobile for a trip to Asheville and other points of interest in the Carolinas and Tennessee.

The bride's going away suit was of navy blue georgette, trimmed with taffeta and made ensemble effect. She wore a smart hat of rosewood shade with hand bag and shoes to harmonize.

"Newcomers' Week" To Be Celebrated At Camp Highland

The week-end of July 10 has been designated by Camp Highland Y. W. C. A. for girls as "Newcomers' Week," and is expected to assemble at the camp a large number of girls and young women who have only recently come to Atlanta to make their homes. The camp will be open to all girls during this period, but a special invitation is issued to these newcomers. A special "get-acquainted" program is being planned for the occasion by Miss Lucy Adams, camp director, and other members of the staff. High-school girls, who have entered the Atlanta schools during the past term and business girls who have come to the city during the past few months, are urged to register for this period at the camp and are assured of a most cordial welcome.

According to anual custom the week-end, including the Fourth of July, will be one of the gala occasions of the summer. On account of the holiday's falling on Sunday this year, a double arrangement has been made so that all who wish to do so may enjoy the extra day at camp. In addition to the usual period from Saturday afternoon to Monday morning, campers may register for the periods either from Friday night to Monday morning or from Saturday afternoon to Tuesday morning. This arrangement will accommodate both those who have their holiday on Saturday and those who are celebrating the Fourth on Monday. Special programs by the Camp Highland Players will be presented on Saturday night and again on Monday afternoon. These, together with the anual July 4 baseball game and barbecue, are open this year only to regular campers who register for the entire week-end at camp. A capacity crowd is anticipated, and girls who intend to spend this week-end at Highland are advised to make their reservations as soon as possible.

Reservations for both these week-ends and for any week or week-end during the summer may be made now either at the Y. W. C. A. headquarters at 21 West Baker street or at the Y. W. C. A. cafeteria at Broad and Alabama streets.

DE SOTO CHEMICAL CO. HAS UNIQUE PRODUCT

DeSoto Chemical company, with a factory in Arcadia, Fla., and sales offices at Tampa, Fla., has a unique product called Gator Roach Hives, which it is marketing throughout the southern states. From a small beginning in the small city of Arcadia, this company has in the past two years reached the prominence of being a national distributor. The business has been built upon the merits of one product for the extermination of roaches, which again proves the theory of having a "path worn to your door."

The unique feature of this product is the economy and ease with which it is used. The housewife is relieved from the drudgery of constantly spraying, or distributing powders and pastes. The Gator Roach Hive once placed functions several months without replacement.

The Gater Roach Hive is a small round tube in which is secured a portion of the exterminating food which the roaches eat. The food is not removed from the hive which may be placed in the refrigerator or adjacent to foods in the kitchen and the exterminator will not be tracked over the foods.

Another attractive feature is that the Gator Roach Hive may be placed in drawers with linens and silks, thus protecting them, as the exterminator is an attractive food for the roaches and they will eat it in preference to anything else. The exterminator will not run in hot weather and soil anything, and the patented hive, or container, prevents anything from coming in contact with the exterminating material.

Madame Hudson maintains that while "clothes make the man," "cosmetics make the woman," and that women could be more beautiful if they were taught how to use cosmetics.

Madame Hudson's demonstrator will remain in the south several weeks teaching correct use of cosmetics. This demonstration is being held under the auspices of the J. M. Kline company, of Savannah, Ga.

FULTON KLANS PLAN PUBLIC CEREMONIAL

A joint ceremonial will be staged by the klans of Fulton county Wednesday night at the auditorium and a general invitation to the public has been extended. This is an innovation in Georgia, where the klan was born, although in the north numerous open-air meetings have given outsiders opportunity to witness the ceremonial from a distance.

Klans throughout the county are busy making their preparations to descend on Atlanta next Wednesday. It is impossible to estimate the number that will be in attendance, but reports indicate a big crowd. It is said that the class of candidates will be the largest of the year.

The doors of the auditorium will be open until 8 o'clock, at which time the ceremonial service begins. Nonklansmen who are present will be allowed to remain, although the doors will be closed during the ritualistic work of inducting candidates into the order and taking the obligation oath. Speaking of the invitation to the general public to attend, General Nathan B. Forrest, grand dragon of Georgia, said:

"The ritualistic work will be in charge of officers of the several klans of the county and promises to be interesting to klansmen as well as visitors. So far as I have been able to learn, the klan is the only organization that invites the public to witness its ritualistic work. Quite naturally none of the secret work of the klan, as that term is known to fraternal orders, will be divulged, but the ritualism will be exemplified and the obligations administered so that all present may see and hear them.

"The organization has maintained from its inception that it has nothing to hide from the public except its membership roster, and this will be faithfully adhered to Wednesday evening, as all klansmen will be in full regalia."

DR. WILMER BACK IN OLD PULPIT FOR TWO MONTHS

Dr. C. B. Wilmer, former resident of this city and for nearly twenty-five years rector of St. Luke's church here, is returning to Atlanta Monday to take charge of St. Luke's during the vacation of the present rector, the Rev. N. R. H. Moor. He will hold services there during the months of July and August, it was announced here Saturday.

Dr. Wilmer came to Atlanta in 1900 and while here was identified with many civic affairs and was especially prominent in interracial work both here and throughout the state. He received two calls from the University of the South at Sewanee, Tennessee, to the chair of theology at that institution and finally accepted the third, leaving here in the fall of 1924 to assume his new duties there.

Not wishing to sever connections with Atlanta entirely, he has made numerous visits here in the past two years and has expressed himself as being delighted at the opportunity of returning for the summer in his former capacity.

While here he will make his home at the rectory, 176 Peachtree circle.

Ruth goes Shopping

Keep your home cool these warm, sultry summer days with electric fans! You can be surprisingly cool and comfortable if you try, and will wonder why you ever delayed purchasing them. Adopt the "electrical way" to coolness and comfort and realize for yourself the pleasure to be derived from the fans.

Don't delay the enjoyment of having fans for the different rooms in the home, for at the salesrooms in the Georgia Railway & Power Company on Marietta Street is an assortment of Westinghouse and General Electric fans moderately priced from $5.00 to $35.00, according to size. These are conceded to be the best and most satisfactory fans manufactured and will give service for years to come—they are substantially built and are economical to operate. A 10-inch fan gives 550 cubic feet of air a minute and the cost of operation is only 5 cents for 10 hours' use; think of it, so much comfort for such a small expenditure.

Home comfort is one of the greatest things in the world, and how necessary it is for happiness and contentment. An electric fan can be used in any part of the house and moved at will from room to room—it draws a comparatively small amount of current—makes us cool and keeps us so. Really no home is complete in the summer season without at least one fan, and there should be several. Think of having a delightful breeze when and where you want it, either upstairs or down—creating comfort everywhere, making the waking hours a joy from cessation of the heat waves—and all at the mere turn of a switch—with air as cooling and refreshing as the ocean breezes.

Choose either the Westinghouse or General Electric. It is only a matter of preference, they are both excellent—and select the size or sizes that you desire for your home at the Georgia Railway & Power Company.

The most chic costumes are no longer in monotone, but combine two and even three colors, which are very charming in contrast.

Few trimmings are as popular as grosgrain ribbon. It first captured the field as a millinery trimming, then became as smart on frocks for spring and summer.

With a party of friends I motored out to Avondale Estates yesterday afternoon to see the three model homes that have been for the past ten days open to the public for a Domestic Science and Better Homes Exposition, sponsored by the Georgian-American. These homes are charming and are so beautifully furnished throughout and equipped completely in every way—so livable and artistic and so attractive in construction.

While visiting these homes there were many "Oh! isn't this lovely?" and "Isn't this charming?" exclamations exchanged between us. I assure you that there were many of them when we came to the lovely kitchens in each of the three homes—for lovely they are, and equipped with every modern electrical convenience that is conducive to comfort in a model home of today.

The Southern Grocery Stores, Inc., operators of the Rogers Stores, have an extensive pure food display that delighted us all. We were most interested in the various products shown on the well stocked pantry shelves, in the kitchen cabinets and in the electric refrigerator. Rows upon rows of good things abundantly supplied with which to prepare menus "fit for a king."

To a woman who has a home, housekeeping and preparing or having prepared food for the household is such an important thing it is paramount to them; they want the best food products to serve on the daily menus. Conspicuous among the many delicious edibles was the famous Waldorf brand of canned goods, which is not excelled for goodness, purity and wholesomeness. Products with the name Waldorf on the label is an assurance of quality and are packed by the American Canneries, one of the best known in the country, from fresh vegetables and fruits grown in the fields adjacent to the canning plants. They are packed the same day they are gathered.

Such a variety from which to stock your pantry shelves—you can make them as attractive in the tempting array of good things as the Avondale homes we visited, and what a convenience to have a sufficient supply on hand ready for use when needed. So many of the Waldorf products are in glass jars as well as tin containers. They look so appetizing on the shelf, too. Golden Bantam Corn, Sweet Corn, Selected Tomatoes, String Beans, Rosebud Beets, whole or sliced; Small June Peas, Garden Spinach, Lima Beans, Kidney Beans and Sauerkraut are the vegetables displayed. The fruits are Pineapple, both sliced and grated; Cherries, Peaches and Pears, all beautiful ripe fruit and so luscious.

At all of the Rogers Stores you will find an assortment of this well-known brand of canned products to make your selection. Rogers indeed deserves the slogan, "Where Satisfaction Is a Certainty," for you can always depend on the fact that you are obtaining the best quality of whatever product you purchase at any one of their 300 stores at prices not equalled elsewhere. You know you will get full value when you do your marketing there—they are the largest chain of grocery stores in the Southeast—their growth has been phenomenal—literally thousands of women are their pleased customers.

For wear with the sport frock or the more elaborate costume the favorite tones for shoes are opal gray and parchment. Bois de rose is the leading shade for street wear. With gray shoes one wears stockings of dove gray, mauve, rose taupe or silver. With parchment shoes the correct shades are Du Barry, bisque, nude, kasha, shell and blonde. With the bois de rose leathers are worn the new shades of Wood Fallow, Wood Faun, Wood Bark and the popular Pompadour.

An interesting new silhouette is called the peacock. Frocks of this type are short at the front and so long at the back as to suggest a train.

Most women have a delightful sense of having discovered something when they first serve Merita cakes, bread and rolls on their tables—they are fresh from the ovens and just as delicious as if home-baked, and they are made of the purest and finest ingredients obtainable—only the best goes into their making. It is far too warm in summer to bother with cake and bread making, and why do so when all the unnecessary preparations can be dispensed with and you can buy products of such goodness and quality as the American Bakeries offers you—they are for sale at grocery stores all over Atlanta.

Variety is recognized as the real secret of delicious meals and it is with tremendous satisfaction that housewives discover how wide a choice the American Bakeries offers them—cakes for every occasion—they are so fresh that their fragrance is tempting—they always are.

Fruits of all kinds are in season now—ripe, juicy and luscious, and what could be nicer to accompany them for dessert than a delightful Merita cake? Plain cakes, both silver and gold, and sponge are fine to use as shortcake for dessert, splitting them in half and heaping either peaches, strawberries, raspberries or blackberries in between and on top layer and serving with whipped cream.

A dish that I had in New York last summer at the Waldorf that I liked unusually well could be made with Merita cake of either of the plain varieties scooped out in the middle and filled with vanilla boiled custard ice cream, hot chocolate fudge sauce poured over it and the top of the whole cake sprinkled with salted almonds and pecans. It is the best dessert I have eaten in many a day—it is unusually good, and different. Buy a Merita cake and follow my description and see if you don't agree with me that it is the best thing you ever ate. I am sure you will like it; everybody does.

There are Merita cakes with fillings and icings of different flavors that are splendid to serve with ice cream and sherbet or with fruit and thick cream, nothing could be better—your family and guests will enjoy them—they are light, of fine grained texture and are really "light as a feather."

Summer days are days of motoring, week-ends, swimming parties and picnics. Everybody is in the out-of-doors all they possibly can—recreation and pleasure is in the air. Nowadays the contents of a hamper for these occasions must be just as dainty and appetizingly prepared as the foods that grace the table of a well-managed household. How necessary to a luncheon or supper served in this informal way for it to be a delicious one. Merita bread makes the best sandwiches ever—it has such a nutty flavor, is so fine-grained and slices so easily. No lunch hamper is complete without a goodly supply of all kinds of sandwiches. Make some for your parties with these fillings: pimento cheese and lettuce, cream cheese and pecans, chopped hard-boiled eggs, pickle and mayonnaise, deviled ham, baked ham and lettuce, chicken, bacon, lettuce and tomato, Swiss cheese, lettuce and tomato, orange marmalade and pecans, chopped olives and cream cheese and chicken salad. There are combinations too numerous to mention—these are just a few suggestions.

You will like the Merita products for their deliciousness and wholesomeness, moreover you will experience a new sense of enjoyment in serving them. I know housewives who tell me they couldn't keep house without them—they are such a convenience, too. When you purchase cake or breads always ask for Merita—they are oven-fresh and come to you with their freshness and flavor protected by a wax-paper seal—they are made in a well-ventilated sanitary plant flooded with sunshine—they couldn't be better—they tempt the eyes and lure the appetite. No wonder they are popular everywhere—ask your grocer and become a "Merita" enthusiast.

"Un Mot Ici Est Bien"

BY MRS. J. J. HARRIS, Sandersville,
State Editor Georgia Division, U. D. C.

It is quite gratifying to note the many chapters which honored June 3 by Jefferson Davies programs. It is fitting that the closing meeting of the fiscal year should be observed in universal fashion and no more appropriate time could be selected than that of the birthday of the chieftain of the Confederacy.

It is our hope that with the beginning of the fall activities, much stress will be given the publicity department in each chapter, so that the official page will be given the help which is essential to make it the success the organization deserves. There is nothing truer than that publicity is the keynote of success. And it is also true that we minimize the real benefit of systematic broadcasting of any line of activity. The press is our best friend. Its strength, like cordons of steel stretching in all corners of our country, bringing us in close touch with our fellow man, is the unit which advances the greatest development of civilization.

The official Constitution page, which has so kindly been allotted for nearly a quarter of a century, has meant much to us in the progression of the work. It is therefore incumbent upon these women whose aims have been benefited by this graciousness, to do all in their power to bring the page up to the highest standard obtainable. With our ever-growing and developing field of enterprise, with its varied departments taking on fresh activities, there is every reason to make the page bigger and better each week. The state editor suggests that an officer be appointed (be she already press chairman or otherwise is immaterial) whose specific duties are to prepare the news for the official page in The Atlanta Constitution. If it overworks the publicity chairman (and we are sure that all chapters are now up-to-date enough to possess that commodity) another officer could be appointed whose only duty is to see that the publicity of her chapter reaches the state editor by Tuesday of each week. It is too much to ask of the president of your local chapter to do the publicity work or any clerical work which may develop, for the head of any organization has enough responsibility without shouldering the cares which by all rules should be relegated to others. It is hoped that this suggestion will be carried out at the fall meeting in September, so that we may be able to show as desirable an official page as is possible to make it.

Mrs. H. M. Holden, chairman of the Alexander Stephens institute, requests that all money for the dormitory which is to be built at the school, be sent to her at once. In an interesting conference with this efficient chairman and one of her most prized coworkers in this enterprise, Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick, the state editor learned much that was of interest anent to this great work. She adds her plea that all chapters do their very best along this line so that the labors of these tireless ones may be brought to a happy completion. A letter from the chairman will soon appear giving out all the facts which are of heart interest to the Georgia division.

"Un Mot Ici Est Bien" will be silent for two months, during July and August. The official page will continue through the summer, but of necessity will be smaller owing to the cessation of our activities. However, it will be replete with items of interest and valuable information to the members of the Georgia division.

U. D. C.

The state editor wishes to thank the readers who have been kind enough to praise the official page and to assure them that their kindliness and willingness to overlook all mistakes has been most gracious and a great incentive. She bids adieu temporarily to her readers with the feeling that for two months she will be missing many dear friends, but feels that throughout this time of necessitated inactivity, she can be of more benefit by careful study of the past developments and workings of the various departments, so that when the activities begin in the fall she may be in a position to increase her efforts toward the developing and building up of the official page of the Georgia division U. D. C.

Chapter Reports

Dublin.

On Wednesday afternoon, June 16, Oconee chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, held its regular meeting of the month at the residence of Mrs. Clay O'Neal, with Mrs. I. G. Primm, Mrs. Marcus Daley and others sharing the pleasure of entertaining with Mrs. O'Neal.

The president, Mrs. Bashinski, was in the chair. All business was carefully disposed of for the summer months, and a splendid outline of work of the fall given by the president. The chapter voted to send a number of cakes with a check to purchase ice cream for the veterans at the old soldiers' home at once.

A motion was carried to make a nice donation to Jeff Davis highway work. Mrs. O'Neal of the local chapter is a member of this committee. A report from the state essay contest gave Miss Saxon Pope, of Dublin, second place in the state work.

Suggestions were made and accepted for a winter study course and program.

The Oconee chapter room in Minnie Davis hall at Athens, State Normal school, was assigned to three young ladies from Laurens county.

Plans were made for a luncheon to be given by the chapter for the C. of C. convention to be held here during the first week of July.

The chapter voted to give $25 worth of books to the Mary Hicks Thompson reading room at Carnegie library for children.

All financial demands were met and quite a number of unsolicited donations made to worthy causes, leaving a balance of $470 in the treasury. A scholarship fund will be established by the chapter. This scholarship will be known as the Helen McCall Bashinski scholarship, and comes as a mark of appreciation of the president's untiring effort in a year of pleasant and profitable work for the chapter.

The program for the afternoon was quite enjoyable. Burke county was the topic.

Sketch of Edmund Burke was given by Mrs. W. R. Lanier. History of county site and other important towns, Mrs. O. L. Chivers.

Vocal solo, Mrs. C. C. Crockett.

Clement Evans.

The Clement A. Evans chapter, U. D. C., held its last meeting until fall with about twenty-five present. The treasurer's report showed the chapter to be in good financial condition with the sum of $55 in the bank to begin the year's work with.

Mrs. E. C. Bruce read a most interesting paper on the Jefferson Davis monument. A letter was read from Mrs. Oscar McKenzie, state president, asking that the chapter send in a paper with the story of the best true experience from one of the veterans during the period of the war of the sixties. A story from each chapter will be sent to Mrs. McKenzie and a prize offered for the most interesting. These stories from the veterans will be of value to the records of Stone Mountain memorial of the Confederacy.

The registrar reported several new members who have been received by the chapter, and the application of several names whose records were being looked up.

Two crosses of service have been given during the year to world war veterans who have Confederate ancestry. These were given to Joseph R. Hand and Dr. T. J. Holton. Twenty-nine graves of veterans have been marked in the city, 15 on St. Simon's and seven on Fancy bluff.

Mrs. J. W. Simmons, the retiring president, gave her report. Mrs. Simmons very graciously thanked each member of the chapter for the wonderful cooperation she has received from the membership during her office. A beautiful paper on "The Only President," written by Dr. J. W. Simmons, was read by Mrs. M. J. Hopps.

Miss Lucile Bruce, a member of the chapter, has received a lovely gold lavaliere made of one of the memorial coins, in recognition of her splendid work in the sale of the Stone Mountain memorial coins. Miss Bruce sold the most coins of any sponsor in Glynn county. Mrs. C. D. Terrell delighted the chapter with two beautiful solos. She was accompanied by Mrs. Bertha Stevenson. Miss Marie Whittle gave an interesting reading, "The Southland."

Liberty County.

The Liberty county chapter, U. D. C., met at the school auditorium, Hinesville, on June 18, for the purpose of celebrating the birthday of Jefferson Davis, June 3.

Destroying Military Gunboats and Stores

BY CAPTAIN JAMES DINKINS

General Roddy was ordered to move to the neighborhood of Corinth and thus be in position to oppose any effort of the enemy in that direction.

Every disposition having been effected, Buford was ordered to the mouth of Big Sandy river, by way of Paris, with instructions to blockade the river. He was reinforced with a section of 20-pounder Parrott guns, brought up from Mobile for that purpose. The following day, Chalmers was directed to take position with his division at Paris, in supporting distance of Buford. Buford, with Bell's brigade and Lyon's Kentucky brigade, the 20-pounder Parrotts and Morton's battery of 3-inch rifles, reached the mouth of Big Sandy on the 28th. He posted Lyon's brigade and the 20-pounder Parrott's at old Fort Heiman and a section of Morton's battery some 500 yards below with orders not to disturb any vessels until they had passed into the reach of the river. Bell, with his brigade and a section of Morton's battery, was put in position at Paris Landing, was put in position at Paris Heiman. About 9 o'clock, October 29, the transport Mazeppa, heavily loaded, with a barge in tow, unaware of danger, passed the lower battery at Fort Heiman, the section of Morton's guns, 500 yards distant, was immediately opened upon her, followed by the 20-pounder Parrotts with fine effect. Her machinery disabled, she became unmanageable and drifted to the opposite shore. Then followed an act of desperate courage, when Captain Gracey, of the third Kentucky, plunged into the river, swam to the vessel and returned in a yawl, in which General Buford and a party crossed back to the Mezeppa. After some little time they arranged a hawser, and she was pulled to the west bank. It was a daring enterprise in Captain Gracey, one that should be recorded and preserved in every capital in the south.

The vessel was heavily freighted with blankets, shoes, clothing, axes and a quantity of hard bread (hard tack), besides other military stores, that were safely placed on the bank of the river. The supply was a great boon to the hungry, poorly clad Confederates, as well as to the people in the surrounding country, who were allowed to share in the booty. The steamer was so badly disabled that Buford burned her.

Early on the morning of the 30th another transport, the Anna, came down stream, passed Colonel Bell, unaware of danger. The section of Morton's rifles opened on her, but Buford, anxious to capture the boat uninjured, stopped the firing and ordered the vessel to come to shore. The pilot rang his bell and signaled, "I will come to at the lower landing," but when he reached that point he kept on his course and escaped. That was indeed a sharp Yankee trick. Buford was furious, and he turned all his guns in her direction, but to no effect. Several hours later, the gunboat Undine and the transport Venus, towing two barges, all laden with supplies, came in sight and were permitted to pass the first guns, then Bell opened on them.

"Navy" Captured.

General Chalmers had reached Paris Landing, and soon afterwards General Forrest arrived with his escort. The Undine and the Venus managed to find shelter around the bend in the river where the Confederate guns could not reach them, but they could not move in either direction. Colonel Rucker made a personal reconnoissance and, finding the movement practicable, was ordered to take the section of Walton's 10-pounder Parrotts, supported by Forrest's old regiment, Colonel Kelley, and the 15th Tennessee, Colonel Logwood, and attack the Undine and Venus. Dismounting his men, Colonel Kelley opened a hot fire upon the portholes of both the gunboat and on the Venus, while the artillery, which Rucker had favorably posted, opened on the Undine. The attack was maintained with such precision, the enemy, unable to reply with effect, moved to the opposite shore. Then, a shot striking the Undine, passed through her from stem to stern. She had been forced to close her portholes because of Kelley's sharpshooters. Her officers and men, not killed or wounded, escaped ashore, and the Venus surrendered.

Colonel Kelley then, with two companies, took possession of her, crossed to the Undine, and brought both vessels to Paris Landing.

They proved a good deal shattered, but General Forrest, determined to raise a Confederate flag on his newly acquired navy and ordered all the mechanics found in the command, as well as the federal machinist on the Venus, to repair the machinery. This was effected most surprisingly by the afternoon of the 31st.

While the repairs were being made another transport, the J. W. Cheesman, came around the bend. She was the largest and best-looking boat we had seen, but Morton made short work of her. She had passed not more than 300 yards when he sent two shells crashing through her upper desk, and followed with a shot that destroyed her machinery. The pilot and several other members of the crew were killed, and the Cheesman floatd slowly to our shore. Her cargo included many delightful articles—coffee, sugar, pickles in barrels, crackers, candies, and an assortment of groceries—everything good to eat. As she neared the bank Captain Bill Tucker of the 18th Mississippi, hallooed, "Put out your gangplank," and just before the planks reached the shore Tucker made a leap for it, but failed to get a footing and plunged headlong into the water and came near being crushed, but was hauled out wet and wiser. The cargo was greatly enjoyed by the troops, long unaccustomed as they were to any but the roughest food.

The Undine, one of the largest of the class of gunboats known as "tin clad," carried an armament of eight 24-pounder brass howitzers. She was ready for action under the Stars and Bars by the morning of November 1 and with the Venus, carrying the two 20-pounder Parrotts, with crews of officers and men detached from the command, was ready to sail. Captain Gracey, who swam the river and rescued the Mazeppa few days previously, was put in command of the Undine, and Lieutenant W. A. Dawson on the Venus, as commodore of the fleet. Everything in readiness, General Forerst boarded the Venus and made a trial trip as far as Fort Heiman. As the vessel rounded into the stream, the troops along the banks made the air ring with shouts and gave cheer upon cheer for Forrest and the navy. The trip was made in safety, and they returned to Paris landing.

General Movement.

Orders were given for a general movement on the following morning. Colonel Dawson was instructed to move slowly up the river, while the cavalry and artillery took up the march along the bank. Chalmer's division, in advance, was to be kept as close to the river as possible, to shield the steamers from any attack from the south, while Buford, following Chalmers, was to guard against any gunboats which might come from the direction of Paducah.

It began to rain, and the roads, rough already, were so slippery and difficult the column had only reached the ruins of the old railroad bridge on the river by night. The steamers were anchored under the shelter of the batteries on shore. It rained hard throughout the night, and the roads were even worse than before. The troops moved slowly, and the fleet unfortunately steamed ahead of the support of the land batteries, and at a sudden bend of the river, they came into the immediate presence of three federal gunboats, which opened fire on them. The Venus, soon receiving a shot among her machinery, became unmanageable; so Colonel Dawson ran her ashore and with his crew abandoned her under a hot fire. She was then recaptured by the enemy, along with the prized 20-pounder Parrotts.

Meanwhile General Chalmers put his artillery in battery at Davidson's ferry and made an effective diversion in favor of the Undine. The enemy was forced back, taking the Venus in tow. After this unhappy affair, resuming the march, the head of the column encamped that evening a mile below Reynoldsburg. Mabry had been directed several days previously to establish himself with his brigade and Thrall's battery on the river above Johnsonville.

He reported at General Chalmer's headquarters, three miles south of the destined point of attack, and was directed to establish his command as nearly opposite Johnsonville as possible, keeping carefully out of sight of the enemy.

The following day General Chalmer's, with the rest of his division, concentrated around that point. Chalmers on the north and Buford on the south, the gunboats were hemmed in, and thus stood affairs on the morning of November 3, when five heavily armored gunboats came up the stream.

They engaged in a sharp skirmish with the Confederate batteries, in the course of which, shells from 32-pounder rifles were thrown fully three miles. They crashed through the woods with great din and uproar, but, happily, without harm. Every old soldier who was ever under the fire from gunboats understands how dreadful the roar and how little the damage—except to the tops of trees. For a time the Confederate man of war (the Undine), took part in the conflict, but the Undine had been badly crippled and was hurried to the bank and set on fire. Gracey had no thought of the Yankees recapturing his vessels.

(To be Continued Next Sunday.)

"LET'S PLAY HOUSE"

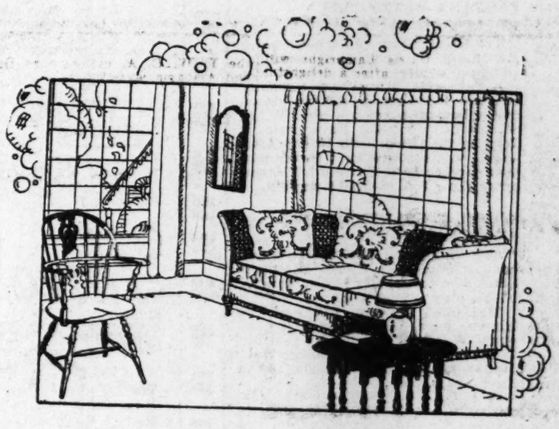

Youthful householders will welcome the advice we are prepared to give relative to the practical furnishings to choose, and our plans for keeping within modest budgets while furnishing apartments smartly.

Our rugs are of best quality, to harmonize with the tasteful furniture we carry.

ONE bright yesterday ago, it was you who "played house"; furnished in your heart a cottage, trim and white. Gay phlox bordering its pathway equalled only by half, the beauty within. Here was fine furniture, fine color—an exquisite hominess produced in the way you combined them.

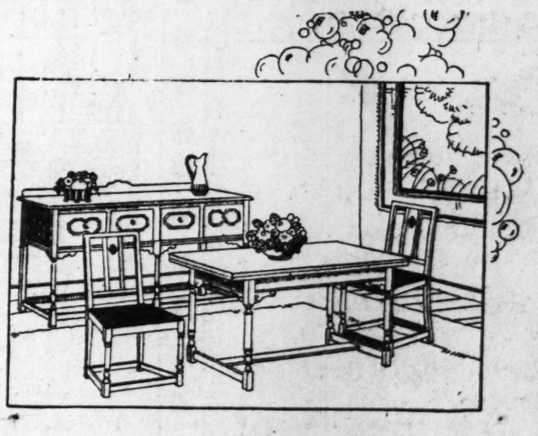

Let's "play house" once again. And talk this time in terms of modern homes. Let's furnish an abode to make a family truly happy. Let's consider good taste, comfort and economy.

Gateleg Tables, $25
End Tables, $4.95
Spinet Desks, $19.75
Day Beds, $17.50
Bridge Lamps, $9.95
Book Troughs, $6.50
Windsor Chairs, $15
Wing Chairs, $45
Secretaries, $89
Humidors, $10.50

The Living Room

LET'S pretend the living room is small, as perhaps yours is, and furnish it informally. Flank a lightly upholstered Davenport with a fine Gateleg Table—harbor for lamp, books or impromptu feast. Make provisions for the book-lover, with a Book Trough, perhaps. Choose a Windsor for contrast with a Covered Chair. Behold a living room inexpensively furnished, simple and charming.

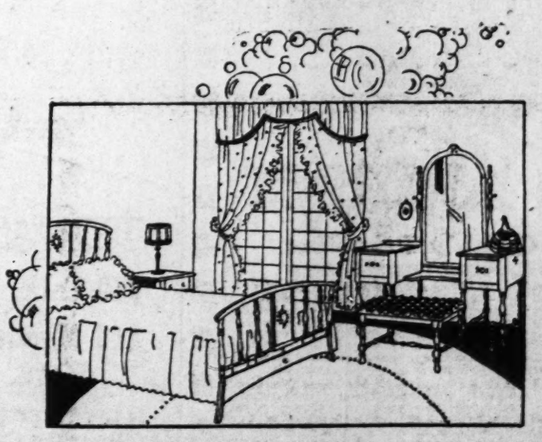

Console Tables, $11.50
Tea Wagons, $22
Tilt Top Tables, $17
Mirrors, $12.95
Breakfast Tables, $6.95
Servers, $20
Fern Stands, $4.95
Compote Sets, $2.75
Torcheres, $25.00
Baby Carriages $22.50

The Dining Room

LET'S make the dining room a treat to visit, in its cheeriness. Let's choose light walnut or maple for the dining suite, which is to include a buffet, because lighter tones are fashionable. The wood's richness will enliven the room, even as smart draperies of printed linen will light up the walls. Now a plain rug as background and the dining room is complete.

The Bedroom

A RESTFUL pleasing room—by all means let's make the bedroom that. Furniture painted a cool green will be more than satisfying. It proves agreeable to softly colored rugs and crispy curtains at the window. These latter make a bedroom, every woman knows, though she'd not be without her Slipper Chair and convenient little Night Table if she'd enjoy her bedroom thoroughly.

Women's Voice Heard for Prohibition

BY M. FRANCES MEADOR BURGHARD.

If ever an organization "threw a boomerang" it was the wet bloc in congress when they arranged for those much-talked-of "hearings."

The reaction has been overwhelming in the dry favor.

Note, for instance, how lamentably they failed in securing the cooperation of the women. The membership of the national women's organizations, running into multiplied millions, refused to be bamboozled by personal liberty sophistry or confused by the insistent claim of the A. A. P. A. that "prohibition is a lost cause." Those clear-brained, clear-visioned, observant, thinking women knew better.

"During the last few months the leading national organizations of women have had a chance in convention to express their sentiments on the question of prohibition. They have done so in a way to indicate that they are 'of the same opinion' as in the days when they lined up to help secure the adoption of the 18th amendment," is the way the Union Signal sums up the situation.

The women's national committee for law enforcement, representaing nine organizations, with a combined membership of 12,000,000, meeting in Washington early in the year passed a clear-cut resolution "pledging its membership to the support at the polls of only such candidates as will stand squarely for no repeal of the 18th amendment nor modification by weakening of concurrent legislation, and that all candidates for public office be requested specifically to state their campaign position on this question."

Y. W. C. A.

In April the National Young Women's Christian association, representing a membership of over 600,000, at its biennial convention in Milwaukee, affirmed by resolution its belief that to legalize the sale of light wines and beer would not only bring back the saloon in some form but would tend to nullify the 18th amendment, and "resolved to go on record against any measure which would weaken the 18th amenment, pledging hearty cooperation not only for the enforcement of law but for the building up of intelligent public sentiment for law observance."

P.-T. A.

Early in May the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, meeting in Atlanta, voicing the sentiments of over a million men and women, expressed its disapproval in a resolution "of all attempts to readmit wine and beer or otherwise weaken enforcement, as against the interests of child welfare, and pledging itself to press forward year after year to better enforcement of the dry law."

N. F. W. C.

This month the 10,000 delegates to the National Federation of Women's Clubs, representing approximately 3,000,000 members, at is biennial conclave in Atlantic City, gave their uncompromising support to the 18th amendment and the Volstead act, in a resolution that was adopted without discussion and without a dissenting vote.

W. C. T. U.

This vast company and many state groups of organized womanhood standing with the organized church women and the Women's Christian Temperance Union, forms a mighty army for the defense of the constitution and the safeguarding of our home protection law.

The immediate mobilization of forces and concentration of efforts for the election of senators, representatives, governors and members of state legislatures pledged to hold fast and enforce the national prohibtion act is the task from now until the election in November.

STATE W. C. T. U. PRESIDENT URGED TO RUN FOR GOVERNOR

The state W. C. T. U. headquarters in Macon, always a busy place, with the click of typewriters, ringing of telephone bell, moving of mail and messengers, the meeting place of Maconites and the rest room of out-of-town visitors, took on unusual activities recently when some of the state's leading citizens came to urge, wrote to urge, and phoned to urge the state W. C. T. U. president, Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, to enter the gubernatorial race.

The people of her long-time home, Eastman, through the chamber of commerce, begged to be allowed to pay her entrance fee of $250 and offered to contribute $5,000 to her candidacy expenses. She received many offers of various kinds of assistance—but Mrs. Armor has no political aspirations—her life work is for the observance of the prohibition law, in spirit and in truth, and for the triumph of Christ's golden rule.

From time to time Mrs. Armor has received flattering offers from other organizations and from big business concerns to go out on the platform for them, but neither flattering honors nor financial emoluments could tempt her to cease to fight the liquor traffic, the enemy of God and home and every land, with all her "being's ransomed powers" in the ranks of the Woman's Christian Temperance union.

MRS. ARMOR AN OUTSTANDING SPEAKER.

The platform powers of Mrs. Mary Harris Armor cannot be overestimated, that is why it is impossible for her to fill all of the speaking invitations she receives.

In her home city, Macon, she did find time to address the Vineville Methodist Missionary society on Monday afternoon of last week, most of whom were W. C. T. U. members, but half a dozen who were not, signed the pledge card and paid their dollar W. C. T. U. dues when she had convinced them of the close relation of temperance to missionary endeavors.

On Wednesday she entertained and stirred the Kiwanians at their luncheon, making things lively and laughable, and at the same time presented profound prohibition truths with force and brilliance.

Last Sunday morning she made a prohibition address to a receptive congregation of 1,000 at the Tabernacle Baptist church, making the service one of deep spirituality.

On last Tuesday evening she spoke at the Sam Jones Memorial church in Cartersville at the seventh district W. C. T. U. rally.

She is to be the speaker at the first session of the all-southern Christian Endeavor convention, made up of the ten southern states, at Daytona Beach, Florida, July 1.

She will attend the meeting of the board of temperance and social service of which she is the only woman member, the other members being Bishop James Cannon, Jr., U. S. Senator Morris Sheppard and a number of the most distinguished ministers and layment in southern Methodism, at Lake Junaluska, N. C., July 4-11.

She will address the Junaluska assembly on youth and prohibition in the great assembly hall the evening of July 4.

Mrs. Armor will lecture in Georgia during August. Her itinerary is being arranged by Mrs. Lella A. Dillard, of Emory university. Unions and towns desiring a visit from her should communicate with Mrs. Dillard as soon as possible, for Mrs. Armor's dates always go like hot cakes.

PAGEANT FEATURES RECEPTION OF W. C. T. U.

The beautiful reception with which the Macon W. C. T. U. honored the 160 new members, Mrs. Armor, who had just returned from a two months' absence, lecturing in distant states, and a long-time member, Mrs. W. N. Ainsworth, who will leave early in July for the Orient with Bishop Ainsworth, was featured by . flower mission pageant by fair young ladies carrying arms full of bright flowers.

WHITE RIBBONERS AT CHAUTAUQUA.

The Frances E. Willard house will be the mecca for White Ribboners throughout the country at Chautauqua, N. Y., July 5-August 16.

Mrs. Ida B. W. Smith, of Des Moines, Iowa, will represent the national W. C. T. U. officially the first three weeks, and Mrs. Margaret C. Munns, of Evanston, Ill., the second three weeks.

A splendid program has been prepared, which is varied to suit all tastes.

Mrs. Ella A. Boole, of Brooklyn, N. Y., national W. C. T. U. president, will make an address in the Chautauqua auditorium on W. C. T. U. day, July 19.

MRS. MARTHA ALLEN DIES IN NEW YORK.

It is with deep regret that the announcement comes of the death of Mrs. Martha M. Allen, Forest Hills, Long Island, N. Y., for many years the director of the medical temperance department of the national W. C. T. U.

The Georgia W. C. T. U. sent a message of sympathy to her son, J. Roy Allen, and her daughters, Mrs. Leland Post and Miss Martha Allen.

Mrs. Allen was the author of many leaflets giving the opinions of physicians on these subjects.

Epworth League Program Announced.

Allen Yum, of Songdo, Korea, will be the principal speaker of an interesting program at the regular monthly missionary meeting of the Epworth League of the First Methodist church Sunday evening, June 27. Other special features will be a solo by Mrs. Robert B. Acuff and a rendition of Bachmaninoff's prelude in C by Brinton Everroad.

The program, which has been arranged by Miss Bess de Mauney, superintendent of the fourth department, will begin at 7 o'clock. A social half hour will b. held at 6:30 o'clock.

Mrs. Weitherington Installed President of Boulevard Club

At the annual meeting of the Boulevard Park Woman's club held Monday, June 14, at the home of Mrs. A. E. Griffeth, 1103 North Boulevard. the new officers of the club were installed. Mrs. Raymond H. Wolfe, retiring president, presided at the opening of the meeting and Mrs. J. R. Weitherington, new president, at the close. Annual reports from Mrs. W. M. McLaurine, Mrs. J. R. Weitherington (corresponding secretary), and Mrs. E. D. Thomas, treasurer, were received.

The president's report showed steady growth of activities in community and city. Mrs. Wolfe thanked the officers, chairmen and members of the club for cooperation during her administration, stressing the importance of activities through chairmen and committees, as it is to them that credit is due for whatever attainment the club has reached. In her talk Mrs. Wolfe stated: "An important revision of your constitution and by-laws brings your fiscal year from June to June, instead of midwinter, and should insure an unbroken season of activities and greater accomplishments. This depends, of course, upon the cooperation and sympathetic understanding of every member of the club. You are now the 'Boulevard Park Woman's club,' and I know yo will live up to the ideals of the old and the ambition of the new. For the response and support of every member, but particularly the officers and chairmen, I am deeply grateful. None can know my appreciation for those who have stood by and 'held up my hands.' If you have not accomplished all that you would wish, remember we should not overlook our shortcomings or our failures, but use them for steppingstones to higher things." In behalf of the members of the club Mrs. N. A. Hughes, retiring first vice president, presented Mrs. Wolfe a silver epergne. Mrs Wolfe thanked Mrs. Hughes and the members of the club for their expression of confidence and esteem.

The new president, Mrs. J. R. Weitherington, was presented and welcomed. In endering the gavel to the new president Mrs. Wolfe said: "Success to you; may this gavel ever fall on meetings of progressive women, harmoniously striving toward higher ideals and the betterment of conditions for mankind."

The new president presented the other officers includi g Mrs. R. G. Game, first vice president; Mrs. W. H. Chambers, second vice president; Mrs. W. M. McLaurine, recording secretary; Mrs. Emmie Ballew, corresponding secretary; Mrs. W. L. Mewborn, treasurer. Mrs. W. O. Gaffney is the auditor and this is a new office in the club. The resignation of Mrs. McLaurine was regretfully received and this vacancy will be filled by the executive board. The members voted to disband for months of July and August, resuming activity in September.

Mrs. C. M. McLaughlin, program chairman, presented Miss Betty Weitherington in a "Dutch Dance." Mrs. T. A. Suttles gave several vocal numbers, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Robert L. Wood. Mrs. J. R. Weitherington gave two interesting readings.

Mrs. Garmore Will Give Luncheon.

Mrs. G. J. Garmore, of 366 North Moreland avenue, will entertain at a bridge-luncheon at the Henry Grady hotel Monday afternoon in honor of her sister, Mrs. Terese Achard, and Miss Estelle Riske, both of St. Louis.

Hapeville Club Sponsors Barbecue On Saturday

The Fulton county commissioners and other county employees who were instrumental in the recent improvement of highways in the vicinity of Hapeville were guests of honor at a barbecue-picnic in that city Saturday, June 26.

This rally was sponsored by the Hapeville city council and the Hapeville Woman's club, in order that the citizenry might get better acquainted and to arouse more civic enthusiasm. The mayors and the members of city councils of the neighboring towns, East Point and College Park, were among other out-of-town guests of distinction. Five hundred people enjoyed the bounteous feast and speeches.

Eugene F. King, mayor of Hapeville, was master of ceremonies. Among those called upon for speeches were the members of the board of county commissioners, which includes Paul Etheridge, Edwin Johnson, Virlyn Moore, Walter Stewart and Captain George Hope, and Commissioner-elect Charles J. Turner. Short speeches were also made by Judge John D. Humphries and former Commissioner I. N. Ragsdale, who resigned to become a candidate for mayor of Atlanta.

Members of the Hapeville city council, who were responsible for the occasion, with the assistance of the Woman's club, were: H. L. McElhannan, Lee Howard, Emile Schenck, George Moody and Will Landers. The ladies of the club who worked with the city council were: Mesdames Fred Johnson, president; Marvin King, chairman picnic committee; W. B. Stewart, J. Raymond Catby, Howard K. Moss, A. H. Allen, Emile Schenck, Ernest Schenck, E. L. Green, J. M. Watkins, S. E. Treadwell, Thomas Redmond and others.

A number of young girls served at the lemonade tubs and tables. These were Misses Eunice Lee, Jimmie Stallings, Ruby Pear, Elizabeth and Marie Moss, Margaret and McArve Allen, Mildred and Elizabeth Schenck, Annie Mae Walker, Ann Clay, Louise and Katherine Carter and Dorothy Beddick.

There will be a meeting of the executive board of the Hapeville Woman's club at the home of Mrs. G. W. Taylor, on Jonesboro road, Monday morning at 10:30 o'clock.

The regular monthly business meeting of the club will be held at the Hapeville auditorium Thursday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

THE KENNESAW REUNION.

Not since the far-off fateful day of Appomattox has the nation looked upon a more inspiring and significant occasion than that of yesterday on Kennesaw Mountain.

The ancient Greeks, whose almost annual routine was civil war between some of their states, erected only wooden monuments to mark a victory, hoping the passions of that war would last no longer than the wooden memorial.

But with us in America the great and grievous "War Between the States" from 1861 to 1865 was tremendously different. It embattled brethren of the breed over inherited and educated convictions, over principles of right that were irreconcilable by any compromise, and over powers of government that had been contested for near a century. That war fixed imperishable muniments of Americanism and insured the progress of the nation to the unchallengeable leadership of the world—the leadership that dates from the reunion of its vital sections.

Yesterday, after 62 years, leaders of the veterans who fought there foregathered on the field of one of the decisive battles of the internecine war; gathered to promote, in one mind and one heart, a vast and lasting national memorial to the gallant Americans who contested, bled, died, or survived there. Nothing like that has been seen before and this is the first joint memorial ever contemplated by the government of the whole nation.

When, here in Atlanta in 1877, President Hayes spoke of the "War Between the States" in which he was himself a general officer, as "like when Greeks met Greeks" he was savagely criticized throughout the north for the characterization. Now the whole nation says the same. And should this brilliantly planned project succeed one can stand upon an Atlanta summit and see on Stone Mountain and on Kennesaw twin memorials to valor and fraternity that will intrigue the sentiments of every American and challenge the admiration and reverence of all mankind for ages to come.

THE ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE.

The senate committee investigating campaign expenses seems to be getting at some startling facts as to the Anti-Saloon league and its activity in national and state politics.

The startling fact has been developed that upwards of $35,000,000 has been expended to lay the foundation for the Volstead law—this not counting the expenditures of the subsidiary state organizations.

Heretofore many unsuccessful attempts had been made to uncover some of the mysterious and secretive inner workings of that colossal political organization. Indeed it had remained under cover so long that General Manager Wayne B. Wheeler perhaps felt a certain degree of immunity.

Under the persistent fire of the senate committee, and especially its chairman, however, the public is finding out many things, and among them that there is no lobby organization in America, probably, so amply supplied with funds, and that these funds are used in political state and congressional campaigns in the interest of individuals rather than in the interest of temperance or sobriety or the encouragement of morality, or even in the enforcement of law. The fact is the use of political slush funds could hardly be considered in the interest of morals. If the political morals of a people are bad then it is not difficult to understand how other moral conditions may be bad.

Mr. Wheeler, testifying Wednesday before the senate committee, declared that the national organization in the period from January 1, 1920, to December 31, 1925, received a total of $3,444,623.66. In the same period disbursements, according to Mr. Wheeler's figures, were $3,430,285.87.

The receipts in Pennsylvania, according to the witness, for the years 1921 to 1924, inclusive, were $653,954.32, while the disbursements for the same period totaled $664,801.07. Subsequent statements by Mr. Wheeler indicated these totals did not include campaign expenses, but included donations to the national organization.

That there are other state organizations as "large and vigorous" as the one functioning in Pennsylvania was frankly admitted by Mr. Wheeler. Among the states with comparable organizations he named New York, Illinois and Ohio.

The public has long been wanting to know these facts. The funds for the Anti-Saloon league are contributed by poor people as a rule, on subscription cards that pledge monthly payments. They are filled in usually by those who go to Sunday services conducted by paid lecturers of that organization. These lecturers speak from pulpits. And yet is there moral justification for the spending of $664,000 in one state in five years in the interest of promoting candidates for office—indirectly if not directly? That is a question that the conscience must answer.

The Anti-Saloon league has been "sold" to the public by its own salesmen as an agency to promote temperance and good government and law obedience and the high ideals of Christian living. Is it "temperance" to throw more than $100,000 a year into one state in political campaigns? For what was that money spent—the employment of election "watchers?"

It is not possible to arrest political corruptions, or promote democracy, by tactics that are contrary to political purity and to popular self-government.

WHERE THE BLAME?

The recent distressing wreck on the Pennsylvania railroad, which touched the hearthstones of many homes—some of them in Georgia—with overwhelming sorrow, is said to have been caused by the engineers on the thundering Cincinnati Limited not observing the flares and torpedoes used to warn them that the Washington Express was stalled ahead because of a bursted air hose. The engineers who are blamed are dead. They cannot answer for themselves, and just why they did not observe the warnings will perhaps never be known. It is not conceivable that they either heard or saw—until too late surely—the warnings that were used. It has been suggested that their hearing was probably deafened by the noise of the powerful locomotive, and that smoke and steam very possibly obscured their sight. If so, then this tragedy should serve to concentrate drastic efforts to remove the causes so that there may never be a repetition. Sometime tragedy can be used to impress a lesson and in the end good may result.

There is certainly the suspicion that the signal lights and torpedoes, under the circumstances, were not powerful enough. There must be protection for trains with their human cargoes that are caught under circumstances similar to those that existed at Blairsville. The imminence of danger must be clearly within the vision and hearing of engineers.

There must be something distressingly lacking when a catastrophe similar to that on the Pennsylvania system can occur.

WEEVILS APPEARING.

Information reaches The Constitution from several sections of south and middle Georgia that boll weevils are beginning to appear in the fields of young cotton—in several sections in larger numbers than heretofore at this time of the growing season.

This necessitates again the warning that cotton farmers must be on their guard against weevil infestation if they hope to make a profitable crop of cotton, or even if they hope to make production income approximate even production costs.

There is an opinion in some quarters that the boll weevil is passing from Georgia. It is entirely erroneous. The weevil invaded Texas almost two score years ago and the infestation is just as heavy in wet seasons now as in the early days of the invasion. There are growing seasons, attended by long periods of dry weather, during which infestation is light. This condition may follow also an extremely cold winter. But if such a season is followed by a growing season favorable to weevil infestation then the weevils hatch out by the billions, and without control methods rigidly applied, the growing crops are destroyed.

The weevil does not come for a few years and pass on to other fields. When the invasion begins the weevil is there to stay. Farmers must not forget that fact, and in the forgetting become careless and indifferent to weevil control. Preparedness is half of the battle. Calcium arsenate properly used will control the weevil along with rapid, intensive, efficient cultivation. The one requires the other.

At each planting season advance preparations against infestation should be made by proper preparation of seed beds, ample use of good fertilizers, and the use of good seed—these precautions, along with common sense methods of drainage, rotation, etc., adding greatly to the producing capacity of the soil despite the weevil problem.

The boll weevil has taught the cotton farmer—or it should have done so—to farm better, work harder, apply scientific methods, and to balance production. In teaching him these things it has made his farm operations more profitable than before—or it should have done so.

Thousands of cotton farmers have found the boll weevil a blessing in disguise—in impressing the real lessons of how to farm successfully along with the lessons of how to control the boll weevil successfully and get more gross cotton off of less acres than under the pre-weevil days and the old system. But this fact is of no comfort to the farmer who will not listen to the rules of reason, and who at this very hour finds weevils in his young cotton without any preparations to master that situation.

The point now is—the weevils are turning out. Prepare to fight and to master.

"TRUTH IN ADVERTISING."

The Associated Advertising Clubs of the World held its annual convention in Philadelphia last week. That fact calls to mind the splendid work of that organization and the advertising clubs affiliated with it in the cause of good advertising. "Truth in advertising" as a slogan has become a command. It is so generally accepted today that no advertiser can get by with anything but the truth in advertising. The public demands it, the newspaper demands it, the law demands it—and success demands it.

The Wilmington (Del.) Every Evening says:

"While there are here and there business concerns which have not completely grasped the full meaning of the slogan 'Truth in Advertising,' the number of such concerns is growing less and less as time goes on. It is becoming more and more evident that advertising of any and all kinds to be profitable must be based upon truth."

Advertising that misrepresents, even if clothed in language that passes a strict legal test, is never permanently profitable.

Business success, to be permanent and lasting, must be built upon the rock of confidence. "Truth in Advertising" is a motto that any business concern, or any individual, with any hope of success, can well afford to follow, and the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, and the thousands of men and women everywhere who know and appreciate advertising at its true value, have done much to bring this situation about. The result has not only been to discourage untruthful advertising, but to build up a greater appreciation and a more lasting confidence in advertising as a whole.

BANK RESPONSIBILITY.

Commenting on a recent strong and forceful advertisement inserted in Georgia papers by one of the state's largest banks—an advertisement devoted almost entirely to the supremacy of the state in clay deposits, The Manufacturers Record says:

"A banker is regarded as the exponent of the activities of his community. He can be a depressing pessimistic influence or he can be an upbuilding optimistic power. He can discourage industrial and business developments or he can be a leader in carrying forward constructive forces. A bank ought to be the center of influences to radiate knowledge about a community's resources. If every banker in the south would recognize his responsibility to the direct upbuilding of the industrial interests of his community and his state, the progress of the south could be doubled over the rate at which it is now growing. Much of the industrial development in North Carolina in the furniture industry, in cotton manufacture and other activities has been created by the active work of bankers in that state. In some other states bankers are to some extent carrying on the same kind of work, and especially so in connection with agricultural improvement. The field, however, as yet has scarcely been touched. There is room for great expansion of this kind of work."

The advertisement in question attracted the attention of The Constitution and reference was made to it. It is a fact—a commendable one—that a large number of banks in Georgia are public spirited in helping every worth-while enterprise, and most of the larger banks devote considerable of their advertising newspaper space to boosting outstanding state resources.

In the rural communities the Georgia bankers, as a rule—with only here and there an exception—have been powerfull influences in overcoming original boll weevil depression. The Constitution urged a vigorous system of balanced production, and then local cooperation in better marketing the products substituted for "all cotton" in the new program. The banks helped to a marked extent—helped in the enlargement of the poultry industry, the fruit and nut and melon acreage, and in the organization of cooperative marketing agencies, etc.

Continuing its comment, with a bit of constructive advice or suggestion, The Record continues:

"The larger banks of the south should individually or collectively for each community employ the ablest experts, engineers, chemists and all-around business men to search out opportunities for building up industries. Having discovered them, these banks should then cooperate in financing them. Today it is difficult for the projector of a new enterprise to know where to turn for the necessary capital. If the banks of the larger cities of the south had such an organization as we have suggested the projector of any new industry would know exactly where to go to learn as to its feasibility and how and where to secure the capital needed."

This is entirely true. The passive good will of a bank does not answer the purpose. It is a bank's business, as a quasi-public institution, dependent upon the property of the community, to materially aid that community by an aggressiveness in not only developing resources and helping the good and the worthy, but in keeping out the bad.

A bank's responsibility in a community is as sacred as it is important. It is most essential that it takes leadership in worth-while developments, thus holding in check speculative tendencies, but keeping in the procession of progress the entire zone it serves.

LEE'S RETIREMENT.

There will be general regret, not only in his own congressional district, the seventh, but throughout Georgia, that Representative Gordon Lee feels that his health will not permit him to stand for reelection. He has served 22 years in congress, and most conspicuously, having been for many terms vice chairman of the powerful committee on agriculture, and at the present time vice chairman of the agricultural committee of the general appropriation committee. There is little doubt that he could have remained in congress the remainder of his life, for there is not a more popular man in his district, nor has the lower house of congress, in its entire personnel of 435 members, one who holds to a greater degree the personal esteem and support of a constituency.

His long and faithful public career is marked with many monuments that will stand through all time as tributes to service of great and outstanding benefit to all the people—not only of Georgia and the south but of the nation. As a member of the national forests commission, created under the Weeks law, he has been chiefly instrumental in the establishments of the national forests in the southern Appalachian mountains, and for this service alone the entire south owes him a debt of everlasting gratitude. In this service he has also built the foundation for the national parks that were authorized in 1924. In every item of agricultural legislation for the benefit of the southern farmers, for 20 years, his wise leadership was felt, and no man in congress has enjoyed a larger influence at the department of agriculture, regardless of the political faith of the cabinet administration. In fact Gordon Lee's influence in governmental departments in Washington is second to no man, for he has always placed constructive service to his people above politics, or expediencies.

Even before his election to congress, when a member of the state senate, Gordon Lee built everlasting monuments of service. He was a leader in the fight against the convict lease system in Georgia, and for building permanent highways by putting the convicts upon the public roads. He is progressive in thought and action, sound, defendable, unselfish and as politically clean as any man whose name ever appeared on a printed ballot.

It is gratifying that his health is improving and his multitude of friends wish for him, with a deep and abiding love, many years of continued service to his state and country as a private citizen. AN EXCELLENT NUMBER.

The Columbus number of The Industrial Index, which is one of the south's leading trade periodicals, and published in Columbus, is perhaps the most outstanding special edition ever issued by that publication devoted exclusively to the progress of one city and section. Its 208 pages, and cover pages of old gold, are filled with beautiful illustrations, and the most attractive and entertaining reading matter. The advertising patronage, in volume and character, illustrate the splendid backing that the editors, Walter J. and W. C. Woodall, have in their home community. Columbus is a city of marvelous progress and of progressive business men.

WE SHALL SLEEP

BY FRANK L. STANTON

I.

In the darkness long and deep,
We shall sleep.
Just as they have slept of old,
When life's deeds and dreams were told,
Where in vain life's tempests sweep,
We shall sleep.

II.

Where we neither sow nor reap,
We shall sleep.
I have dreamed that you would be,
Sweetheart! here to weep for me: . . .
Be those tears in heaven's keep,—
We shall sleep.

III.

May they place your dreaming face
Close to Love's embrace.
In a darkened couch of sand
I shall feel for your dear hand,—
Clasp it, in the silence deep,
Of the last, long sleep.

NEW ERA EVANGELISM

Let Us Regenerate the Great Order

BY SAM W. SMALL

A brand new stunt in the evangelistic trade has been pulled off in Los Angeles, the eruptopia of bizarre sensation. This time it is a lady who has become more or less famous in the field of commercialized preaching, who has been openly copped in her one-piece rig from a public bathing beach in open daylight by a trio of bold, bad kidnappers. After having been mourned for a month by her weeping worshippers she reappears in an Arizona-Mexican town with a weird story that needs about a pound of salt to each paragraph.

It Is A Sad Tale, Mates.

The tale may be gospel truth, but this bird is from Mizzoury! Those alleged preacher-poachers must have high-geared imaginations to suppose that any real evangelist, except Billy Sunday, could cough up a ransom of half a million dollars to get back on the job.

It only evidences how sadly the money-mongering brand of modern evangelism has affected the thinking of irreligious elements. I am absolutely convinced that "evangelists" belong in the order of the ministry of the Gospel of Christ. They are proclaimed by the chief apostle along with pastors and teachers, and in every Christian church should have their commissions and functions. When so ordained and indorsed they can enter upon fields and do salvation work that are not available to bishops, pastors or Bible and Sunday school teachers. The often urged idea that "every pastor should be his own evangelist" is simply silly stuff.

The True-Hearted Evangelist.

I may be psychically prejudiced on this subject, but my ideas were confirmed by 12 years' of close cooperative service with Rev. Sam P. Jones in evangelistic meetings in all the greater cities of this nation. American Christianity has never produced his equal as a true-hearted, consecrated and effective evangelist. He had studied the spirit and lives of all the great line of evangelists from St. Paul to our day. From the recorded works done by Luther, Calvin, Knox, Wesley, Whitfield, Asbury, Finney, Dow, Cartwright and Moody, he formed his philosophy of the spiritual authority and resources of a genuine evangelist. He never doubted for a moment his Divine call to "do the work of an evangelist" and he did it with the soul of a servant and a soldier. His works remain to testify for him and no man of today in the evangelistic field stands hip-high with him.

Strangle the Circuses.

I do not wish to see evangelists put under a general taboo. It would be a crime against Christ to do that. It was a great mistake by the bishops of his church when Sam Jones was forced by them out of his regular relation and became an independent evangelist. What I would like is to see the pastors generally put the kibosh on the commercial evangelists who are unblushingly "out for the money." There are scores of them barn-storming the country and bidding for the limelight and lucre by the most absurd and actually un-Godly sensationalism.

I am thankful that Sam Jones never coveted being "the Georgia Cyclone," or a "Cowboy," or "Tornado," or "Whirlwind," or other sort of hot-air artist of the pulpit.

All that sort of advertising is nauseating to men and women of real religious sentiment and reverence. It is a decadent sign, and the churches and regular ministry, while encouraging honest evangelism, should resolutely resist the invasions of the fanciful and financial evangelists who can be easily identified.

Philippines at Turn of Quarter Century

The commission for investigation of the Philippine islands appointed by President Coolidge has sailed to make a new survey of the United States' territory in the Far East.

"With the commission's departure the spotlight of public interest again turns to the Philippines," says a bulletin of the National Georgraphic society from its Washington, D. C., headquarters.

"The quarter century since the first Philippine commission finished its work in 1901, has seen vast changes in the islands. An inventory of Philippine trade, of education, and general welfare shows advances all along the line.

"Scratch off coffee, insert embroideries, then the list of the islands' five chief products for export remains the same. But the order of their importance and most of all the rolled-up total of their importance to the Philippines has changed. For years Manila hemp was the leader. The most valuable export today is sugar and the next most valuable is the coconut. Then follows hemp. Tobacco is in fourth place just as it was during the latter years of Spanish control. Philippine embroidery is the new entry. Coffee in the Philippines succumbed to a tropical disease.

"The year 1901 was the first normal year for the Philippines after they became United States territory. Aguinaldo's insurrection had been suppressed. The soldier made way for the civilian. That year Philippine trade, exports and imports, doubled the Spanish average for many years. Today Philippine trade exceeds the quarter billion mark, which makes it more than four times as much as in the first peace year under the American flag.

A College Older Than Harvard

"If age were the only test, the Filipino could call the American school system mere mushroom growth. A graduate of the University of Santo Tomas in Manila can refer to Harvard as a young upstart college, because Santo Tomas opened its doors in 1607, the same year John Smith and his hundred colonists began their trials with mosquitoes and malaria at Jamestown. The Philippine school system, however, is almost entirely American made. Spanish law required that there be two teachers, one for instruction of boys and one for instruction of girls to each 5,000 people. Actually it worked out to one teacher to more than 4,000 people.

"Today there are more than 25,000 teachers in Philippine public schools. These teachers, 98 per cent of whom are Filipinos, are training 1,132,000 pupils.

"Although there are 87 dialects spoken in the Islands, English has become the national language in 25 years. There is not a town or remote village now where some children at least do not speak English. Spanish is spoken but not nearly as much as English.

"Probably the most significant detail in an inventory of the state of the Philippines is the decrease in the number of white residents. The census of 1903 showed 14,000 white people, most of them American, while the last authoritative census, 1918, showed 12,000. Meantime the population of the whole archipelago had increased by 3,000,000.

"Straws in the wind are probably more important than the tablets of 25 years of progress in the Philippines. These are some of the straws. Plans are under way for planting 30,000,000 Para rubber seedlings during the current year. A new profitable export has been discovered in buntal or Bangkok straw hats which has leaped in four years from the $200,000 peg to $2,000,000. Although tenth among the world's sugar producers, the Philippines are first in area of land available for cultivation. Before 1909 there was not a single modern mill. Now there are 31 producing centrifugal sugar while the muscovado sugar boiled out by the rough and wasteful methods of Vermont maple sugar making, is decreasing in proportion.

Canning Industry Growing.

"The world is waking up to an appetite for delicious tropical fruit and the Philippines are waking up to the fact that the islands are eminently fitted to grow such fruit. The Filipinos look with envious eyes on the profits of Hawaiian pineapple and now claim they can raise even better pineapples. Mango, lanzon, chico and pomelo are strange names to the American housewife, but they may not long remain so if the Philippines are successful in canning and marketing their fruit products. Rattan which the forests produce in abundance remains yet to be exploited. American furniture makers can use this product as they are beginning to use Philippine fine wood for American chairs, tables and dressers and radio sets.

"But if the custom of pigeonholing a nation or a district by its product, such as Illinois, the corn belt state; Sao Paulo, the coffee country; the south, the land of cotton, is accepted, then the Philippines should be known as the land of fiber. From a banana plant Filipinos obtain probably the strongest known plant fiber, Manila hemp; from the fibrous stalk of the cane they produce sugar."

High Tribute Paid Senator George By Mark Sullivan, in Commenting on Democratic Presidential Possibilities

BY MARK SULLIVAN.

Washington, June 26.—(Special Correspondence.)—One of the first echoes of the Pennsylvania disclosures is "Get rid of the silly direct primary." In practically those words this proposed cure comes from Senator Charles David Reed of Pennsylvania.

Let us charge to Senator Reed's youth his illusion that only the direct primaries have been accompanied by the lavish or improper use of money, and that before the direct primaries everything in politics was pure. Senator Reed, however, has available a simple mechanism for overcoming this defect of youth. He is a lawyer, and a good one; a scholar, and a sound one, and a man of liberal reading. Let him send his check to the congressional library and get "The Story of Montana," by C. P. Connolly, and read how the late copper magnate, William A. Clark, got his seat as senator, and tried to get it a second time. Simpler yet, and closer home to Senator Reed, let him get the volumes of The Congressional Record and the other documents which tell how the late Senator Matthew S. Quay, of Pennsylvania, got his reelection to the senate in the early 1900s.

Both the Clark case and the Quay case strung through the years from 1900 to about 1903. At that time Senator Reed was in the law school. He may have been so absorbed in his law books and other scholastic diversions that he did not read closely the newspapers of the day. That omission can be cured by a half hour's reading of "The Story of Montana" and of the Quay documents.

"The Story of Montana," which includes the narratives of a copper millionaire's successful and unsuccessful attempts to get into the United States senate, will supply Senator Reed not only with information, but with rich entertainment. Senator Reed is a man who, in his less tense moments, can get a laugh out of a record of human comedy; and of that there are rich stores in the Clark case.

People speak, with respect to the nomination of United States senators, of abandoning the direct primary and "going back" to the party convention. As respects senators, there never were any nominations by party conventions. (I think this statement is correct.) Under the old system, before the constitutional amendment of 1913 went into effect, senators were elected by state legislatures. There was no occasion for a party convention to act on them except, perhaps, to give them an indorsement. What happened was that the republican members of each legislature held a caucus and agreed to support a republican for senator. The democratic members did the same.

With respect to United States senators, the state legislature was the equivalent of the party convention. What happened in state legislatures about United States senators happened in party conventions about nominations for all offices. A superficial distinction lies in the fact that the actions of state legislatures were brought to light occasionally because the legislatures were official bodies and the members formally elected. Party conventions, being unofficial, were not so susceptible to the light of formal investigation. The elections of United States senators by state legislatures give a key to what went on about nominations of all sorts of offices by party conventions.

The direct primary may have its faults. It may be—indeed, it is—less applicable in the large states of the east with dense city populations than in the comparatively small and prevailingly rural populations of the western states in which the system was devised and first had its growth. It may be that modifications of the direct primary are desirable. Several eastern states, especially New York and New Jersey, seem to grope toward an adaptation of the direct primary, an adaptation which uses it not as the sole means of making nominations but as an alternative mechanism not to be used every year but always available to be used in case public opinion should be outraged by improper nominations made by the party conventions. In short, this suggested modification of the direct primary looks upon it as at once a check upon party conventions and party leaders and a standing threat to them, causing them to make nominations such as will not provide an incentive for the mechanism of the direct primary to be put in motion.

The reaction of public opinion to disclosures of large sums spent for nominations seems to make some distinction between money spent by a rich man on his own behalf and money contributed by others. Further than this, the public seems to make a distinction between some rich men and other rich men.

In these Pennsylvania disclosures it came out that upward of $160,000 was spent in behalf of one of the three contestants, Governor Gifford Pinchot. But it was also brought out that practically all this money came directly out of the pockets of the governor himself and his immediate relatives. There was one contribution of $11,000 from a friend of the governor, George W. Woodruff, a Pennsylvanian long identified with reform movements. The rest came from Governor Pinchot himself, from his wife, his brother and his aunt. This seems to constitute in the governor's mind a clear distinction between his case and the cases of his two opponents. (There was another distinction also; each of the other contestants spent from four to eight times as much as Pinchot.) The distinction that Governor Pinchot's friends make seems to be conceded by the public. If Governor Pinchot had happened to win the fight and if the disclosure of the amount of money spent had come out afterward, hardly any one believes there would be much commotion about it or that many voters, otherwise favorable to Pinchot, would withdraw their support because of the amount of money.

The essential basis for this distinction lies in the fact that Pinchot would take the office without any financial obligations to anybody except members of his immediate family; and to these he would have, regardless of money, the ordinary obligations of kinship anyhow.

Against this theory, it is necessary to remember that most of the money spent in behalf of Newberry came from himself and close relatives; and Newberry was crucified. But the distinctions in this field do not seem to rest on logic.

As respects Pinchot's opponents, Pepper and Vare, much hung on the sources of the money outside themselves. The heart of the distinction was revealed by the remarkable candor of one witness, Grandy, who gave a large sum himself and made himself responsible for a very large sum, indeed. Grundy is the president of the Pennsylvania Manufacturers' association. He said that part of his interest lay in his wish to have Fisher made the candidate for governor. When asked the reason for his preference of Fisher, he explained that in Pennsylvania for 50 years past the stock of manufacturing corporations has not been taxed, that this immunity has been a source of much enjoyment to the manufacturers and accounts for much of the prosperity of the manufacturing industry in Pennsylvania. Grundy explained further that the opposing candidate for governor, Beidleman, had been infected with a heresy such that he had talked dangerously about withdraking the immunity now enjoyed by the manufacturers. Grundy made it clear that in his understanding of the intricate web of private conscience and private interest he was justified on behalf of himself as a manufacturer and on behalf of the Manufacturers' association, of which he is president, in exerting himself and his pocketbook to make sure that no unsound economic theory, as he conceived it, should gain entrance into that impressive marble state capitol that caps the hill at Harrisburg.

An indulgence similar to that granted to Pinchot seems to be granted also by the public to Henry Ford. The case of Ford brings up a second angle of the whole question.

Ford could turn this organization to the advocacy of himself for the presidency without much trouble and without many defections from such Ford agents as might place their preexisting political convictions and affiliations over their business relation with Ford. The work of the Ford organization as a political unit could not possibly be duplicated by any politician. To even faintly match it would cost tens of millions of dollars—possibly it would run bove a hundred millions. And this says nothing of the prestige Ford has acquired through publicity, the advertising of his business.

This feeling that some men, some actual or potential candidates for office, are already so fortunately placed explains why many disinterested observers feel it would be a mistake, as the outcome of the Pennsylvania disclosures, to put by law a flat horizontal limitation on the amount of money that some other men may choose to spend. Some persons who think beyond the immediate present reflect that there always is the possibility that one of these preexisting organizations might become a menace and that the business of organizing an equally effective opposition might seem under some circumstances to be one of the most worthy enterprises conceivable.

The direct primary in so far as it applies to nominations for the presidency certainly entails expense. Under the old party convention system it was possible for the party leaders to name candidates for the presidency without the expenditure of any money to speak of, either by the candidates or on their behalf. It was possible, also in occasional cases, for a magnetic personality to sweep a convention off its feet and get a nomination without the expenditure of anything except magnetic oratory. Bryan used to say that the entire expense of his democratic nomination in 1896 was less than $100, the mere amount of his railroad fare from Lincoln, Neb., and his bill at one of the more modest Chicago hotels.

But since the direct primaries have come from one-half to two-thirds of delegates to national conventions go there with instructions to vote for one candidate or another, which instructions have been given them in direct primaries in their respective states. Broadly speaking, a man who hopes to get a presidential nomination or whose friends hope to get one for him must now be known to the public. It even is not enough that he should be known to his own state or his own section. He must be known throughout the country. He must be sufficiently well known that voters at the direct primaries will cast their ballots for him as against some other candidate.

A man ordinarily becomes well known to the public through previous public service. This gives a kind of monopoly to men already in the public eye. It is conceivable that the best possible presidential timber might exist in the person of a man comparatively little known.

To be concrete, there is a new man in the senate, quite little known as yet, who, many people think, would make a good democratic candidate for the presidency. He is Senator George, of Georgia. A few observers and a few democratic politicians have come to think, based on observation during George's brief tenure in the senate, that he is not only able in the ordinary sense, but has that particular combination of just enough oratorical ability, coupled with clear thinking and impressiveness of personality to make an excellent presidential candidate. Persons who think this about George believe also that because of his comparative youth and for other reasons he could readily overcome the handicap supposed to attend the fact that a man comes from the lower south. (Probably that handicap already has disappeared, if people but recognized the fact; it went with the passing of the Grand Army of the Republic as a political factor.)

If George is what is here suggested there hardly could be any service to the democratic party or the public more valuable than to put George in a position where direct primaries in states all over the county would indorse him. That, however, would mean organization and money, a great deal of both. Probably George himself would need to make a good many expensive trips as far west as the Pacific coast to make speeches and make himself known. That would cost more than a negligible sum, but it would only be a fraction of the whole amount desirable. There would need to be an organization. Many persons would need to make trips up and down the country to talk to local leaders. There would need to be publicity. Probably George's own speeches, if he has the availability some persons think and if a program of speeches were keyed to this end, would be printed by the newspapers generally without any particular expense, but there would need to be more publicity than that and more organization than that. Presumably it would be necessary, or at least desirable, to enter the primaries in several states, and if there were opposing candidates this would require organization and expense. Any person familiar with this process would say that from $100,000 to $300,000 to $400,000 would be little enough to spend in completely justified ways in making a candidate for a presidential nomination sufficiently known to the country. Actually, men like General Wood and ex-Governor Lowden, who started already well known, spent several times that.

All this composes a hypothetical situation to at least suggest that the subject of limitations on campaign expenditures such as may arise through legislative action on account of the Pennsylvania disclosures is too complex to be settled offhand.

Daniel Willard, Railroad Chief, Traces Development

An interesting address was delivered by Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, speaking before the Mid-day Luncheon club of Springfield, Ill. Mr. Willard, the full text of whose remarks has just been given out for publication, said in part:

I am not wholly a stranger in Springfield. The Baltimore and Ohio property, with which I have been connected for nearly twenty years, has a branch line running through Springfield, and while the Springfield-Flora division of the Baltimore and Ohio is not a part of our main line, nevertheless it serves a rich agricultural section most of the way and it does reach Springfield. The close relationship which has just recently been reestablished between the Baltimore and Ohio and the Cincinnati, Indianapolis and Western gives us in effect another entrance into your city and serves to stimulate our interest in your development.

I suppose you expect me on an occasion like this to say something about the railroads and more particularly about the Baltimore and Ohio, with perhaps special reference to what the Baltimore and Ohio management may have in mind regarding Springfield.

The railroad business, so far as it is a business, is very much like any other industrial or commercial undertaking in that the railroad cannot succeed, maintain its facilities, furnish adequate service and keep abreast with the increasing traffic requirements unless it can be operated at a profit, maintain its credit and be able to obtain the new capital necessary for its expansion. But unlike so-called private business, the railroad is a common carrier and has been held to be a semi-public servant and therefore subject to regulation in the public interest. The regulation which the people have imposed upon the railroads goes so far as to determine what charges the railroads may collect for the services which they perform, the kind of service in a general way which shall be performed, and in large degree the wages which they shall pay to their employees. It has been held by the courts that these several phases of railroad operation, among others, are properly subject to control and regulation in the public interest.

While the regulating bodies which have been created for the purpose of exercising these broad powers have not hesitated in the past to take whatever action they deemed necessary in the public interest, it is nevertheless a fact that railway managers have many times felt that such action taken presumably in the public interest but without a full appreciation of what the effect might be, has not only in many instances been unjust to the railroads and to their owners, but has also proven to be inimical to the public interest as well. What I mean specifically is this—the railroads, regardless of the showing which they have made in support of their requests for additional revenues in order that they might be able to furnish the facilities necessary to handle promptly and efficiently the business offered to them, have frequently been denied the increased rates requested, and the result in many cases has been that in times of industrial activity those who wished to ship by railroad found themselves unable to obtain prompt and efficient transportation service, and on that account buyers were obliged to carry a much larger stock, tying up substantially larger sums in inventory than would otherwise have been necessary, and sellers have found themselves unable to take advantage of the most attractive market conditions. Secretary Hoover has estimated that the loss to the public resulting from inadequate transportation facilities might well exceed one billion dollars a year. Happily the conditions to which I have just referred as having existed in the past have now very largely, if not wholly, disappeared, but I suppose as long as human nature remains imperfect as it is, the possibilities of unwise regulation will always exist. I really believe, however, that the outlook in that connection is more encouraging today than at any time within my own personal experience.

It is a matter of record that the railroads of the United States, taken as a whole, ought to spend each year for additional equipment and facilities such as double tracks, side tracks, new terminals, new stations, grade separations, etc., roundly $750,000,000. During the last sixteen years the Baltimore and Ohio company itself has spent over $330,000,000 for just such purposes, and so far as can now be seen it will be necessary to continue to spend proportionately each a year a similar amount for some time to come, provided we keep in position to give the public a character of service abreast with the possibilities and requirements of the time.

Private Ownership Adopted.

The policy of private ownership and operation of the railroads was adopted or at least permitted to develop in this country when railroads were first established, and the passage of the transportation act of 1920 may be construed as a most definite indorsement or reaffirmation of that policy by the people as expressed through their representatives in congress. It is, of course, recognized that under private ownership the new capital which I have referred to as being needed each year for railroad expansion, must be obtained from private investors like yourselves, and however much we may feel that our liberties are restricted in certain directions, no one has yet ventured to suggest that anyone should be required or compelled to invest his money in ways that he did not approve. An exception, of course, might be urged in the matter of taxes. In short, if railroads are to continue the expansion of their properties they must be able to establish and maintain a credit sufficient to enable them each year to obtain from willing investors, at reasonable rates of return, upwards of $750,000,000. Congress fully recognized this fact and the transportation act was framed with that thought in mind. So far the railroads as a whole have been unable, since the passage of the transportation act of 1920, to earn the net return upon the property devoted to transportation purposes which congress expected them to earn and which congress presumably considered necessary to maintain their credit. I feel confident, however, that under the terms of the act, if fairly interpreted and applied, the railroads, particularly in the eastern region, will be able to establish and maintain a satisfactory credit provided the existing basis of federal regulation remains unchanged.

The people in the United States make greater use of their railroads than any other people in the world. The American railroads as a whole perform an annual service equivalent to the moving of 4,000 tons of freight one mile for each man, woman and child in the United States. This is from two to four times as much carrying service as required or used by the people of any other nation except Canada, where condtions are much like ours. The rates charged by the railroads in the United States before the war were admittedly the lowest in the world, and relatively, though not actually, they are lower today than before the war.

I have referred to a period in the past when many railroad managers felt that they did not always receive fair treatment from the regulating bodies, and I have also said that I believe that at the present time the railroads are justified in feeling confidence in the future provided the present transportation act is undisturbed. You might perhaps conclude from what I have said that the improved condition referred to was due wholly to the passage of the transportation act, and while I do believe that the improvement is in large measure due to that fact, the real cause of the change reaches back and beyond the act; in fact is responsible for the act itself. What is meant is this—when the railroads in this country were in their formative period, when the country itself was new and railroad managers were being urged to extend their lines into undeveloped and unsettled territory, as was the case in your own state of Illinois, large risks were involved in the undertaking. A definite understanding had not then been arrived at concerning the economic position of the railroads; for instance, the fact that in time they would be so fully regulated as has since come about was not then foreseen. Furthermore, in a time of great adventure and rapid development when this nation was being settled and built up, the men who became leaders in railroad development were strong men like the leaders in all other activities, and the methods that were sometimes pursued during the period of development, while perhaps necessary or at least believed to be necessary at the time, were afterwards disapproved of and condemned, and this gave rise to a general state of misunderstanding, resentment and antagonism between many of the people and many of the railroads.

Relationship Readjusted.

This period of misunderstanding and the subsequent readjustment of relationship continued through a considerable number of years. It began to assume a serious aspect in the early 70's, and it may be said to have culminated in the passage of the interstate commerce act in 1887. Then for the next thirty years there was a gradual readjustment of relationship in line with the slowly developing policy of governmental regulation, and when I say "slowly developing policy" I have in mind the time that was necessary for the passage of the regulatory acts in the first place, for the courts to pass upon and construe them in the second place, and then the revisions, re-enactments and amendments that followed until finally we have emerging from the situation the transportation act of 1920. It would have been impossible to pass the transportation act of 1920 ten or fifteen years earlier. The reason that such an act could be passed in 1920 was because the lawmakers, the shippers and the railway managers all had behind them at that time the cumulative experience of many years of trying to solve the problem in a way that would be mutually helpful and satisfactory. They had gained by experience a better understanding of the problem; and because of such understanding there had developed a willingness to deal fairly with the matters at issue. This better understanding lead to a readjusted point of view which in itself, I believe, is responsible for the act under which we are operating at the present time. Perhaps no one considers the present transportation act perfect in all respects, but, in my opinion, it is the most constructive piece of regulatory legislation that has so far been passed —certainly in this country and so far as I know in any country—in the world. While the act itself is important, the point of view or the state of mind which is responsible for the act is even more important, and there should be a constant and sincere effort on the part of railway managers, railway users, and in fact upon the part of all who are really interested in the welfare of our country, to see that this condition or attitude of sympathetic understanding of the problem is preserved and strengthened. To do this, of course, means that there must be frankness between the railway managers and the railway users. There must be an appreciation on the part of each, of the problems and difficulties of the other, and then if we are willing to be fair, and it is my considered judgment that the great majority of all the people will be fair in any given circumstances provided they only know the truth, the railroads should be able to keep their facilities abreast of your requirements and to furnish "adequate service at reasonable rates"—that being the test prescribed in the transportation act itself.

It is not only necessary, if the railroads are to succeed, that there should be a satisfactory basis of regulation fairly interpreted and applied, but there must also be a basis of justifiable confidence on the part of railway managers in the stability of the existing status.

It has already been stated that during the last sixteen years the Baltimore and Ohio company had spent over $330,000,000 for additions and improvements to its plant, and I have personally recommended to the Baltimore and Ohio board of directors the expenditure of every dollar of that large amount. Of course, I would not have been justified in recommending the expenditure of a single dollar of someone's else money unless I had reason to believe that the principal itself would be safe and eventually returned to the rightful owner, and that the agreed rate of interest would also be paid during the time when the money was being used by the railroad. There were times during the sixteen years when I regret to say that my confidence was very much shaken, and during those periods our expenditures for enlargements and betterments were curtailed to the utmost possible extent. Again I am happy to say that at the present time, with the existing laws and with the better understanding which now exists between the railroads and their users, it seems to me that the basis for confidence was never sounder, certainly not within the limits of my own personal experience, and the result is seen in the recognized fact that for the last two years the railroads in this country as a whole have furnished a better and more satisfactory service than ever before.

The establishment and effective cooperation of the shippers' regional advisory boards has contributed in no small degree towards bringing about this important and generally satisfactory condition of service.

In the midst of seething and teeming New York life we often imagine ourselves the center of the universe, the axis and hub of civilization. We give little thought to the fact that beyond Manhattan's skyline there are hundreds of other worlds equally important in the scale of humanity. They may not all come up to New York's standard of commercial activity, but some predominate over us in culture, others in social charm, others again in picturesqueness or romance.

* * * *

An ocean liner, after all, is a world in miniature. During the voyage it is self-sufficient and self-sustaining. The analogy could be continued. We could even detect social strata. Below in the nethermost depths are the men who work and sweat and shovel coal. Beginning with the stoke hole and climbing upwards you encounter greater and greater luxury, leisure and comfort.

* * * *

Highest of all, serene in his calmness and conscious of tremendous responsibility is the skipper pacing the bridge. The ship is his charge. He is lord and supreme master of this floating world. A touch of his hand on the wheel and the sea monster steadies itself, dives nose first into a gigantic breaker, swings to the right or left.

* * * *

During the passage the passengers are mere drones in this zooming and vibrating beehive. Stewards, engineers, pursers, deck hands, cooks, dishwashers are the workers. They cater to the comforts of the idle. They hover and pirouette and prance about them with food, with drink, with chairs, with laprobes, with warm teddies if it's breezy.

Doctors are on hand to cure headaches, wireless operators to send messages forward and backward, agents to steer passengers to comfortable hotels, luxurious resorts and fast railways.

* * * *

After dinner a band plays in the dining saloon. The deck with its hundreds of shadows and platinum moon becomes a garden of Venus, over which waft soft balmy breezes, blowing from Africa or the salty spray of the ocean.

* * * *

When the passage is unusually smooth and pleasant you see people getting fat and healthy. The changes are actually noticeable. They eat, drink and sleep on time. Regularity comes into their lives. Worries are far behind. There is a sense of indolent abandon.

* * * *

One business man, tired and half a nervous wreck when he came on board, became a changed human being, with color in his cheek and light in his eye. He went around telling everybody he was not bothered with indigestion for four days. He revived. A gymnasium instructor had him in hand twice a day and punched his heavy paunch away from him. He paced the deck with elastic steps, a new man.

* * * *

There are always people on board to whom everything is fraught with wonder. Others affect a sense of bored indifference. The smoking room becomes hilarious after midnight and wild strange humans sing "Yes sir, she's my baby" together. The barroom steward is the most overworked individual on board. But, as it happens to be, he likes the idea.

Glimpses of Hollywood

BY ROSALIND SHAFFER.

Hollywood, Cal., June 19.—(Special Correspondence.)—Mae Marsh entertained at her Flintridge home on Saturday afternoon for her little daughter, Mary Arms, who was seven years old. Tables were laid in the yard under the blossoming prune and apple trees and the huge birthday cake with its forget-me-nots and roses was cut by little Mary and served by herself.

Colored balloons were tied on the chairs for the little guests and pretty sprinkling pots of gilt and paper contained the essential birthday candies and hidden favor for each child.

Mae's second child, a little boy of six months, enjoyed the fun from his buggy which was placed near the table.

The Arms home in Flintridge is a beautiful English colonial with old fashioned green shutters and white pillars and the yard is lined with beautiful beds of white daises, while tall hollyhocks tower against the white house itself.

A dog house with the swing door and a lovely playhouse with a verranda big enough for several children to play in were built for Mary by one of her boy cousins of which she has several. Mae's mother is at present paying the actress a visit and told proudly that she is now the mother of nine grandchildren; Mae's second baby being the ninth and youngest.

Amoung the guests were the two children of Miriam Cooper, now Mrs. Raoul Walsh, but perhaps best remembered as the southern girl in "The Birth of a Nation." Mrs. Walsh looked striking in a white homespun coat with which she wore a scarlet hat with a band of parrot feathers setting off her deep brunette coloring.

Bill Hart Jr. in a mannish shirt with real cuff links came in for considerable admiration and astounded the other children by explaining that his favorite birthday cake was of egg sandwiches with icing on them. Winifred Westover was with little Bill looking none the worse for her recent auto accident in which she was knocked unconscious against a street curbing while attempting to make a crossing. She wore a printed silk sports dress of black, white and yellow, and a large felt hat of Alice blue.

Mae Marsh expects to return to picture work as soon as her baby is a little older; a year ago she made her latest picture in England. It was entitled "The Rat." Mae appears the same winsome, sprightly slim girl who first charmed as the little sister in "The Birth of a Nation." She seems much rested and improved by the country life with the baby and husband, Louis Arms, in Flintridge.

Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky are preparing to start out for the desert in Nevada where "The Winning of Barbara Worth" is to be made and neither of them is looking forward to it with any great longing, for it is to be another one of those long, broiling sieges in the hot sun. Miss Banky, who is learning her English at great speed even vouchsafed in conversation at the Goldwyn lot that she expected "I will come back 'hard boiled,'"

Then came up the subject of horses and the horseback riding that will be necessary for both Colman and Miss Banky during this picture. On being questioned about the riding accident she had while making "The Dark Angel," which was printed in local papers, Vilma admitted she knew nothing about it at all and wisely concluded that the press agent had neglected to tell her of it.

Speaking seriously, Miss Banky said that she considered the side saddle which is the customary one for women in Europe, was much more comfortable riding than the American style, astride. Colman told of how he astonished some of the cowboys in the desert where he recently was on location with the "Beau Ceste" company when he showed them his English saddle which he prefers. Our cowboys could not figure how Colman could sit on his English saddle at all. On the other hand, he found our western saddle with its high back quite disconcerting to sit on while riding at any speed.

Rumor is buzzing about Hollywood again, this time broadcasting that Valentino has slaked his fiery emotions in the flame of another fair heart which happens this time to belong to Greta Carbo, the Scandinavian actress. Just where this puts Pola and the love test no one knows, but all are figuring desperately.

Mauritz Stiller, who was considered by everyone to be the logical suitor for the hand of Miss Garbo—in fact, he sold Metro-Goldwyn-Mayor the idea of hiring Greta when he came to the United States from Sweden as a famous European director and she as a practical unknown—is to direct Pola in her next picture, so that in place of a triangular problem we may have an equilater, rectangle.

* * * *

Stiller recently left Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer when he was in the midst of making "The Temptress," with Greta Garbo and Antonio Moreno and the incidents surrounding his sudden departure caused much speculation in Hollywood. One version percolates to the effect that Stiller thought Moreno lacked the fire he wanted in the role, that the picture was one long argument and no work was done; consequently something else had to be. Stiller is to work with Laskys now. Greta continues at M-G-M.

John Barrymore, always colorful, has just done another surprising thing. He has gone off on his yacht, the Mariner, an ex-Gloucester schooner, with his monkey, Clementine, as mascot, on a sea race of two weeks from San Pedro to Honolulu. The Mariner is Barrymore's own yacht which he bought for pleasure, but he is shipping as an able seaman and doing his share of keel hauling and deck swabbing along with the rest, as there is no room for a mere passenger on the ship. All hands must help with navigation which is entirely by sail and Owner Barrymore, bare-footed and in an ancient wool sweater must say "yes, sir," to the man he employed as skipper.

Barrymore took four weeks off for this cruise, thus delaying the making of his new picture, "Francois Villon," for which he will receive $100,000. His 104-foot vessel is considered a likely winner in the race sailing with its engine sealed and dependent on wind alone. In case of storm or other emergency the engine can be used, but this will disqualify the ship in the race.

Barrymore's coming picture is one of his lifelong enthusiasms and he is boyishly delighted over the prospect of depicting this vagabond romantic poet of the reign of Louis XI of France. When Sothern was playing in "If I Were a King," a Villon story, Barrymore was at that time an artist and made the posters for the advertising.

Antedating that he had made a sketch to illustrate Robert Louis Stevenson's "A Lodging for the Night," another Villon story, and it was the first thing he ever sold.

Estelle Taylor is back home again accompanied by her mother, who will spend two weeks with Estelle in her new home.

Ruth Clifford is vacationing in the woods and waters about Superior, Wis., and reports that the fish are biting something great. She is accompanied by her husband, J. J. Cornelius, a Beverly Hills realtor.

Mrs. Tom Mix and her small daughter, Thomasina, have left for Catalina, where they will spend the next month at the summer place of the Mixs' over at Avalon bay. Tom hopes to join them soon and take them sailing on his yacht.

Renee Adoree is again exercising the woman's right to change her mind. First she divorced her husband, Owen Moore, then she announced her engagement to Gaston Glass and then to Douglas Gilmore; her latest is rumored to be Rudolph Primi, and Hollywood so far just refuses to pay any attention to it, figuring it is just one of those things.

Lou Tellegen is now putting the one-armed paper hanger to shame; he just completed a role in "Married Alive" and is working simultaneously in "The Pelican" and "Woman Power," while in his odd moments he is preparing the script on "His Wife's Honor," and is putting the finishing touches on a stage drama in three acts. In his spare time he sits and thinks, or sometimes he just sits.

One of the thrills of the week was a birthday party given by some noted picture folk for an unmarried girl in their circle. Among the presents received was a real baby doll with a quart sized nursing bottle full of the beverage that used to make Peoria famous.

Clara Bow had a few moments as hectic as come to any gal in this world this week. With a perfectly good finance on hand, Gilbert Rowland, she was startled to find that a young man, Robert Savage, of excitable temperament, had attempted to commit suicide by slashing his wrists and then smearing her photo with his blood. Clara, it seems, had liked the young man when she first met him, and after listening to some of his poetry, both published and impromptu, took a trip to the marriage license clerk with him late one night. The office was closed, but the next day she felt differently about it and the young man began to peak and pine away.

After the pseudo suicide her real fiance got so annoyed he said their engagement was all off; now it is announced to be fixed up again and as Robert Savage has decided Clara isn't as warm hearted as people ought to be, because she didn't send him flowers when he staged his near suicide everybody's happy again.

Jacqueline Logan is postponing her scheduled honeymoon in Europe with her husband, Bob Gillespie, a real estate man, and is returning at once to Hollywood to begin work on a new picture. Bob recently astounded all Hollywood by winning a sum up in five figures at a party in which dame chance was entertaining the boys. It is the local record.

Crovo Succeeds Patterson At Metropolitan Theater

Willard C. Patterson, associated with Sig Samuels for the past 10 years as manager of the Criterion theater and later as manager of the Metropolitan theater since it opened in July, 1921, has tendered his resignation, effective July 3, it was announced here Thursday.

Mr. Patterson will be succeeded at the Metropolitan by John Crovo, one of the best-known theater managers in the south and one of the few "old line" showmen connected with the motion picture industry in this territory.

For many years Mr. Crovo was connected with the S. A. Lynch enterprises during the years when Mr. Lynch was pushing the development of important theater properties in the southern states. Later Mr. Crovo became affiliated with Famous Players-Lasky corporation and was for several years manager of the Lyric theater here when that house broke all records for a continuous run of dramatic stock.

During his long association with the Lyric Mr. Crovo made a host of friends in Atlanta who will welcome his return to the city and his management of the Metropolitan.

In speaking of his resignation, which concludes a period of 10 years' association with Sig Samuels, during which he developed two of Atlanta's most popular motion picture theater enterprises, Mr. Patterson says:

"It is with real regret that I leave the Metropolitan. My connection is being severed with the friendliest feelings on both sides. For Mr. Samuels I hold a genuine admiration, and for his unfailing consideration I have only the highest praise, not merely as a business associate, but as a cherished personal friend.

"My immediate plan is to take a much-needed rest—a vacation in the mountains. On my return I shall make a new connection that is more advantageous to my interests. My leaving will in no way affect the present high-class policy of the Metropolitan. In fact, some of the biggest pictures ever presented in Atlanta are already scheduled for summer playing and the bookings for the fall and winter are unusually attractive."

Decatur County Views To Be Used by Chamber In Advertising State

Bainbridge, Ga., June 26.—(Special.)—Upon request of Malcolm D. Ainsworth, publicity director of Greater Georgia, Inc., the chamber of commerce through its secretary, L. C. Bush, has furnished that organization with photographic illustrations of the various manufacturing plants in Decatur county as well as of the various growing crops in the county.

These photographs will be used by Greater Georgia, Inc. in its publicity for Georgia among the various state and national publications, and thus Decatur county will be brought to the attention of the outside world from this angle.

The chamber of commerce has asked for local cooperation in securing photographs of exceptional or unique scenes in Bainbridge and Decatur county. These will be used in the rotogravure sections of The Atlanta Constitution and Atlanta Journal.

FARMERS OF BERRIEN HAVE GOOD CROPS

Nashville, Ga., June 26.—(Special.) Farmers in Berrien county are busy these days curing tobacco which has been in progress in this county since the last week in May.

Undoubtedly Berrien county has the best crops in a period of six or seven years—tobacco, corn, cotton, peanuts, potatoes are the best ever—and it is predicted that Nashville will have two sets of buyers and there will be no bloc sales.

Democratic Club For Women Plans Political Classes

BY MARTHA STRAYER.

Washington, June 26.—Democratic women are coming to Washington this summer to learn the latest technique of mounting the political stump and making the eagle scream.

The Women's National Democratic club will teach them. The club starts a series of summer classes July 1, and the pupils will be leaders of democratic women's clubs from coast to coast.

Democratic women are beginning to rouse themselves from the coma they dropped into when Calvin Coolidge was elected president two years ago.

"Teacher" will be Mrs. Minnie Fisher Cunningham, of Texas, prominent in the National League of Women Voters as well as the democratic party. Under Mrs. Cunningham's direction, plans have been worked out for a three-subject course of study.

First, the pupils will be given instruction in party organization, then they'll learn all about political campaigning; how to make campaign speeches; maybe even how to kiss voters' babies! Third, they'll take a brief and intensive course in the party principles handed down from Thomas Jefferson and Woodrow Wilson.

Six groups of women will make up the classes and will be given courses of 10 days each, beginning July 1 and ending August 28. It will be a boarding school proposition, too. The club women pupils will make their home at the national democratic clubhouse.

This club occupies a fine and expensive old building downtown. It is supported by fees from national membership, and by a few rich democratic women in Washington who were responsible for its organization. Mrs. Woodrow Wilson is among its members.

Mrs. Cunningham, who will conduct the women's political summer school, is an efficient organizer. Before suffrage gave her an opportunity for political activity, she had put in years of training in women's clubs.

Vetch Field Nets Worth Farmer Big Income Per Acre

Sylvester, Ga., June 26.—(Special.) That Worth county can produce profitable feed crops is clearly shown by a report from County Agent H. J. Prance, of a demonstration in oats and vetch grown for hay by E. E. Hicks on his farm near Sylvester.

Mr. Hicks planted 3 1-4 acres to oats and vetch last fall at a cost of approximately $6 per acre for seeding. Application of 500 pounds of fertilizer at planting time plus 100 pounds of soda applied as a top dressing made his total expenses run around $20 per acre, including the cost of labor. Mr. Hicks has just harvested this field of oats and vetch and made a gross yield of 7,331 pounds of cured hay per acre or a little more than 3 1-2 tons.

Valuing this hay at $30 per ton, which is $5 below the price of timothy but ranks with alfalfa in feeding value, this would give him a gross income of $109.96 per acre. Deducting the $20 cost of production, leaves a net profit of $89.96. By following this crop with soy beans or peas Mr. Hicks will probably harvest from 1 1-2 to 2 tons more hay this fall.

This is one of a series of demonstrations being conducted in Worth county by the county agent to show that large yields of hay can be grown profitably and that Worth county farmers should be producing their feedstuff in this way during the winter months, when the land is otherwise idle.

This hay crop produced by Mr. Hicks has not seriously hindered the planting of corn or other feed crops on this land as is usually grown during the summer, it is stated. If the summer crop fails he has already received a profit from his winter cover crop, and, at the same time, left a valuable supply of available nitrogen in the soil stored there by this winter legume, the county agent points out.

Alamo No. 1 Theater.

"The Isle of Ships," a tale of adventure, romance, love like you've never seen before, here Monday and Tuesday. A beautiful girl, a New York detective and his prisoner, a man accused of murder. For days they drifted, then one morning the tentacles of the Saragossa sea drew them to its vortex and here they found "The Isle of Lost Ships," a mighty empire of stranded ships and strong men who fought and robbed and killed to gain power. It is one of the big red-blooded pictures of the year, with a huge cast including Milton Sills, Anna Q. Nilsson, Frank Campeau and Walter Long. Wednesday-Thursday, "The Bar C Mystery," the new big Pathe serial. A drama of the west, a land of cattle and gold, a land of great riches, of lawbreakers, law-makers and guardians of the law, a land where abound adventure, intrigue, romance and thrills. Don't fail to see Chapter No. 1, "A Heritage of Danger." Also a William S. Hart picture, "Shooting Iron Jim," another big Hart thriller. Full of exciting gun-play, hard-riding and hard-fisted fights. A Hart thrill you don't want to miss.

Friday and Saturday, Fred Thompson and his famous horse Silver King in "The Mask of Lopez." One of Thompson's greatest westerns and a western that everyone likes to see. Daring, thrills, mystery and laughs aplenty. Also a good selected comedy.

Tudor Theater.

Richard Talmadge, star of numerous speed pictures, every one of which presented him in a role which allowed him no rest, the scripts of which called for his jumping everything from airplanes to fast moving trains, and from speeding autos to bucking horses, comes again to thrill the spectators in one of his best, speediest and most thrilling pictures, "The Better Man," which opens Monday at the Tudor for a run of three days.

For the last of the week, which promises to be a memorable one for the Tudor, the theater offers Buffalo Bill, Jr., in "Rawhide," a drama of the west, and of a man who was literally as tough as rawhide, hard as iron, speedy as a rattler, and with a nerve of cold steel; and the story of life as it's really lived on the plains, where "the survival of the fittest" is the only law that will ever be fully obeyed.

In addition to these features, the Tudor offers also a program of short subjects, comedies and novelties which make excellent entertainment.

Roy V. Harris, Solon From Jefferson County To Seek Speakership

Louisville, Ga., June 26.—(Special.)—So far as Jefferson county is concerned, politics will be tame this year except for some of the state house offices. K. M. England, C. Wadley, and R. V. Harris, of Louisville, incumbent, have both offered for re-election for representatives, and have no opposition. Mr. Harris has served in this position for the past 12 years. The counties of this circuit are Emanuel, Toombs, Candler and Jefferson.

Carl Vinson, member of congress from the tenth district, where he has served for the past 12 years, has no opposition for reelection.

SUNDAY HEALTH TALKS

BY WM. BRADY, M. D.

BOARDING SCHOOL PRACTICE.

A mother writes that her daughter, 17 years old, has been given aspirin for "colds and any other complaint" since she has been attending boarding school. Now the girl asks for aspirin nearly every day at home, saying she has a headache or does not feel well, and that the house mother always gave it to the girls in the school whenever they complained. This girl's mother has written to the school requesting that no more aspirin be given to her daughter—but probably the school people will dismiss the mother's request as insignificant. That's the way most private schools are conducted. The doctor has told this mother that her daughter's heart is weakened. The boarding school people have pronounced the mother's interdietment of aspirin "perfectly absurd." If the girl's tuition is prepaid, as most of these schools are particular to require, and there is a waiting list of applicants, as nearly every school or college has nowadays, the girl will probably be required to take the dope whenever the house mother cares to prescribe it. The school people should worry!

Aspirin was formerly patented. The patent expired a few years ago, and now anybody may manufacture and sell aspirin. Aspirin is a coaltar derivative; it is acetyl-salicylic acid. As a pain-killer or deadener of the sense of fatigue, anxiety, or other feelings—perhaps nature's signals—aspirin is one of the least injurious drugs we have. But it is injurious, and sometimes it produces serious effects.

Once I saw a policeman, menaced by a mob of ugly men, subdue one obstreperous fellow with a tap of his night stick. I testified later that the policeman had employed just the proper amount of force to subdue his prisoner.

I testify now that it is perfectly safe and proper for the average adult to take a dose of aspirin in an emergency when headache or some similar pain is to be relieved. But when the headache is a frequent occurrence, or when the desire for the benumbing or deadening effect of the drug arises every day or two, then the resort to the drug goes beyond the borderline of safety and discretion, I believe. As this mother describes the situation, it would seem that her daughter is being trained to the drug habit. No school should be permitted to cultivate a craving for sense-deadening drugs of any kind.

If the girl has headaches or other distressing sensations, her health should be looked after, and the hygiene of her life in school and at home should be investigated by her family physician or at least by some physician. The house mother in the boarding school far exceeds her proper authority when she feeds the pupils drugs of any kind.

In their rejoinder that this mother's protest about the dope feeding was "perfectly absurd" these boarding school proprietors simply display the arrogance or insolence which financial success in the conduct of such institutions too commonly produces. The same thing occurs in many other private institutions which purport to serve their clients. The demand has outgrown the supply, and this is unfortunate, for the enormous scramble for tuition in boarding schools and colleges and the long waiting lists are not likely to improve the spirit in these institutions.

When aspirin is abused the drug tends to damage the heart and to destroy red blood corpuscles. That is the way it does harm when the victim cultivates the craving for the stuff.

Sayings of Great Men.

My household has exacted from me a promise that I will install one of these ——— ——— at a cost of $29.50, provided Dr. Brady approves of the thing. (P. C.)

Answer.—The contraption is a mysterious appliance which purports to turn tap water into a miracle-working cure-all. The circular P. C. incloses in his letter quotes the late Elbert Hubbard. The late P. T. Barnum is not quoted in the circular, though I think Barnum's pithy sayings would be more apropos in a circular letter like this. That our laws permit the sale of such hocus-pocus, sort of calms one's patriotism. That our people eagerly purchase such things indicates that there is something radically wrong with our education.

Sports for Girls.

I am a healthy normal girl of 17 and should like to know what sports a girl of my age should not engage in. I practice high jumping (not pole vaulting) with no ill effects whatever, but have been told it is injurious. Please advise me. (C. B.)

Answer.—Basketball, tennis, short runs, jumping, all kinds of skilled dancing, hiking, rope-skipping, skating, swimming (not long distance efforts), horseback riding, bicycling, archery, fishing, fencing, field hockey, girls' baseball, handball, are all good sports for a girl to cultivate. I do not think high jumping is injurious to a normal girl.

Like a Tannery.

Please tell me what I can do for perspiration phew! like a tannery the odor is fierce. (L. M. S.)

Answer.—One of the best deodorants, though it must be used with caution lest it proves too irritating, is formalin. Sponging the affected skin area with a solution of one ounce of formalin (technically called formaldehyde solution) in half a pint or a pint of water, once a day, and allowing it to dry before dressing. A more convenient and agreeable application, if the armpits are affected, is zonite ointment.

Bowlegs.

Please tell me how bowlegs can be straightened. (D. E. D.)

Answer.—In a young child correction of the diet, suitable exercise and plenty of exposure to the sun will often straighten bowlegs. In children over three, sometimes suitable splints worn under the observation of the physician, may help. In persons over six years of age nothing short of operation on the bent bones will suffice, and you should consult a good surgeon about that.

Photoplay News

CONDUCTED by LORENZO JONES JR.

Society Drama "Padlocked" Is Howard Picture

Cosmopolitan Magazine Story Features Lois Moran And Noah Beery.

Those of the older generation, who view with alarm the terrifying manners and morals of the younger generation, should see the Howard tomorrow when Allan Dwan's new Paramount drama, "Padlocked," begins its local run.

For this portrayal of a modern American family reveals the fact that lack of sympathy and understanding on the part of parents is driving the youth of our country to the jazz life.

"Padlocked" is a picturization of the widely read Cosmopolitan Magazine story by Rex Beach. It was adapted by Becky Gardiner and James Shelley Hamilton, and features an imposing cast, headed by Lois Moran, Louise Dresser and Noah Beery. Florence Turner, Helen Jerome Eddy, Allan Simpson and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., are among the important supporting players.

The central character in the story is a lovely, high-spirited girl, who rebels against a father's narrow-minded attitude and efforts to stifle her natural ambitions, and runs away from home to seek a career on Broadway. As a cabaret dancer, she attracts the attention of the millionaire society set and becomes involved in a love triangle. An unexpected crisis develops when her father demands that she return home, and the subsequent events are charged with suspense and emotional appeal.

The entire production has been lavishly set, brightly and fittingly costumed, and under Mr. Dwan's direction very colorfully and smoothly produced.

In his second Publix revue, "Kids in Kandyland," which will be this week's stage feature, Gus Edwards has spared his audience the anguish of gazing upon grown-up young women masquerading as "tots." Some revue producers in past seasons have thought it cut to present their choristers and even their principals as veritable kiddy cut-ups, to the distress of probably three-quarters of the audience. None of that in this show. In casting "Kids in Kandyland," Mr. Edwards picked out a lot of unusually pretty girls, all of whom are small in statue, and let it go at that. There are no posturings as infants terrible and no raucous singing. In fact, the whole show is quite the most delightful musical revue seen in many seasons. Good singing, wonderful dancing, gorgeous costuming, pep and pulchritude characterize the whole show.

The overture for the week by the Howard smyphony orchestra under the direction of Joseph Littau, will be "The Beautiful Galathea," by Von Suppe.

Other subjects on the program will include an organ solo, news reel, and comedy.

Palace Theater.

A lively romantic drama of the back stage life of gay Broadway starts the week at the Palace theater in Inman Park showing on Monday and Tuesday. The title of the picture, "Sally, Irene and Mary," indicates to an extent the nature of the plot. In a vivid and intensely interesting manner the picture portrays the conflicting characters of the three stage girls and grippingly carries them through many adventures to the right end.

On Wednesday, for one day only, Milton Sills and the beautiful Dorothy MacKail star in "The Making of O'Malley," a thrilling and highly romantic story of how a New York cop battles a society bootleg ring and wins a beautiful heiress for his bride.

One of the most picturesque screen plays of the year directed by Marshall Neilan and starring the petite and talented Sally O'Neil comes to the Palace Thursday and Friday when "Mike" holds the stage as the popular community playhouse. "Mike" is a story of life and love in a far off desert town and for unique characters and swift, dramatic acton is a mighty hard feature to beat.

METROPOLITAN FILM STARS COLLEEN MOORE

"Ella Cinders" Also Features Lloyd Hughes.

Fireside humor and pathos as exemplified by the comic strip of the home newspaper becomes a living, moving thing upon the screen in the picturization of "Ella Cinders," Colleen Moore's latest vehicle for First National.

The picture, made by John McCormick, responsible for the highly successful screen version of "Irene," deals with the exploits of the once winner and victor of a small town movie contest promoted by swindlers, with a trip to Hollywood, all expenses paid, as the grand prize. With the conclusion of the contest, the glib schemers vanish from the scene, their pockets bulging with their disproportionate percentage of money derived from entry fees, while the heroine is left to shift for herself in a city overrun with beauties.

Miss Moore, who is always delightful in a Cinderella theme, can be expected to play her part in a drama of such background. She again has the services of Lloyd Hughes as her leading man and is surrounded by players of proven capabilities.

Alfred E. Green, her mentor in many past screen successes, directed Miss Moore in this new offering.

Enrico Leide heads this week's program with the famous "Dance of the Hours" from "Gioconda," Adolph Verdi playing the brilliant piano cadenza. For the feature picture, the latest Harms waltz ballad, "Falling in Love," furnishes the musical background. The musical score for Our Gang comedy includes compositions with a characteristic lilt. George McNulty, Atlanta's own Irish tenor, appears in a song presentation featuring Jack Mills' "So Is Your Old Lady."

The Metropolitan News and the usual Metropolitan novelties will complete the program.

RIALTO PICTURE IS 'THE MAN UPSTAIRS'

Comedy-Melodrama Success Stars Monte Blue and Dorothy Devore.

"The Man Upstairs," starring Monte Blue and with Dorothy Devore in the feminine lead, is at the Rialto this week, and, if the critics may be believed, most successful entry in the comedy-melodrama class.

It is an intelligent combination of those two unquestionably successful recipes, thrills and laughs, adapted by E. T. Lowe, Jr., from Earl Derr Bigger's memorable story, "The Agony Column." All the cleverness and innate narrative merit of the original story has been retained and accentuated and enhanced by its presentation on the screen. It is quite properly a tale well fitted to the peculiar medium of moving pictures. The surprising yet logical twists and ingenious situations in its plot are a constant and unfailing source of suspense and entertainment throughout the picture.

The locale is London and an ancient ghost and gloom-ridden castle near it. The time is the present. Besides Mr. Blue and Miss Devore, we find Helen Dunbar, Eve Southern, John Roche, Heinie Conklin, Stanley Taylor, Otto Hoffman, Carl Stockdale and Arthur Thelaso in the cast.

The theme is the endeavor of a young American not to lose in London a girl to whom he is a stranger but to whom he hopes, in some inoffensive and legitimate manner, to gain an introduction. All his advances are met coolly but he resorts to the stratagem of having a "personal" ad inserted in a newspaper, and the girl, questing adventure, replies. A hotel murder carries their adventure through a maze of mystery.

The entertainment value of "The Man Upstairs" is greatly enhanced by a smart auxiliary program. The chief item is the Sennett comedy, "From Rags to Britches."

Pathe News shows the best pictures of world's events, the film changing to a new release on Thursday.

Frank Turner presents a specially selected musical score.

Five hundred theater owners visited the M-G-M studios in Culver City en masse to see how the pictures they have booked for next season are being made. They were obviously pleased with what they saw, for many regretted that there are only 52 weeks in a year and that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer made only 52 pictures during that period.

Jacqueline Gullett.

As an extra feature Don Lanning and his Forsyth players this week will present little Jacqueline Gullett, five-year-old dance prodigy and one of the most popular child stars ever seen here, in a specialty dance as one of the novelties introduced into the current production of "The Girl In the Limousine."

Little Miss Gullett, despite her extreme youth, has already won signal recognition on the local stage. She is a pupil of Miss Virginia Semon under whose guidance she has rapidly developed a dancing technique that would do credit to many adult dancers. She has been seen in a number of local motion picture prologues and has taken part in several big pageants such as the Masonic entertainment given recently.

West End Theater.

Skimping from the great drama "Braveheart," opening Monday, and closing with none other than the sprightly comedy drama, "Classified," this week at the West End theater is scheduled to be a high point in 1926 programs so far.

"The Virginian," that truly emotional and highly set screen adaptation of the thrilling story, interspersed with enough interest alone to make the week a huge success. In "Braveheart," scheduled for Monday and Tuesday, Rod La Rocque will be shown in a dramatic and thrilling episode of the screen which has won audiences wherever it has shown. It is a superb romance of an Indian's love for a white girl and of his sacrifices for her. It is really a classic.

Wednesday will bring to the West End playhouse "The Virginian," one of the greatest stories of all times and one of the most interesting plots ever portrayed on the screen. Kenneth Harlan, in the leading role, is a magnificent actor whose best talents are brought forth in this classical production. Unfortunately it will be here only one day.

On Thursday and Friday the film version "Classified" comes with Corinne Griffith playing the stellar role. Few pictures in recent times have elicited such favorable praise from one end of this country to the other and patrons of the West End playhouse are to be congratulated upon the opportunity to see it for two days.

Lon Chaney On Screen Again At Loew's Grand

"The Penalty" Is the Great Character Actor's Latest.

Lon Chaney's recreation of the famous dramatic thriller "The Penalty," will be the feature picture offering at Loew's Grand theater this week.

For nearly 15 years Lon Chaney has played roles in famous screen productions and has steadily forged forward until he is now recognized as the leading character actor.

Among his numerous successful roles will be remembered that of the pathetic half-animal in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," the queer fakir of "The Miracle Man," the spectral horror of "The Phantom of the Opera," the melancholy clown of "He Who Gets Slapped," the villainous professor of "The Unholy Three" and the arch crook of "The Black Bird."

Lon Chaney is assuredly one of the foremost actors in the field of creating thrills and in "The Penalty" he has one of his best roles.

In recreating "The Penalty" no expense has been spared to make it as near perfect in its field as possible.

CONDUCTED by LORENZO JONES JR.

Dainty Vera Myers, "Sally" Star, Leads Opera This Week

"Her Regiment," at the Atlanta, Was Written by Victor Herbert.

"Her Regiment," a dashing musical comedy by Victor Herbert and one of the last works of that famous composer, will be the bill at the Atlanta theater this week, the second production of the Municipal Opera association of Atlanta.

It is not "opera," it is pointed out, but fun and frolic, a regular Broadway show with pretty girls and brilliant costumes and lots of dancing and rollicking comedy. Lou Powers, the leading comedian, will have a big opportunity as Blanquet, the French soldier who takes a drink not wisely but too often.

Vera Myers, the pretty musical comedy star who sang and danced so delightfully in Ziegfeld's "Sally" last season, will have the leading role of Estelle, a part which will provide a splendid opportunity for her debut with Atlanta's own company.

Arthur Burckley, the tenor, will have the outstanding man's part in "Her Regiment," while Louis Templeman, the baritone, is given a good role. Francis Tyler, who made such a hit as the Bulgarian captain in "The Chocolate Soldier," will have a chance with a real part this week.

Anne Yago and Lou Powers will work together in two great comedy parts, and William McLeod will appear for the first time this season, as Carabine. Olga Lester and Mary Patterson, both Georgia girls, will appear.

"Her Regiment" is filled with the stirring marches and waltzes which Victor Herbert wrote so well, and there are several beautiful solo numbers, duets and a sextet. The duet, "Some Day," is an especially lovely bit.

Performances will be given every night and Saturday afternoon, besides the "bargain matinee" on Wednesday, with one dollar as the top price.

Seats will go on sale Thursday for the next week's musical comedy, "Naughty Marietta," also by Victor Herbert, and one of the most popular productions of recent years.

JUVENILE STARS FEATURE HOWARD STAGE OFFERING

Gus Edwards' "Kids in Kandyland," the second of his series of revues produced for Publix Theaters corporation, is announced by the greater Howard theater as its leading stage attraction for this week. Advance notices from New York and other cities where this revue has played convey the information that this is quite the peppiest as well as prettiest production in the series of Publix stage presentations which have been adorning the stage of the Howard for the past three months. As may have been suspected from the title of the act, the "Kids," most of them girls, impersonate various confections. The costuming and stage settings, designed by Hermann Rosse, are said to be quite the most attractive seen in any of the Publix presentations to date. The company numbers 16 people and includes Adeline Seaman, Hester Bailey, Beth Claire, Ruth Marie Marcott, Joe Brown and Stan Bailey, among others. Paul Oscard, formerly ballet master at the Rivoli theater, New York, was the producing director and special lyrics were contributed by Howard Johnson.

Don Lanning Was Launched on His Career in Army

Forsyth Star Was Once Member of "Ham" Company.

The career of Don Lanning, star of the Lanning players, is not without a touch of that romantic inspiration and brightness that characterizes his work on the stage. His introduction to stage activities was purely accidental and yet the direct result of natural talent and ability.

When the late unpleasantness manifested itself in France, Mr. Lanning was one of those great masses who sacrificed his personal ambitions and desires for the sake of the cause. In doing so, he has been rewarded with a position that is quite uniquely suited to him.

He was stationed at Camp Sherman, Chilicothe, Ohio, and it was there that his introduction to the stage was made. The problem of amusement which was essential to relieve the monotony of life in a camp was every bit as important as the problem of food, and it was in a search for men with entertaining ability that Mr. Lanning was discovered.

He took part while at Camp Sherman in the usual line of camp amusement. It was not until he reached France that Mr. Lanning was quite clearly shown that he possessed ability out of the ordinary. He was selected to play a leading role in a company that toured the rural districts of France and reached those points that were more nearly inaccessible to the cities where theaters could be found.

The equipment for this company consisted of three large trucks; two of which, when placed end to end, formed the stage. The other truck contained complete generating and lighting equipment which furnished the illumination for the affair.

A quite amusing feature of this company, incidentally, was the fact that it had been humorously termed by its members the "Jambone" company, meaning in French "ham." Whether or not the title of the company was more truth than humor, the fact remains that it proved an excellent training school for Don Lanning.

The climax of his stage activities in the army came when he was invited to appear with his company at the largest theater in Paris, a distinction which had been accorded no other American army theatrical troupe. He remained for a stay of several days at this theater, and an incident of more than unusual note was the fact that Mr. Lanning became acquainted during the past week with several disabled veterans who remembered his appearance in Paris.

At the close of the war, he returned to America and his work was brought to the attention of the famous Frank Tinney, who offered him a place in the supporting cast of his current success "Atta Boy," which he accepted. It was in this company under the very able tutelage of Frank Tinney that he added the finishing touches to his stage education.

He next toured the Keith circuit in a song and dance single that was immensely popular and he quickly rose to occupy a position next to the headliner, and he was in line for a headliner's place when he received an offer from James E. Eviston to star in his musical stock companies. This connection has continued until the present day, where he is appearing at the Forsyth theater in his own stock company.

Mr. Lanning's success can be attributed to several very definite things. First, there was a natural talent and ability. Second, there was a natural liking for the work. And perhaps greatest of all the factors was the fact that from the start he studied the art of entertainment at the price of long hours of hard work and not a little discouragement. But whatever the price he paid, and the pleasure he sacrificed, his phenomenal success has amply repaid him for his efforts.

And the tale is not finished yet. Don Lanning has by no means reached his goal, and Atlanta theater-goers will at some time in the future have the pleasure of seeing Mr. Lanning occupy a position similar to that of his maestro, Frank Tiney.

You have our hearts and our best wishes, Don!

Avery Hopwood Farce Features Forsyth Stage

"The Girl In the Limousine" Co-Stars Don Lanning and Fred Raymond.

Al H. Wood's hysterical farce comedy, "The Girl In the Limousine," will be the musical comedy this week at the Forsyth where Don Lanning and the Forsyth Players have arranged a production of this famous laugh hit that will eclipse any previous offering since their season began.

"The Girl In the Limousine" is generally hailed as one of the very greatest laugh getters in the whole of farce-land. It was written by Avery Hopwood who has provided not one funny character but two, with a part for a real comedienne as well. Don Lanning and Fred Raymond, Jr., will be given the chief roles and their laugh making abilities will be given the best opportunity possible.

At the beginning of its metropolitan run this farce was characterized by reviewers as "taking the lid off laughs" and for many months it was the comedy sensation of Gotham.

The Don Lanning Players are sparing no efforts in presenting this famous success and the production will be one that will not be forgotten for many weeks, it is predicted by the management.

The story is built around a series of complications that begin with the hold up of a society man on his way to a week-end party and that continue from this point on to the accompaniment of tangles caused by a suspicious aunt who persists in misunderstanding the identity of the society man. The author set out to crowd as many laughs as possible into a single evening's entertainment and his phenomenal success is now a matter of stage history.

A musical score of popular numbers has been prepared by the new musical director of the company, Howard Rossman, who is making his debut here this week. Mr. Rossman has been with the Don Lanning Players for several seasons and his work will undoubtedly add much to the snap and tunefulness of the succeeding productions.

The chorus is to be much in evidence as dancers and as a background for the vocal numbers of the principals. A novelty will be the introduction of Don Lanning's new comedy quartet in the play. Technical director Rhea and artist Findlay have completed some beautiful stage settings for this hilarious bedroom farce. Altogether, "The Girl In the Limousine" promises even more to audiences than last week's unusual success and will be representative of the best all-round musical comedy offerings, it is said.

On the Stage

Alamo No. 2.

"The Pleasure Buyers," the Arthur Somers Roche mystery story which originally ran in the Cosmopolitan Magazine in serial form, will begin a three-day engagement on Monday at the Alamo No. 2 theater, starring Irene Rich.

With a gay gambling casino in Palm Beach as its locale, a mystery which remains unsolved until the last climax of the production, this picture has been hailed by reviewers in other cities as one of the most dramatic and fascinating mysteries of the screen.

Clive Brook, who appeared in the title role of "The Woman Hater," plays the male lead opposite Miss Rich.

"The Pleasure Buyers" are a gay social set who flock around the wealthy Gene Cassenas at the Palm Beach casino. He is engaged to marry pretty Helen Ripley, whose father breaks the engagement upon hearing unsavory details of Cassena's reputation. During the excitement that follows, five people quarrel with Cassenas and threaten to kill him. When he is found murdered the following morning, it is almost impossible to fasten the guilt upon anyone until it is discovered that Joan Wiswell has tell-tale evidence in the Spanish gun which Gene had presented to her.

Thursday, Richard Talmadge in "The Blue Streak" will be shown.

For Friday and Saturday another first-run picture will be shown, "The Playthings of Desire," with Estelle Taylor.

Loew's Grand.

(Kiddies Revue.)

As a special added attraction Loew's Grand theater this week will present "Loew's Kiddies Revue," with 55 talented Atlanta children in a big singing and dancing show filled with pretty song numbers and attractive scenic and lighting effects.

Costume designers, scenic artists, stage carpenters and electricians have worked for weeks preparing the effects for the production. In the list of children who will appear as principals are some of the most talented girls and boys who have ever appeared in a local attraction of this nature.

Rehearsals for the show have been in progress for weeks and it will be offered as near perfect as possible at the opening performances Monday.

"Loew's Kiddies Revue" will be presented as a special added attraction and no extra admission charge will be made.

CLAY CROUCH HEADS LOEW'S PROGRAM

With Clay Crouch, famous comedian, as headliner on the vaudeville bill, with "Loew's Kiddies Revue" offered as a special added attraction and with Lon Chaney in his latest pitcure, "The Penalty," on the program at Loew's Grand theater this week the entertainment card at this theater promises to be one of the most pleasing of the year.

For many years Clay Crouch has ranked as one of the most resourceful funmakers on the stage and is noted for the numerous new ideas he uses in his acts. This year he will bring his latest skit, "Back Stage," which is a humorous travesty filled with lots of fast action and whirlwind fun. He is supported by a company composed of players of unusual ability. His appearance here on the vaudeville bill attests the high standard now being maintained by Loew's vaudeville.

"Loew's Kiddies Revue," offered in association with The Atlanta Georgian and Sunday American, is going to be one of the big surprise hits of the year in the local amusement field. Fifty-five talented Atlanta children have been working for weeks under the direction of Bennett and DuBall at their school stage dancing at Segadlo's hall and they have been developed into performers of surprising ability. The revue will be offered with special scenic and lighting effects, special costumes and an original musical score composed by Max Rich.

Lon Chaney, "The Man With a Thousand Faces," will appear as the star in his latest picture, "The Penalty," the sensational dramatic success.

With such an array of attractions the Loew program at Loew's Grand theater this week promises to be one of the most attractive programs offered at any local theater this season.

One of the novelty acts on the new bill will be the Movie Masque company, an importation which has scored a tremendous success wherever offered. There are four people in the cast and they offer some new songs and dances as well as some clever impersonations of popular stage and screen stars.

Amoros and Janet will provide some "hokum supreme" in their comedy skit, "Mon Chapeau." This is another imported novelty and possesses a rich French flavor of fun. The program of this turn also includes some comedy juggling.

Billed as "Two Men of the World," Mort Cooper and Henry Berman will bring their comedy song act in which many late topical song hits will be featured.

O. Depford and company will round out the bill with an acrobatic and dancing number containing many new tricks and feats of daring.

Stop lights on the rear of street cars would give the automobile bumpers something more to hit.

A close-fisted man is often liberal in the use of his closed fists.

Blessings Measured By Our Capacity.

In addressing a body of churchwomen in Cedartown recently, Deaconess Mozelle Eubanks, a member of the faculty of the Vashti Industrial school, gave a beautiful lesson on faith. It was based on the ancient story of a wonderful spring in a far-away country that constantly poured from the hillside, giving its never-failing supply of fresh, pure life-giving water to all who would have it. No matter whether it rained or whether there was a drought, the supply of water from this spring remained the same. Many people came for water and each brought a vessel in which to get it. Some came with barrels, some with buckets, while others came with jugs, jars, or even small tincups. But whatever the size of the vessel, it was always filled to the brim and still there was more. Each person decided the amount of water he would take away by the size of the vessel he brought.

So it is with us when we approach our Heavenly Father. His blessings are inexhaustible but they are not thrust upon us. He gives only as we are able to receive. Each person receives according to his faith and, by the lack of faith, God's power is limited in our lives. We can take the barrel or the dipper, as we choose, but whichever we take will be filled and still the supply is not lessened.

Undertake great things for God and expect great things of God in the work of the church today and He will not fail to bestow upon us the blessings and the power needed to accomplish the great things undertaken in faith.

Keep the Cup!

No greater joy came to Georgia W. M. U. delegation at the recent Southern Baptist convention in Houston than the winning of the cup, awarded by the Southern Union for the largest number of uniform Standard of Excellence A-1 organizations of all grades.

For three successive years South Carolina W. M. U. has carried off this coveted cup. For three years Georgia W. M. U. has been close on South Carolina's trail in this contest. At last Georgia's persistent and prayerful effort has been rewarded.

With great joy we receive the cup. With determined purpose Georgia W. M. U. presidents and leaders must now plan to keep the cup. Every member of these organizations must catch the spirit and high aim of the slogan, "Keep the Cup!" The executive board members in the June meeting heartily accepted the slogan and the challenge. Not only South Carolina but several other strong state unions have registered definite purpose to carry off this honor at the Louisville W. M. U. convention, May 1927.

Take up the slogan now, Georgia W. M. U. Let's all together will to win and work to win. Let's "Keep the Cup!"

Miss Green Presents Pupils in Recital.

Miss Rubye Greene presented a group of pupils from her piano class in a recital Tuesday afternoon at the Capitol View Methodist church. They were assisted by Mrs. J. D. Awtry, soprano, and Julius Bach, violinist and teacher of violin.

Those appearing on the program were Misses Kathryn Cooper, Evelyn Aycock, Elizabeth Magee, Martha Quick, Kathryne Shaw, Sarah Blankenship, Elizabeth Eason, Katherine Cook, Evangeline Harwell, Louise McCarson, Martha Walters, Lucile Brown, Carolyn Holland, Eva May Stephens, Lola Mae Maynard and Lillian Pharr.

House Party At Bessie Tift.

Miss Julia Allen, young people's leader of the Baptist W. M. U. of Georgia, is always alert in making attractive plans for the young girls of the state whom she fosters so devotedly. Beginning June 29 and continuing until July 9 a goodly company of young girls of the Y. W. A.'s and G. A. S. will assemble at Bessie Tift college for "fun, frolic, fellowship and friendship, information and inspiration" as Miss Allen expresses it. Those invited to gather there are the girls 13 years old and over, who love to make new friends and who want to know more of God's plan for saving the whole wide world. Miss Allen, of course, will be there and in addition she announces a list of teachers and W. M. U. leaders that should draw many a wide awake ambitious girl to a really enjoyable house party.

The program as announced by Miss Allen will include Mrs. W. J. Neel the beloved president of the Georgia W. M. U.; Mrs. A. F. McMahon, dearest big sister (corresponding secretary) any girl ever knew; Miss Mattie Vie Summers, the pretty missionary from China; Miss Emma Leachman of the home mission board for mission study, and Miss Kathleen Mallory, the charming corresponding secretary of the south-wide W. M. U., who will spend the week-end, July 3, 4, and 5 at the house party. While the wonderful program is not in progress, there will be outdoor amusements when there will be abundant opportunity for swimming, tennis, stunts and music by girls who wish to bring their own musical instruments.

West End Baptist Y. W. A.

The Y. W. A. of the West End Baptist church held an enjoyable meeting on Monday, June 14 at the church. Plans for personal service work for the summer were discussed and a committee appointed to further plans for increasing the contributions to missions from this enthusiastic band of young women. Miss Janet Kelly, of 888 Gordon street, was welcomed as a new member.

During the social hour games and a delicious picnic luncheon prepared by the Y. W. A. councilor, Mrs. W. H. S. Dorsey added to the pleasure of the meeting.

Mrs. W. M. Jones Is Honored by Women Of First Baptist

It was a gracious inspiration when Mrs. B. L. Bugg, president of the W. M. S. of the First Baptist church, and other leading women planned a reception in honor of Mrs. W. M. Jones, newly elected superintendent of Atlanta B. W. M. U. Mrs. Jones is a much beloved and useful member of the First Baptist church and the teacher of a large class of young women in the Sunday school.

The reception took place June 21 and was one of the most beautiful in all its appointments and plans which has ever been given by the Baptist women of Atlanta. Previous to the social feature of the occasion a large audience assembled in the auditorium of the church which was beautifully decorated and where the choir of the church rendered the sweetest of music. Miss Lydia Wheeler, one of the most popular of young singers in Atlanta, also rendered a special musical number.

The reception was in the nature of a recognition service. A welcome was given to new members by Mrs. Bugg who has been president of the society for three years, and officers and chairmen who have served during Mrs. Bugg's administration were also recognized, Mrs. Charles W. Daniel wife of the pastor, introduced Mrs Jones with graceful words and pinned on her shoulder a badge of honor consisting of choicest dainty flowers. Mrs. Jones responded with hearty appreciation, at the same time outlining some practical plans for the organization which she is sure to serve with distinguished success. Another noteworthy feature of the occasion was the fact that the members of the W. M. S. of the First Baptist church presented their able and beloved president, Mrs. B. L. Bugg with a handsome basket of flowers.

In the receiving line were Mrs. B. L. Bugg, Mrs. W. M. Jones, Mrs. Charles W. Daniel, Mrs. J. R. Little, Mrs. R. B. Adair, Mrs. James Kempton, Mrs. J. H. Coin, Mrs. James L. Key, Miss Lucie Jesse and Mrs. Allie Lee Arendell, add representing some department of the Baptist W. M. U. work in Atlanta.

Baptist Hospital Auxiliary Meeting.

The July and August meetings of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Georgia Baptist hospital will be postponed until the second Friday in September.

This action is taken on account of the illness of several officers, others being away for the summer, and also because of the extra work entailed on the women during the campaign for the new hospital.

The September meeting will be characterized by increased zeal and earnestness, new activities, and greater opportunities for service.

MRS JAMES L. KEY.

Cedartown Methodist Church Is Host.

The Woman's Missionary society of the First Methodist church of Cedartown entertained the missionary societies of the Rome district, June 17 and 18 with Mrs. L. D. Yeargan, of Rome, the district secretary, presiding.

Mrs. R. D. Cantrell gave the address of welcome, the response being given by Mrs. Hillary Yeargan, of Rome. A special feature of the first day was the exhibition of posters by the Rome delegates, the posters having been made by Miss Elizabeth Vandiver, an art student at Shorter college.

Thursday evening featured the Bennett memorial pageant by the young people of Cedartown, followed by stereopticon views of Scarritt of yesterday, today and tomorrow. Miss Bessie Allen, a graduate of Scarritt, and Mrs. J. N. McEachern, a trustee of Scarritt, were the speakers of the evening.

On Friday a pageant given by the young people of Carrollton under the leadership of Mrs. Frank Quillian was most interesting, also a pageant by the Cedartown children.

The district has a social service federation with Mrs. M. A. Reed, of Cedartown, as director and the various auxiliaries are alive in this department.

Rockmart invited the conference for the 1927 meeting.

Rose Croix Chapter Holds Ceremonial.

An impressive ceremonial held in the O. E. S. of Atlanta was the constituting of Rose Croix chapter Monday night in the wigwam by Mrs. Rose Mae Ashley, worthy grand marshal of the general grand chapter, assisted by Mrs. Carrie Maxwell, acting grand marshal.

Other grand officers who took part in the ceremony were Mrs. Belle King, Mrs. Marie Covington, Mrs. Mamie Rapp, Mrs. Hubert, Mrs. Shelpert, Mrs. Willie Mae Cook, Mrs. Belle Haley, Mrs. Davis.

The distinguished guests present were Mrs. Sallie McElroy, grand matron; W. H. McLaran, past grand patron; Miss Del Rey Adams, associate grand matron; Mrs. Annabel Cape, grand Ruth.

After the constituting ceremonies, Mrs. Ashley installed the officers. Mrs. Mary Gifford as worthy matron and Mrs. Olive Kelley, associate matron.

The hall was beautifully decorated with palms and flowers. The worthy matron, patron and guests received many beautiful flowers. Mrs. Ashley, the constituting officer, received a large cross made of flowers, symbols of the Rose Croix. Mrs. Maxwell was given a large bouquet of roses from Miss Gertrude Stanford.

Rome Religious Leader

Mrs. L. D. Yeargan, of Rome, the very capable secretary of the Rome district of the North Georgia Conference Woman's Missionary society of the M. E. church, south, having been appointed to this office at the annual meeting in February to succeed Mrs. L. K. Smith, of Carrollton, who resigned after 10 years' faithful service.

Mrs. Yeargan, although new in this particular work, has taken charge in a splendid way and presided over her first annual meeting in Cedartown last week. The meeting was full of inspiration and helpful ideas for the promotion of the missionary work in the district and the 170 delegates who attended pronounced it a most successful meeting.

One of the outstanding things the Rome district women are doing is the support of Miss Kate Cooper, a Georgia girl at work in Korea.

Baptist Hospital Campaign Is Making Steady Progress

Enthusiastic response to the plans of the campaign for Greater Georgia Baptist hospital, was evidenced by the large attendance at the June meeting of the Woman's auxiliary held in the reception room of the hospital.

Dr. Arch Cree was present and introduced Dr. George, who by pleasing personality and earnestness easily won the confidence and cooperation of all present. In the absence of Mrs. James L. Key, president, on account of illness, Mrs. J. W. Awtry presided. The presence of Mrs. Sam D. Jones, president emeritus, added inspiration to the meeting.

Encouraging reports of the first large gifts to the hospital were enthusiastically received. The handsome gift of $5,000 for the pathological laboratory in honor of Mary Brown Connally, who has been his faithful wife for 50 years, was given by our loyal Baptist, Dr. E. L. Connally. Another highly appreciated gift of $2,500 for a ward as a memorial to his wife, was made by a noble Presbyterian friend, Dr. R. B. Ridley.

The first gift of $1,000 for a hospital room was made by Mrs. J. L. Mauldin, one of the auxiliary's own members. It was given by Mrs. Mauldin as a recognition of "the tenth is the Lord's."

Mrs. Mauldin is a member of the Woman's Bible class at Ponce de Leon Avenue Baptist Sunday school.

Another gift of $1,000 was made by Mrs. W. J. Neel, president of the Georgia W. M. U., and her two sisters jointly, in honor of their sainted mother.

The auxiliary meeting was opened with a devotional led by Mrs. J. L. Jackson, of Kirkwood, and prayer was offered by the chaplain, Dr. J. F. Eden. Mrs. Will H. Houghton acted as secretary and the treasurer's report was given by Mrs. M. Dawson, of Decatur. Partial reports from the hospital calendars were made and it was urged that all money made through the sale of calendars be turned in promptly in order to have a complete record of the amount realized therefrom.

A splendid personal service report was made by Mrs. H. F. Hines, of the Capitol Avenue church, chairman. Members were requested to report hospital visits and gifts to Mrs. Hines. The auxiliary welcomed several out-of-town visitors. Mrs. Reese, a field worker from South Carolina, was introduced in a happy vein, expressing admiration for the large band of enthusiastic members present. Mrs. Reese was presented with a hospital calendar by Mrs. Sam Jones. A rising vote of appreciation and hearty support was given to Mrs. J. W. Awtry, who agreed to take Mrs. Key's place temporarily with the assistance assured her by Mrs. Will Houghton, as secretary. A beautiful letter from Mrs. Key to the auxiliary was read expressing love and intense interest in the work of the campaign. The organization is happy in the assurance that their beloved president will be able to resume her duties again by next fall. In the meantime the work goes forward toward the completion of the new unit of the Greater Georgia Baptist hospital as now towers heavenward.

Hold Successful Missionary Meetings.

The women of Trinity Methodist church, Durand, Ga., in the LaGrange district have solved, in a large measure, the problem of holding a successful missionary meeting in a rural community.

Once each month a spend-the-day meeting is held in some one of the homes. Each member brings a dish prepared for the luncheon so that the hostess may be in the meeting. These dishes are suggested by a committee with the result that a well-balanced meal is always served. Each member also brings something in her sewing basket and during the morning social hour while late ones or those who have longer distances to come, are gathering, busy fingers do not lessen the pleasure of conversation and fellowship but the sewing always results in garments being completed for a box to some one of the church institutions. After the luncheon, the business meeting is held and then the missionary program of the conference is taken up with mission and Bible study to complete the four fold plan of the day.

The June meeting was held at the home of Mrs. J. Frank Ogletree when there were 20 members present. Mrs. R. A. Field, the newly elected district secretary; Mrs. T. A. Atkinson, conference superintendent of mission and Bible study, and Miss Mary Dunlap of the Vashti school were special guests of the day, each contributing something to the program.

Dalton District Shows Progress.

Reports at the recent annual meeting of the Dalton district of Methodist women revealed interesting facts showing progress in the past twelve months.

Stilesboro has a 100 per cent baby division, reaching the goal only after they were asked to present this subject on the program at the meeting.

Three new young people's societies have been organized, several new baby divisions have been started and the quota of junior societies has been reached.

This district, under the leadership of Mrs. J. F. Fowler, of Cartersville, has made progress in finances, their report for the first quarter of 1926 being $230 in excess of that for the same period of time in 1925.

Dalton Methodists will be hostesses to the 1927 meeting.

Briefly Told

The regular monthly meeting of the Georgia Baptist W. M. U. executive board will be held at headquarters in the Palmer building on June 28, at 12 o'clock, instead of July 6. The change in date is due to the Y. W. A. and G. A. house party which is to be held at Bessie Tift college June 29 to July 9.

Among the welcome visitors at Georgia Baptist W. M. U. headquarters recently was Miss Mary Northington, corresponding secretary, Baptist W. M. U. of Tennessee.

The daily mission story hour of the Immanuel Baptist church of Atlanta is now averaging about 45 in attendance. Mrs. J. B. Young is doing a fine work with these young people. They have 153 total enrollment.

A beautiful gift to our new building at the Georgia Baptist hospital was that of our beloved state president of W. M. U., Mrs. W. J. Neel, who gave $1,000 for a room as a memorial to her mother, Mrs. Harriett E. Williams.

Miss Mattie Vie Sumner, of Newnan, Ga., Baptist missionary on furlough from China, is convalescing after a two weeks illness at the Georgia Baptist hospital.

Miss Ruth Randall, of Fort Myers, Fla., returned Baptist missionary from Brazil, has recently returned to Florida after an illness at the Georgia Baptist hospital.

Mrs. Ben Thompson, of Madison, Ga., beloved Baptist Georgia W. M. U. official, is rapidly recovering from a serious illness at the Georgia Baptist hospital.

Mrs. W. Edgar Coleman, of Atlanta, has returned from Athens, Ala., where she was an instructor in the Epworth League assembly of the North Alabama conference in annual session.

Miss Earline Dowda, fourth department superintendent of the North Georgia Epworth League conference, leaves this week for Montgomery, where she will teach in the annual assembly of Epworth leaguers of the Alabama conference.

Miss Jean Ragsdale, of Atlanta, has been chosen to direct recreation during the summer conference of Epworth leaguers at Lake Junaluska this summer. Miss Ragsdale had this same work last summer and did it so well that her reappointment is no surprise to those who saw her in action there.

Miss Mozelle Eubanks, deaconess of the M. E. church, South, who is a member of the faculty at the Vashti Industrial school at Thomasville, Ga., is spending her vacation as the guest of her mother at Rome. She has attended several of the annual district meetings of the woman's missionary society and her devotionals and talks about her work have added a great deal to the programs wherever she has gone.

The Spotlight, the official newspaper of the Susannah Wesley class of the Druid Hills Methodist church, recently observed its 2nd birthday. In the two years of its existence, 100 issues have been published. This is one of only about a half dozen women's classes in the M. E. church, South, that has a newspaper regularly.

An interesting group was introduced at an all-day meeting in the Druid Hills Methodist church recently, composed of the life members of the missionary society with their mothers and grandmothers. In the group were seen Polly Grant, Mrs. T. H. Grant and Mrs. Bridwell, Thomas McPherson, Hoyt McPherson, the 2nd, Maurine McDougald with their mothers, Mrs. N. C. McPherson, Jr., and Mrs. Robert McDougald and the grandmother, Mrs. N. C. McPherson, Sr.; Ed Massa, Jr., and James Ahern, Jr., with Mrs. Ed Massa and Mrs. A. L. Norris. So many members of the three generations interested and investing in the work of the missions is an unusual but happy picture.

Georgia women who spent the past week in Macon making possible the annual assembly of South Georgia Epworth leaguers were: Miss Elizabeth Belcher, of Americus, executive secretary of the South Georgia conference; Miss Louise Sipply, of Savannah, who taught second department methods; Mrs. Wright Mixon, of Abbeville, taught junior work; Miss Isma Swain was press agent; Mrs. Lucy Johnson was assembly "mother"; Miss Katie Bridges, of Leslie, was in charge of intermediate work and Miss Katherine Remington, of the Valdosta district, taught methods for junior and intermediates. Mrs. Alice Twilley, of Tampa, Fla., was another member of the faculty. The assembly was one of the largest and best in the history of the organization.

Mrs. Johnson Represents Section on Mission Board

By order of the recent session of the general conference of the M. E. church, south, the board of missions—known as the great body of the church—has been reorganized in an effort to secure a more efficient and more economical organization. In Nashville, Tenn., the headquarters of the church, last week a called session of the board of missions was held for this purpose. Bishop W. B. Beauchamp, Georgia's bishop for the ensuing quadrennium, is president of the board and Dr. W. G. Cram is the newly elected general secretary, elected by the general conference.

Heretofore, the board of missions has operated through three departments, foreign department of the general work, home department of the general work and the woman's department which included home and foreign. Under the new order of things, there will be no division of the general work and woman's work but the three departments will be, foreign, home, education and promotion with one-third of the membership of the board in each department.

The board of missions is made up of one representative of each of 38 conferences making up the Southern Methodist church. These representatives are elected by the general conference from persons nominated by the annual conferences. The membership is made up of 12 preachers, 13 laymen and 13 women.

It has fallen to the lot of the two Georgia conferences to be represented by women. South Georgia's representative is Mrs. E. P. Peabody, of Macon, who is a member for the first time. Mrs. Peabody is corresponding secretary for the South Georgia conference, Woman's Missionary society. North Georgia is represented by Mrs. Luke G. Johnson, who is a member of the executive committee under the reorganization plans. Mrs. Johnson has been head of the woman's department of the board for the past four years. Mrs. Johnson is one of the managers of the Woman's Council and on the executive committee, as secretary of the board of trustees of the Scarritt College for Christian Workers, the Methodist training center for missionaries.

The growing tendency to have work of the church unified under one administration is evidenced by the fact that the representative of each annual conference on the bord of missions—or whether man or woman—is a representative of the entire work of the church instead of woman's work or general work as heretofore. Under the new constitution, the representative in the board is a member of the annual conference board of missions.

The secretarial force in Nashville headquarters was cut from 16 to 7, on order of the general conference and those selected for the new quadrennium are as follows:

Treasurers—J. F. Rawls and Mrs. Ina Davis Fulton.

Secretaries for Foreign Work—Dr. O. E. Goddard, Miss Esther Case.

Secretaries for Home Work—Dr. J. W. Perry, Mrs. J. W. Downs.

Secretaries for Education and Promotion—Dr. E. H. Rawlings, Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb.

The following assistants were elected: Robert Ruff in charge of specials: Miss Estelle Haskin in charge of literature; Mrs. H. R. Steele in charge of candidates, and Miss Mabel Howell in charge of organization.

Since the election, Miss Mabel Howell has resigned the office with the board to accept the chair of foreign missions in Scarritt college.

Ponce de Leon Baptist Mission Study Classes.

Mrs. George M. Niles, 45 East Fourteenth street, was hostess on Tuesday, June 22, to the Mission Study classes of the Ponce de Leon Baptist W. M. S. for an all-day study. Summer showers occurring at 10 o'clock, the hour for the class to assemble, prevented the attendance of a number of the regular members. One of the most interesting study books of the year, "Looking Ahead With Latin America," by Stanley High, was the text book. Those who led in the study of the chapters were Mrs. D. W. Key, Mrs. R. D. Webb and Mrs. J. W. Wills. The book was found to be so thoroughly interesting and worth while that the class decided to give another day's study to the subject, the date to be announced later. The class was honored on this occasion by the presence of Mrs. W. Harvey Clarke, who has been appointed to teach the book shortly to the Mission Study class of the West End Baptist W. M. S.

Among those present were Mesdames D. W. Key, R. D. Webb, J. W. Wells, George M. Niles, Harvey Clarke, John A. White, M. A. Davis, T. T. Ballenger, Sanford ond Miss Mattie Clements.

Miss Grace Turman Honors Miss Stevens.

Miss Grace Turman was hostess at a miscellaneous shower Saturday afternoon at her home on Boulevard drive complimenting Miss Essie Stevens, a popular bride-elect of this month.

The house was artistically decorated with quantities of garden flowers. As the guests entered they were served with punch by Miss Emily Turman. During the afternoon an interesting contest was enjoyed. Miss Stevens was presented with many beautiful gifts.

Miss Coyne Given Kitchen Shower.

A social affair of Tuesday afternoon was a kitchen shower given by Mrs. W. J. Thebaut in honor of Miss Martha Coyne, a bride-elect, whose marriage will be an event of next week.

The members of the P.-T. A. of Pryor school, of which Miss Coyne is a teacher, presented her with a beautiful silver bread tray.

Twenty guests, officers of the P.-T. A. and teachers of the school were invited.

Suffered Terribly

"TWO years ago, I was in the worst of health," says Mrs. H. S. Spivey, of Goshen, Ala., whose picture is printed above. "I was weak and nervous. I was in bed for several weeks. My family thought I was going into a decline. I had a small baby, but was not able to take care of it myself. My husband helped me all he could. I was dreadfully distressed by my condition.

"My case was very stubborn and would not respond to any treatment. I tried everything that was recommended to me, but nothing helped. My nerves were 'all to pieces'. The least thing sent me into hysterics. My back ached continually. I really suffered terribly.

"My mother said all along the real cause of my illness was womanly weakness. She suggested Cardui, but I was taking something else, so did not take her suggestion. Finally, seeing that I was daily getting worse, she insisted that I give Cardui a trial, so I got a bottle and began taking it. At the end of that first bottle I was so much better that my husband got me four bottles, so I could keep right on with the Home Treatment.

"I kept it up until I was entirely well. I have been in the best of health for the last year."

TWO HOMES MADE HAPPY

By Women Who Used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I think it is the most wonderful medicine I ever tried," is the statement made by Mrs. Goldie Shoup of May View, Illinois. She declares that after taking the Compound she is in better health than before.

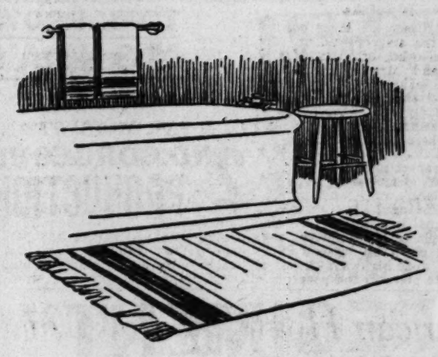

Mrs. J. Storms of 29 Lane Street, Paterson, N. J., writes: "I can not speak too highly of your medicine and I recommend it to all my friends."

These statements were taken from two enthusiastic letters which tell of the help that has been received from using the Vegetable Compound. Both Mrs. Shoup and Mrs. Storms were in a run-down condition which caused them much unhappiness. When women are suffering from lack of strength and from weakness their own life and that of their family is affected. When they feel well and strong and are able to do their housework easily, happy homes are the result.

Club Institute Is Cynosure Of General Federation

By Mrs. Lamar C. Rucker, of Athens, Past Chairman of Club Institutes.

Mrs. Stafford, the club editor, has asked me to tell the clubwomen of Georgia Federation something of the history of our club institute at the University of Georgia and what a place it has taken in the General Federation.

First, let us see if we can devolve a ways and means of impressing every club woman of this state from Nacoochee Valley to Tybee Light with the opportunity offered her in the club institute to open next Tuesday morning on the campus of the University of Georgia.

Last week I entered D. Stuart's office in the administration building of the university to talk institute with him—as you know, he is director of the summer school of the university which opened this week with about 2,000 students in attendance, of which our club institute is a unit. I passed from his outer office where four stenographers were busy at the typewriter; one young girl, whose grandfather was a polished chevalier in Georgia's heyday of plantation romances, was writing hundreds of letters to you clubwomen. On past this rush of business I entered Dr. Stuart's office. Here sat a row of teachers, high school professors who wished to make extra units for higher degree work, girls whose ambitions bid them strive beyond their present attainments, gray haired men anxious to meet the present day requirements of Georgia's educational program, all seeking the advice of the summer school director whose hand went out to all with a quick smile of welcome on his face. But, woman like, I claimed his attention and he was quick to give me messages for the clubwomen.

Professors Ready.

"You tell them," he bid me, "that our professors are ready to enter into one program which was published in The Constitution last Sunday and tell them our musical festival and entertainments alone are worth taking a long trip to get."

Three years ago my interest was aroused in institutes where the business of their organization was discussed at the General Federation council in Atlanta. It was with fear and trembling that I waited a signal from that young veteran of club life, Mrs. Hayes, as she sat in the secretary's chair near Mrs. Winter. Finally the time came and I forgot myself as I turned to give those assembled delegates from all parts of our country, the news of our first institute at the university. At the same meeting, the delegate from South Carolina outlined the club institute held at Rock Hill, S. C., but when Mrs. Sanford and I looked over their program, we liked ours best. We were new at making programs but we decided to take up the special departments of the federation. This has been our aim ever since, adding parliamentary drills and talks of publicity.

Letters Received.

Letters have come to me from Mississippi, Florida, Massachusetts, Ohio, Kentucky and Indiana, and replying to the information I had sent them including our programs, certificates and data about cups and awards, deep appreciation was expressed at finding some definite working program to follow.

Education is the keynote of modern life, for economic and progressive reasons and for we mothers and homebuilders to have Georgia's great university open its doors to us, is a privilege we should grasp hand in hand with our sons and daughters. One woman who eagerly drank in all the talks at our first institute, came to me with tears in her eyes and said: "Do you know I never attended school beyond the third grade. My father died in the Confederate war and I had to go in the field and plow. Now I am here in a university where my sons have graduated and I am getting knowledge I have been hungry for all my life."

Woman's Club Of Winder Has Rural School Program

The Winder Woman's club during the past year has accomplished real constructive work through the department of applied education.

Mrs. H. A. Carithers, the very efficient chairman of this department, together with her splendid divisional chairmen, Mrs. W. M. Holsenbeck, chairman of rural education; Mrs. Henry Bledger, chairman of forestry and national resources; Mrs. T. B. Strange, chairman of library; Mrs. C. T. McConnell, chairman home economics; Mrs. Byrd Harris, chairman of Tallulah Falls school, have made the work of this department a power that has been far-reaching in its influence upon the educational and community life, bringing the interests of town and rural sections closer together, with a better understanding of our relationship one to the other.

Outstanding Feature.

The outstanding feature of this work was put on through the rural education division. "Pollyannas" were appointed for every county school, from among the membership of the Woman's club, who were to get in touch with county teachers and help in every way possible to increase efficiency in school work. Our county school commissioner cooperated with the club in this work. Several hundred magazines, colored paper and other materials to be used in making posters and booklets, were given. The department chairman visited most of the schools, making talks on subjects of interest to them. Armistice and Arbor day programs with articles and poems to be used were given. Tree planting was observed in several schools. Assistance was given in preparing programs for all holidays and birthdays of southern and national heroes. One or more books were given by most Pollyannas to their schools during "Children's Book Week." Educational week programs were sent all schools and most of them visited during that week, with talks on the different subjects as outlined. Christmas treats and Easter egg hunts were given most schools. Tubes of tooth paste and tooth brushes, window panes, window shades, erasers, crayons, blackboard borders, floor oil were given. A special effort was made to place every child of school age in school. Books and clothing were furnished 10 children and a number of garments were given others. Luncheon was served either by Pollyannas or divisional chairman and husband at the teachers' institute each month.

The prize offered by the educational chairman for the most valuable assistance given was presented to Mrs. A. D. McCurry, president of Woman's club, who was the "Pollyanna" to Cook's consolidated school. Besides doing the above-mentioned things for her school, through her effort a piano, bookcase, set of Hill's Encyclopedias, 10 other books were secured for the school. An aerial was installed in school building and two radio evening programs were enjoyed by the community. Mrs. McCurray gave several children lessons in expression, preparing them for the county contest and commencement. Gave a gold medal in spelling and two Sunday afternoons a month gives Bible lectures in this community. Thirty trees were planted on the school grounds.

The chairman of forestry talked to the county teachers at the meeting in November, stressing the necessity of forest preservation, the establishment of city and state parks, urged the removal of signs from trees, supplied programs for Arbor day, planted dogwoods, displayed a wood chart at a club meeting of 89 varieties of wood found by school children in Barrow county, offered prizes for largest and best wood chart and also most attractive bird house, supplied patterns for trees posters and booklets for county schools and wrote article on "Forestry" for Winder News.

Club Library.

The club library, located in the National Bank building, is open every week during the year, under the supervision of the chairman of this division. It numbers 85 members, which makes several hundred readers. It announces the addition of 93 volumes, making a total of 343 books in the library, owned and operated by the Woman's club.

Under the home economics work classes in beginners' sewing have been held in the Mill school, the club giving the material for the garments. Basket also was taught in Mill school. A display from this school was on exhibition at thrift and home economics. Talks were made to mothers on preparing school lunches.

The cause of the Tallulah Falls school is dear to the heart of the Woman's club, which makes a yearly contribution to the "Light in the Mountains."

Dr. Stewart Issues Greetings And Talks of Club Institute

BY DR. JOSEPH S. STEWART, Director of the University of Georgia Summer School.

The fourth session of the Woman's club institute will open at the University of Georgia summer school next Tuesday.

I have been a close observer of the work of the three previous institutes and have examined the program for this year. The club institute, like all new things, has to find its way to the best service. It was hard for some of the lecturers in the early institutes to get away from the convention address plan, but with each year the sessions became more and more a school and there was less of the convention type of work. Even a casual study of this year's program as outlined by Mrs. Selover and Mrs. Fleming, chairmen of the club institute, will show that the school idea dominates each feature of the program.

The club people will be going to school for a week to the national and state leaders. The classroom idea more than the lecture idea will dominate the morning programs. For instance, the program on organization of which Mrs. J. E. Hays is leader will be an hour's lesson—a socialized recitation, if you please to use the school phrase, in the organization of the different federation units, the purpose and scope of each, and the methods of organization.

Expected to Take Notes.

There will be remarks by the leader and questions by the leader to the class and by the class to the leader. Each member is expected to take notes so that she can conduct a similar exercise with her local clubs or district clubs when she returns home from the institute. This will be followed by an hour's drill in correct procedure in organization.

Mrs. Selover will not lead the class in parliamentary law, but a class will be conducted in which the members of the class must take part in the parliamentary drill. My observation has been that those who attend really receive more benefit from these socialized recitations than from the more formal lectures where the class takes no active part.

Think what a delightful and instructive class exercises can be made by Mrs. Ottley, Mrs. Hendren and Miss Jeanette Rankin during the hour on legislation, when they bring up for discussion such topics as "Shall Candidates for Office Be Invited to Speak From Club Platforms?" "We Should Indorse Measures, Not Men." "Do We Not Sponsor and Undertake Too Much Legislation?" "The Difference Between Politics and Partisanship."

Last year Miss Rosa Woodberry and the writer gave twenty-minute drills daily in parliamentary practice. This year Mrs. Selover says that she wants to give an hour each day to these drills to the class. Her first hour's drill will be on correct procedure and organization.

Institute Differs.

Without going into more details, clubwomen can, I think, see the difference in the institute from the convention idea. One in attendance will have little opportunity to set back and be a passive recipient. We will all be going to school to these leaders for a week. This institute will be helpful to not only the clubwomen of the state, but to the P.-T. A. leaders and those engaged in any form of club work.

There will be a number of very interesting social features. The Athens Woman's club will give a luncheon on Tuesday. On Wednesday the club institute will be the guest of the university summer school at luncheon in Memorial hall. On Thursday they will be the guest of the Agricultural college at luncheon at Camp Wilkins and on Friday they will be the guest of the Y. W. C. A. girls' camp. On Tuesday evening they will enjoy with the more than 1,500 regular summer school students an evening of music given by Paul Fleming, of Pennsylvania, and on Wednesday evening a concert by Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Hodgson, of Atlanta. On Thursday the club will have an opportunity to present to the summer school students the work of the club institute.

I believe that these institutes have brought the women a clearer appreciation of their work and its relation to the many activities of the state. I feel quite sure that these annual meetings have developed a more sympathetic relation between the teachers and the federated clubs.

The summer school extends a hearty welcome to all clubwomen to enjoy next week's institute with us in Athens and we believe it will be a week long to be remembered by those who attend.

Mrs. De La Perriere Conducts First Citizenship Institute

The first American citizenship institute held in the state was held in Hoschton, April 30, conducted by Mrs. Arthur De La Perriere, chairman of this department of the ninth district. About 100 women were present, representing many clubs in the district. A welcome address was given by Mrs. M. B. Allen, president of the Hoschton club, followed by a response by Mrs. C. E. Pittman, of the Commerce club.

A most instructive and interesting talk on "How to Interest Clubwomen in Citizenship" was made by Mrs. Hubert Yow, president of the district, followed by Mrs. S. V. Sanford, of Athens, second vice president of the state, on the "Importance of Primaries." She urged the clubwomen to register and be ready to vote when elections were called.

Mrs. C. M. Snelling, of Athens, state chairman of club institute, gave an outline of the coming institute to be held in Athens.

Round-table discussion was held and every division of this department was discussed. The Winder Choral club added to the enjoyment of the day with musical selections. Luncheon was served by the women of the Hoschton club.

Assists Mrs. Richardson.

Mrs. Hoschton will assist Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, of Atlanta, to conduct the American citizenship school at the club institute held next week at the University of Georgia. Dr. J. H. T. McPherson, member of the university faculty, will also head this part of the program, which falls on the opening day, Tuesday, June 29.

Included in the subjects coming up for discussion are "Youth and Citizenship," "What Constitutes 100 Per Cent American Citizenship?" and "What Is the Remedy for Women Not Assuming Their Duties as Citizens?"

Clearer Vision.

Mrs. De La Perriere believes that a clearer vision of citizenship should be given the Hoschton clubwomen by establishing a school in order to exchange ideas and plans, calling together this department in every club in the ninth district last April. The ideas exchanged by the chairmen and members of the division lent inspiration for greater achievements, with the result that Mrs. De La Perriere plans to hold another American citizenship school in the ninth district either in the fall or spring. She is one of the recognized club leaders of Georgia and she possesses unusual ability and splendid qualifications.

Georgia Federation's Third Club Institute Opens June 29

Club institutes became a part of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, adopted at the 1923 biennial held at Chautauqua, N. Y. Mrs. Thomas G. Winter was president of the federation, and assisted by Mrs. Percy Pennybacker, a past president of the organization, planned this new and important work.

The third club institute sponsored by the Georgia federation opens Tuesday, June 29, at the University of Georgia in Athens, with Mrs. C. M. Snelling, chairman.

Cordial Interest.

Chancellor Snelling, has shown a cordial interest in the federation and its work, Dean Sanford has given freely of his services and will speak on citizenship at the forthcoming meeting. Dr. Stewart, head of the summer school, has assisted Mrs. Snelling in her work of arranging the program and other details of the institute. Dr. Bernard Garey, director of the child health demonstration; Dr. A. S. Edwards, Dr. J. H. T. McPherson, Dr. Soule, head of the State Agricultural college; Dr. McHatton, Miss Laura Blackshear and Miss Rosalie Rathbone, also of the agricultural college, are on the program. Dr. George F. Granberry will be in charge of musical programs.

Clubwomen appearing on the program are some of the outstanding women in Georgia club life. Mrs. J. E. Hays, past recording secretary of the general federation and past president of the Georgia federation, will speak; Miss Rosa Woodberry, state parliamentarian; Mrs. J. K. Ottley, president of Tallulah Falls school; Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, director for Georgia; Mrs. Ira Farmer, state chairman of home economics; Mrs. Norman Sharp, chairman of junior memberships; Mrs. Walter Hodges, past president of the eighth district; Mrs. Arthur C. Watkins, of Washington, D. C., and others.

These federation speakers will address the institute on subjects which they have studied and carefully prepared and a treat is in store for those who attend.

Reception Given.

The reception by Chancellor and Mrs. Snelling at their home will be the outstanding social event. Daily luncheons, a recital by Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Hodgson, an evening of magic with Paul Fleming and daily small gatherings of friends will tend to complete an interesting program.

The registration fee is $1. The hotels give a reduced rate of $1.00 a day. The date is June 29 through July 2.

State Federation President Urges Institute Training

The approaching club institute to be held in Athens, June 29 to July 2, promises to be very successful. Dr. Stewart and Mrs. Snelling have been untiring in their efforts to make a constructive and interesting program, and everyone who attends will feel amply repaid. The coming together each year of clubwomen, to study how to be practical clubwomen, is of great value to the work of the federation. This is the day of trained workers in every field, and it is my earnest hope that this year's institute will enroll the largest attendance in its history.

The leaders in the various programs are experienced clubwomen, conversant with every phase of the work and will put into their programs not only the necessarily theoretical part, but the results of years of experience and practical thought along all lines to be discussed.

Hoping for the large attendance the program merits, I am,

Sincerely yours,
ELLA F. BRANTLEY,
(Mrs. A. P. Brantley)
President Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs.

Mrs. Battey's Report Gives Account of Chairman's Work

The following report made by Mrs. W. W. Battey, of Augusta, chairman state of Georgia of the friendly relations with ex-service men committee, will be read with general interest:

As requested by the general federation, a chairman has been appointed for each district who, in turn, shall appoint county chairmen, who will report work accomplished.

Each state differs in its needs; therefore each state chairman was to arrange a program suitable to her state. The state of Georgia has two United States veterans' hospitals—one in Atlanta, No. 48, and one in Augusta, No. 62. We can all carry on and bring cheer and comfort to our boys and happiness to ourselves through service.

As chairman for the state of Georgia, the program of service for the 12th district has been allotted to the districts during the month corresponding to the number of the district. The first district is requested to "mother" the hospitals during the month of January; the second district, February, and so on through each year, so that a systematic service for the boys might be established. The district chairman must interest every federated club in her district through a county chairman. The purpose of the federation in organizing this committee was to invite every woman to membership in the work of reconstruction carried on by the government for the ex-service men and their families.

There are many patriotic women who were not fortunate enough to have relatives in the great war, but who are anxious to become a part of an organization working for the cause. Since the committee of friendly cooperation is open to membership irrespective of war service, its membership through the federated clubs should be far-reaching.

Response of Clubs.

The following clubs in the state have responded during 1925 and 1926:

First district, Savannah; second district, Mrs. R. P. Wimberly, chairman friendly relations, Thomasville; Moultrie Woman's club; Cairo Woman's club; Poulan Woman's club; Camilla Music club; Omega Woman's club; Sylvester Woman's club; Tifton Library club; Omega Woman's club; Cairo Woman's club; Twentieth Century club, Boston, Mrs. J. W. Taylor; Arlington Woman's club; Pavo Woman's club; Sylvester Woman's club; third district; fourth district; fifth district; sixth district; seventh district, Tallapoosa; Rome Woman's club; eighth district; Elberton Sorosis club; Canon Woman's club; Covington Woman's club; Lexington Woman's club; Hartwell Woman's club; Royston Woman's club; Carlton Woman's club; Outlook club of Madison; Washington club; ninth district; tenth district; Woman's club, Augusta; eleventh district; Woman's club of Blackshear; Douglas Woman's club; Thank Y. A. Woman's club, Blackshear; twelfth district; Fort Valley Woman's club. The friendly relations committee of Richmond county has a fund for ex-service emergency work.

The Woman's Service league, Augusta, has provided two weekly entertainments in cooperation with the Red Cross during 1925 and 1926. Since destruction of Recreation hall by fire, the organizations composing the Woman's Service league have sent contributions to the wards for ward parties. They also assisted in Christmas celebration and sent Easter lilies to the hospital at Easter. A number of letters have been written, literature and leaflets "lest we forget," and every effort made by your state chairman to extend the service of friendly cooperation to the ex-service men of the state of Georgia.

Mrs. Dyar's Report.

The following report was handed in at the Federation of Georgia Women's Clubs by Mrs. J. A. Dyar, chairman friendly relations ex-service men, for the eighth district:

Attended two ex-board meetings; have written cards to every club in the district; in the spring of 1925 wrote circular letters to every club; in September, 1925, asked that they send boxes to government hospital in Augusta for disabled members; mailed cards in March of this year asking for reports; have received reports from the following clubs: Washington Woman's club sent a box; Madison Outlook club, candies, preserves, jam, cookies, chewing gum and 6 1-2 pounds of pecans; Carlton Woman's club, candy and cigarettes and Christmas and other remembrances on mothers' day; Elberton Civic league reports of box canned fruits and jellies and other delicacies; Hartwell Woman's club, cigarettes, smoking tobacco, box valued at $10; Covington Woman's club, jelly and preserves; Canon Woman's club, box of candy, valued at $5; Lexington club, box valued at $3; Royston Woman's club sent box of candy valued at $3 in October, in November sent box of fruit; The Blue Birds sold forget-me-nots in March, proceeds to go for wounded soldiers, realizing $23.25. The girls from six to fourteen years of age are an asset to the Woman's club. Received letters of acknowledgement from hospital.

Sixth District Selects Slogan Of "Smile, Sing and Serve"

The slogan of the sixth district Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, with Mrs. L. C. Warren as president, is "Smile, Sing and Serve."

President's Report.

Mrs. Warren, in her report, says: The sixth district is composed of 11 counties, Bibb, Butts, Clayton, Fayette, Henry, Jones, Lamar, Monroe, Spalding, Pike and Upson. In these counties we have 37 federated clubs and six county federations, nine clubs organized but not yet federated.

The thrill of the federation honeymoon has waned, and now the real tasks of service to community, county and state are taking on more serious aspect, and the dreams of the first few years are bearing most wonderful fruit in concrete form.

The Sixth District Federation meeting was held at Meansville in Pike county last October in connection with the Pike county meeting, and the generosity and graciousness of this meeting after only two days' notice was such an outstanding contribution to not only their own community but to the entire district that by a unanimous vote of all present, including our state president, Mrs. A. P. Brantley, Meansville was awarded the handsome loving cup, donated by Reis and Armstrong, of Macon, to be given each year to the club voted the most deserving.

Notable Speakers.

The state director, Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, the state president, Mrs. Brantley, and other officials, Mrs. J. K. Ottley, and Mrs. Wightman F. Melton, were speakers on this occasion. While we feel this year is but fairly begun we gladly report activities in all clubs harmonizing with state de[partments] where community size and [per]mit.

A[ll] report nearly 11 per cent regist[ration] of membership and active interest [in] local, state and national elections, [thro]ugh the efforts of several gro[ups] incompetent officials have been re[pla]ced by competent ones. All observed ch[ild] health week. Parks, playgrounds and [play]ways have all had a definite place [in] the program of planting trees, shrubs and flowers. Brooks, Concord and Meansville having done unusually splendid work in beautifying communities. Through the generosity of Mrs. C. T. Smith of Concord, the grounds of the Episcopal church in Griffin have been made into a beautiful park as a memorial to a patriotic citizen.

Applied Education.

Each club in district is contributing to local library or providing from state books for local community. Study and care of Georgia's own trees has been made by all clubs. Planting and preservation of holly and dogwood stressed. Thrift week. Better towns and education week observed throughout the district. Health program put on by children of Griffin club. Essay on trees, and essays on thrift urged in all schools.

Mrs. Franklin Sibley, Spalding county's home demonstration agent, is district chairman of home and school. The value of her work in classes of nutrition and planting of yards, gardens and artistic home planning has been of superior value to clubs throughout the district.

Public Welfare.

Every club has made inspection of jails and places of detention and wrought improvement where possible. All clubs reported special work done in examinations of school children, and three clubs reported health clinics.

In the fine arts department, every club has been stressing the beautiful in music and art as essential to development of every individual. Many clubs sponsoring junior divisions by using on musical and dramatic programs.

Every club in the district has contributed to the heart of the federation, Tallulah Falls school. Every club will contribute to student aid, and Griffin Woman's club gives annually $200 as a scholarship to a girl in high school making the best average. The president has communicated with every club all plans and kept them posted on all state plans.

'American Home' Was Keynote Of Ninth District Convention

It is very fitting that the 1925-26 convention of the Federated clubs of the ninth district should have been held at Martin, Ga., the home of the retiring president of the district. For four years Mrs. Hubert Yow has been president of the ninth district, and such a wonderful executive has she made that the club work of the ninth district has gone forward by leaps and bounds until the district stands among the foremost districts of the Georgia federation and it is certainly surpassed by no other district in real constructive work.

Mrs. Yow and her predecessors have put their hearts, minds and hands into the district work and so well grounded have been their efforts the entire district has been leavened and the results are almost beyond belief.

Aside from her executive ability, Mrs. Yow is an unusual woman. She is, first of all, a home-maker and does not allow her outside work to interfere with her duties as a wife and mother. Her home is one of the most attractive in north Georgia, and an invitation to visit this home is always hailed with delight by those who are so fortunate as to be within the charmed circle of Mrs. Yow's friends.

Next to her family comes her church, and Bessie Field Yow is one of the leading spirits in the religious life of her town and county.

The splendid work already spoken of is proof that she is an ideal club woman, and the fact that her executive board surprised her with the gift of a magnificent silver loving cup during the recent convention is evidence of the love, esteem and admiration in which she is held by her coworkers in the district.

Convention Keynote.

"The American Home" was the keynote of the convention held at the Baptist church in Martin, June 10-11. The opening session was held on Thursday afternoon and was a conference of the club presidents of the ninth district. The meeting was opened by the vice president, Mrs. J. E. McElroy, of Norcross, who after the reading of the club collect and a few timely remarks, turned the meeting over to Mrs. Herman De Laperriere, of Hoschton, who conducted the round table discussion of questions vital to the success of a club. Quite a number of presidents took part in this very helpful and interesting conference.

The Thursday evening program was presided over by Mrs. David Landrum, president of the Stephens County federation, a most unusual program being presented. The meeting was opened with a lovely pageant of welcome, written by Mrs. Yow. A charming little response by Mrs. G. A. Johns of Winder was closed with the presentation of the loving cup to the beloved retiring president.

A reading by Miss Landrum, solos by Julian Field of Greenville, S. C., and selections by the Martin Music club added much to the attractive program.

Mrs. Yow's Address

Mrs. Landrum introduced Mrs. Yow, the district president, who made an inspiring address on "The Spirit of the Federation."

Col. Kenyon of Gainesville was presented by Mrs. Yow, who delivered a wonderful address on "The Value of the American Home." Col. Kenyon is a very eloquent speaker and his talk on this occasion was thoroughly appreciated. Miss Katherine Dozier's talk on "The Home Life of the Mill People" was indeed appealing. Miss Dozier is in close touch with social service work and educational work among the mill people and handled her subject in a masterly manner.

The business session of the convention was held Friday and the splendid reports given by the district chairmen show the wonderful work being carried on by the clubs of the district. Several members of the executive board of the state federation were present and presented the work of the several departments and divisions.

Visitors Present.

Among the visitors were Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, of Atlanta; Mrs. Nichols Peterson, of Tifton; Mrs. Ira Farmer, of Atlanta; and Mrs. Lena Felker Lewis, of Monroe.

Miss Beverly Wheatcroft, of the Georgia library commission, presented her subject in a most charming manner during the morning session.

Next Meeting at Hoschton.

Hoschton was chosen as the meeting place in 1927. The following district officers were elected: President, Mrs. J. E. McLeroy, Norcross; first vice president, Mrs. Hiram Flanigan, Winder; secretary, Mrs. Bryan, Jefferson; treasurer, Mrs. Henry Pledger, Winder.

This article closes with a word of thanks to the people of Martin, Toccoa and Stephens county for their charming hospitality and for the delightful picnic supper at Toccoa Falls and the luncheon served by the Martin Woman's club.

East Point Club Holds Last Meeting.

The East Point Woman's club held the final meeting of the season Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Charles Owens, at a silver tea

The receiving line included Mrs. James T. McGee, the president, and her capable staff of officers.

Musical selections were given by Mrs. Frank Upchurch and Misses Gussie Wooten and Gladys McWhorter.

Little Jeanette Lynch gave a group of quaint readings and Miss Mattie McConnell gave a rendition of the old familiar poem, "Maud Muller," and gave as an encore "When Malindy Sings."

The free-will offering was added to the building fund. The club treasury has a little over $1,000 on deposit, and hopes to have a substantial club home inside of a year. A lot was donated the club several months ago by the city council.

Miss Emma Harrison, who was one of the eight charter members when the club was organized in January, 1911, was made a life honorary member.

BIG PROFITS MADE ON AVONDALE LOTS

Increase of values in Avondale Estates, Atlanta's new suburban city, was shown Tuesday in records of numerous resales of building lots at profits ranging beyond $2,500 in several instances and in every case at 100 to 300 per cent advance over the initial payment price.

This condition was said in real estate circles to reflect not only general prosperity in Atlanta but also the soundness of investment in this new suburb, where a $1,000,000 development program is being rushed to completion.

A typical resale transaction involved lots 16 and 17 in block one of [illegible] unit of Avon[illegible] Estates.

LOTS AT AVONDALE RESOLD FOR $1,500 PROFIT OVER COST

Numerous re-sales of lots in Avondale Estates, Atlanta's new suburban city, at profits ranging between $1,500 and $2,100 to more than 300 per cent over the initial payment price, were announced Wednesday.

These substantial increases in value were said by real estate observers to reflect a soundness in development of the new suburb, and a natural result of the conscientious fulfillment of every project announced for this "outdoors" city, where a $1,000,000 program has been undertaken for 1926, with a consequent enhancement of values.

Lots at Avondale Estates Showing Big Profits

Announcement was made Wednesday of numerous re-sales in Avondale Estates, Atlanta's new suburban city, at profits upon building lots that range beyond $1,500 over the purchase price and 100 to 300 per cent over the initial payment. Many of these re-sales, according to John H. Byrley, general manager of Avondale Estates, were made quickly after the original purchase, the profits being realized upon investments of no more than the prorated monthly small initial payment. The recent experience of Charles [illegible] Black, who came to Atlanta a year ago from Los Angeles, and becoming impressed with possibilities of the new suburb, acquired several thereby.

Mr. Black purchased June 3 lot 21 block 9 for $2,008.80, and sold it June 12 for $3,000; two lots in block 5 for $1,546.10 each, reselling them for $2,375 each; lot 7, block 5, for $1,396.85, reselling it for $2,450; and lot 10, block 6, for $2,205, reselling for $3,000.

"In no case was the investment more than the $300 initial payment," Mr. Black said.

Lots 16 and 17 in block 1 of the first unit of Avondale Estates, identified with the construction of many of Atlanta's notably beautiful homes, and throughout all its hundreds of building projects has maintained a standard of quality that has made its name distinctive, said Mr. Willis. Among the homes bought in 1925 by J. H. Byrley, Jr., for $3,000, were resold by him to B. E. Fraser, Jr., for $4,500, and an offer of $6,500 was reported refused by the present owner.

Ben S. Forkner, a resident of Avondale, reported a profit of $300 five days after the purchase of a lot, and in the case of lot 16, block 4, a profit of $700 on the purchase price of $1,500.

Lot 17, block 12, bought by a prominent Atlanta woman for $2,200, was resold for $3,000. Lots 13 and 14 of block 8, bought for $1,650 each, sold quickly, according to the records compiled Wednesday, for $2,000 each. Lot one, block 2, purchased for $2,650, recently brought an offer of $3,250, which was refused by the owner. Lot 23, block 4, bought for $1,500, was sold for $2,000, a profit of $500 on the purchaser's actual investment of $471 in initial payments and notes.

Enhancement of values in Avondale was said in real estate circles to reflect a sound development in real estate and general business about Atlanta, and to have been hastened by rapid progress of the $1,000,000 building program undertaken in the new suburb.

These homes will be built under the Avondale building plan of wholesale purchase of material and labor, organization of specialized workmen, enabling rapid and economical construction and thus bringing about savings to the owner of an Av[illegible]

Sale of three homes at Avondale Estates, Atlanta's modern suburban city, in a single day, was announced Tuesday by John H. Byrley, general manager.

The residence at 10 Dartmouth avenue was purchased by P. B. Hicks, an executive of the Atlanta branch of the F. W. Woolworth company. This home was erected by Charles H. Black, a resident of Avondale Estates, who recently came here from Los

There are profits for you at Avondale!

Just what has happened in every other high type, well-handled Atlanta residential development during the past twenty years is now happening at Avondale Estates.

Every person with the vision to invest at pre-development prices has made big money on his purchase.

Purchasers in the First Unit of Avondale Estates have made from 50% to 200% on their actual investment!

What they have done in the first Unit, what has been done in other developments, you can do in the Lake and Golf Section of Avondale Estates—and more!

$1,000,000 Development Program

Contracts have been let which call for the paving of all streets in this section—within four months. All improvements will be in; many new houses will have been built—part of the $1,000,000 progam which is to construct 100 new homes at Avondale within the next twelve months.

Lots in this unit are now offered at a 20% pre-development discount, which is automatically removed as soon as improvements are in.

Values will not stop then—for these home sites are greatly under-priced, for a reason: Avondale Estates wants everyone to make a substantial profit on the purchases made here; it is to the advantage of the development.

Sales are now going forward at the rate of $3,000,000 a year—marking a new epoch in Atlanta's real estate history.

Sales last week were over $82,000 and within the next 60 days, at the present rate, the entire Lake and Golf Section will be sold out.

There is no doubt that Avondale's future is assured and that here is your opportunity for profit.

Atlanta Surging Ahead

Why?

Because Atlanta is the logical and strategic center of a territory whose growth is already tremendous and has only begun; she is already a real metropolis and is foreordained to be a city of half a million or more. New population comes in at an average of 25,000 to 30,000 a year. In five years Atlanta will have another 100,000 people, at the most conservative estimate.

Where are these people going to live—this new 100,000 and those that are to follow?

Avondale Estates can provide for no more than 15,000 of them—the property can accommodate no more.

And they will want to live in Avondale—because it is the most complete and scientifically planned development in all America, without an equal in the South for beauty and convenience. It has been enthusiastically acclaimed by the nation's foremost city planning experts and civic engineers—and is being doubly endorsed by the hundreds who are now buying, eager to live here.

WORLD'S LARGEST MAGNOLIA BLOSSOM—The giant flower measures 16 inches in width. It was grown in Peekskill, N. Y., on the old Henry Ward Beecher estate. The only other plant of its kind in this country is in a museum. (Herbert)

HERE IS THE FAMOUS HEAD OF THE DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE AT WASHINGTON—Herbert Hoover, of President Coolidge's cabinet, shaking hands with the newly elected chancellor of the University, C. M. Snelling, just before Secretary Hoover began his baccalaureate address. In the doorway in the background is Harry Hodgson, member of the board of trustees and prominent business man of Athens.

A CATCHY SNAPSHOT OF FAMOUS FIGURES ON COMMENCEMENT SUNDAY AT THE UNIVERSITY AT ATHENS—Walking in front are Chancellor Emeritus David C. Barrow, with cap and gown, and at his right, chairman of the board of trustees, Judge Richard B. Russell. Behind Chancellor Barrow is Chancellor C. M. Snelling, of the University, and behind him is President Soule, of the State Agricultural college. Walking beside Chancellor Snelling is Bishop Warren A. Candler, who preached the commencement sermon, and beside Dr. Soule is Professor S. V. Sanford, newly elected dean of the University and head of the athletic association.

FAMOUS CLASS OF 1868 OF THE UNIVERSITY OF GEORGIA TAKEN IN ITS SOPHOMORE YEAR IN 1866—This is a photograph of perhaps the most famous class ever graduating from the University of Georgia—that of 1868. It is sent to The Constitution by Prof. M. D. DuBose, of the university, whose father was a member of the class. This photograph was taken on the steps of the historic old chapel in the sophomore year of the class, November, 1866—the year following the close of the Civil war. Several of the members of the class were young Confederate war veterans returning at the close of the war to resume their studies—one on the top row still wearing his Confederate uniform. The faculty at that time, sitting in the front row, from left to right, consisted of Prof. Jones, Dr. Waddell, Dr. (later chancellor) Mell, Chancellor Lipscomb, Prof. William Rutherford, Dr. Louis Jones, Prof. L. H. Charbonnier. In the first row, standing behind the seated faculty and reading from left to right are: Howell Jackson, Charles S. DuBose, William P. Mitchell, Julius L. Brown, N. V. McKibben, L. L. McCleskey, Reese Crawford, A. L. Mitchell, J. P. Rucker, George Goetchius, R. A. Russell, Peter W. Meldrim. Second row from front, standing, reading from left to right: A. W. Alfriend, F. W. Barnett, H. P. Myers, H. Whitman, Charlie Goodman, J. H. Casey, Hamilton Yancey, Bowdre Phinizy, E. B. Young, R. B. Hodgson, W. R. Mims, E. H. McLaren. Between the second row and the last row, in left corner: W. Dennis, Henry W. Grady (with hat on). Last row (in rear): Davenport Jackson, S. F. Wilson, B. P. Hollis, W. Bailey Thomas, William Parks, W. C. Smith, Horace Beene, W. W. Thomas. George Bancroft, W. A. Carlton, Robert Toombs (nephew of the statesman), J. H. Bethune. This was the first class to graduate from the university after the war and many of its members achieved state and national distinction. There were 44 members of the class but seven do not appear in the picture, being absent at the time it was taken. They are Albert H. Cox, D. P. Dozier, J.E.Donaldson, Walter S. Gordon (brother of General John B. Gordon), E. R. Hodgson, L. Leconte, T. W. Rucker. Of this class Judge Peter W. Meldwin has attended every commencement since 1864, except one when he was providentially prevented. Leaving the university after his first matriculation and on the closing of the university incident to the war, he entered the Confederate service, returning to his class after the war. He has been president of the American Bar association and is now judge of the Savannah circuit (standing at right, first row, behind faculty). Note Henry W. Grady, with hat on, left second row from top. The other, standing with hat in first standing row back of faculty, is A. L. Mitchell, who lost an arm in the war. He holds a book under his remaining arm.

SEVEN LITTLE MAIDS—But they're all from Athens and not the land of cherry blossoms. They appeared in the "Fans and Lanterns" performance of Lucy Cobb institute. Left to right, Ida Stark Davison, Harrison Heidler, Louise Chandler, Barbara Jenkins, Betty Crews, Coates Benedict Trimple and Phillis Jenkins.

FOE OF THE DREAD WHITE PLAGUE is this handsome new structure erected at Alto in the north Georgia hills by the state as a tuberculosis santiarium.

AFTER 41 YEARS this brother and sister—D. G. Thomas, 46 years old, of 68 Neel street, Atlanta, and Mrs. Addie Crow, 64, of Oklahoma City—were reunited at a gathering of their family in Marietta. They had not seen each other for almost half a century.

SILVER SCREEN STARS WATCH TWINKLING TOES of Trixx Jackson, Atlanta's champion Charleston dancer selected in a recent contest at the Howard theater sponsored by The Constitution. The photo was made at the Paramount studios on Long Island. Watching the Atlanta dancer "strut" are Lois Wilson, C. W. Goodrich, Louise Brooks, Gregory Kelly, Hal St. Claire, director; Ford Sterling, Claire McDowell.

STORIES OF CRINOLINE DAYS featured the recital of Miss Manora Conley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Conley, of College Park, at her graduation in expression at Sullins college, Bristol, Va.

WHOA, DOBBIN!—Therese Deri, a Berlin actress, took this nasty spill from her sulky during a recent horse show at Wien. She was only bruised.

Georgia's Marine Beauties

Nowhere along the broad line where the waves of the Atlantic pound on Georgia's shores is the quaint charm of that historic section more ideally blended with modern beauties than in the bustling city of Brunswick, the sand dunes that shift on the coast, the Marshes of Glenn, made famous by Sidney Lanier, and St. Simon's island, with its ancient and hoary traces of early Spanish settlement. These striking photos were made by Kenneth Rogers, Constitution staff photographer.

WHERE ONCE THE STATELY DON TROD—The ruins of this ancient Spanish mission have only recently been identified as those of San Buena Ventura, believed established in 1568, only two years after St. Augustine, Fla., was founded. Three of these missions are believed to have been founded in Glenn county.

A FLOWER-HARVESTER—Is young Paul Benedick, as he insists that the camera man have a few of the choicest flowers from a field of gladioli near Brunswick. Note the size of the flowers as compared to the child's body.

GRIM SENTINEL OF THE LONELY DUNES—This gnarled and twisted old tree has resisted the force of the elements on the wild lands near Brunswick while the world was fighting many wars, producing new generations and taking itself quite seriously through the centuries.

LEGIONS OF FLAMING BLOSSOMS — Rear their spiked heads in this broad field of gladiolas propagated for nursery stock on the Tate Bros. farm near Brunswick. This is a new industry for Georgia, and it is said to yield a profit of over $1,000 per acre.

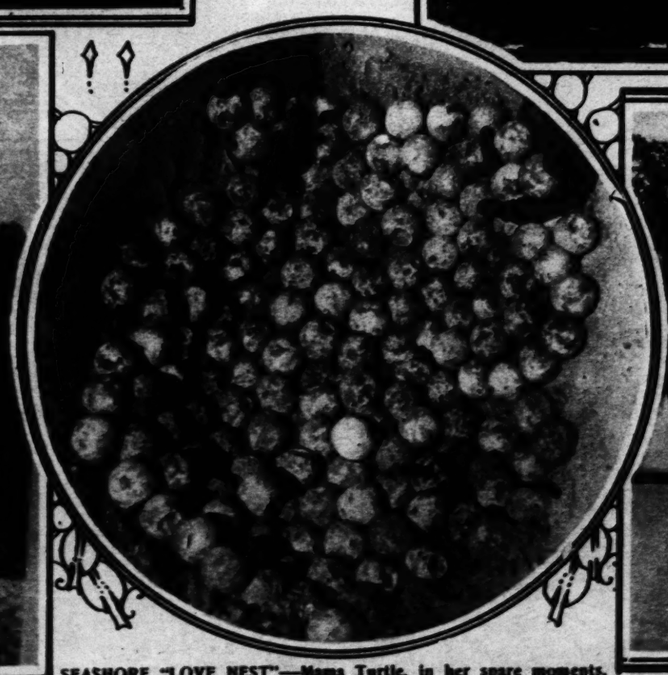

HAUNT OF THE LITTLE LOVE GOD—Many sun-dappled avenues of trees are called "Lovers' Lanes," but only this cathedral aisle of Nature truly deserves the name. Its dim coolness invites many lovers to King's Retreat on St. Simon's island.

CLOSE TO THE HEART OF EARTH—Is the one who gazes on such a masterpiece, painted only by the lavish hand of Summer. It is a study in sunlight and shadow on King's Retreat plantation, St. Simon's.

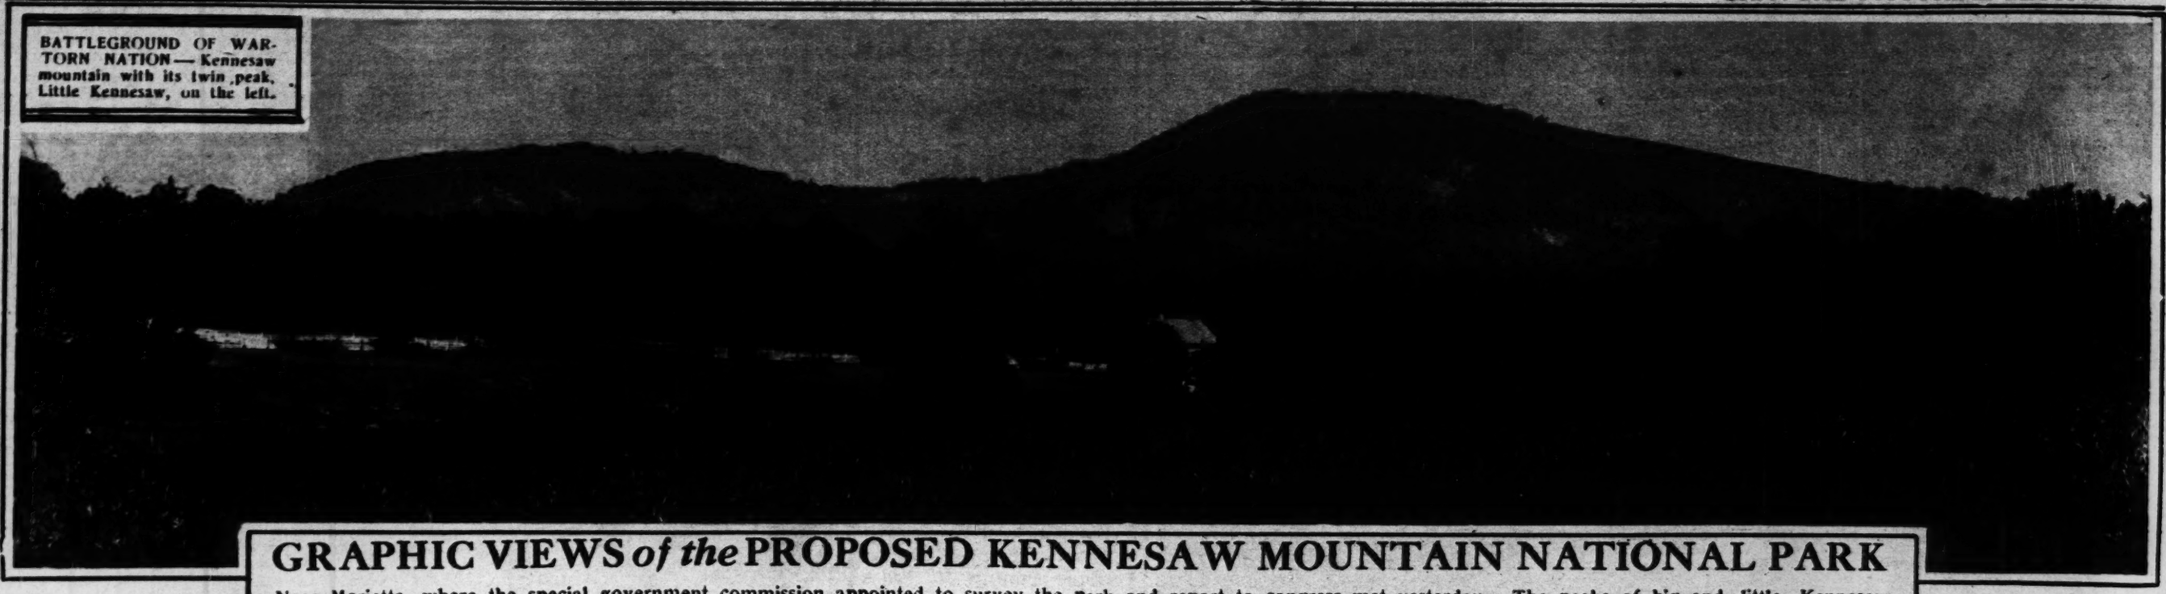

WEALTH OF THE SOIL—Broad acres of flourishing tomato plants on the farm of Macklin and Wall, former South Carolinians, are yielding prosperous returns to their growers near Brunswick.

SEASHORE "LOVE NEST"—Mama Turtle, in her spare moments, hid these dimpled white eggs in the sand and swam back to Africa, leaving the sun to do the rest. Though she didn't cackle, somebody found her horde.

HO! FOR THE SPANISH MAIN—Who cannot feel the urge of buccaneering ancestors as he gazes over the sparkling Florida channel and the marshes of Glenn through this natural frame made by a veteran oak festooned with Spanish moss?

GRAPHIC VIEWS of the PROPOSED KENNESAW MOUNTAIN NATIONAL PARK

Near Marietta, where the special government commission appointed to survey the park and report to congress met yesterday. The peaks of big and little Kennesaw mountains as shown to the right below are from an aerial view photographed by Francis E. Price, of The Constitution. On the right peak the historic signal, "Hold the fort, for I am coming," was received from General W. T. Sherman from Altoona mountain, shown in the middle of the photograph across the intervening valley. The Confederates, fortified on both the Kennesaw mountain peaks, resisted the federal artillery from below and the hand-to-hand onslaught up the mountain slopes. Ascertaining that General Sherman was endeavoring to flank Little Kennesaw, to the left, and throw his forces between Kennesaw and Atlanta, General Joseph E. Johnston withdrew his forces from Kennesaw, to cut off this flanking movement. The federal army then occupied the mountain peaks, and while under artillery fire from the Confederates below the heliograph signal sent by General Sherman by sunlight flashes from Altoona mountain, about 15 miles to the north, were received—"Hold the fort, for I am coming," made internationally famous by Moody's gospel hymn based upon the incident. Thousands of those on both sides who lost their lives are buried in the two cemeteries at the foot of the mountain and in the peaceful town of Marietta, which celebrated yesterday a wonderful reunion of surviving veterans of the two armies.

FLANDERS FIELDS OF THE SIXTIES—Aerial view of the serried lines of crosses in the National Military cemetery at Marietta, where 11,000 northern soldiers of the War Between the States lie sleeping.

PORTAL OF DIXIE'S CITY OF THE DEAD—This monument in the Confederate cemetery at Marietta rears itself above the graves of thousands who died on and around Kennesaw mountain fighting for the south's "lost cause."

ILLINOIS HONORS HERO SONS—This monument on Cheatham's hill is in tribute to Illinois men who died on Kennesaw mountain in 1864 when Colonel Dan McCook's third brigade of the second division, 14th army corps, assaulted the Confederates on June 27, losing 480 killed and wounded, including McCook, fatally wounded, and Colonel A. F. Harmon, killed. For six days the brigade maintained a line in less than 100 feet of the Confederate front without relief, at he end of which the Confederates retired.

GASH OF ANCIENT WAR—From this old trench on Cheatham's hill the Union army started a tunnel with a view of blowing up the slope on which the southern hosts were entrenched.

WHERE POLK DIRECTED TITANIC STRUGGLE—Here is the site of the home of Mary Ann (Polly) Hardage, used as headquarters by General Leonidas Polk. The old well at the right still has its original curb. While drinking water from it, General Polk's son, an army officer, received news of his father's death.

WHERE UNION MEN MINED GRAY FORTIFICATIONS—Mouth of a tunnel on Cheatham's hill marked by a boulder and braced against the ravages of time The Confederates discovered the dynamiting plan in time to evacuate. The tablet reads: "This tunnel was planned with a view of blowing up the Confederate works which their evacuation made unnecessary."

PARADISE FOR GIRLS—Wooded slopes, winding walkways and sylvan huts make Camp Civitania an inviting spot for Atlanta Girl Scouts. One of its chief features is the big swimming pool, at which, on a recent "Civitan day," a series of races, diving exhibitions and life-saving demonstrations was staged CIVITAN "DADDIES" HONOR GUESTS—At Camp Civitania at recent ceremonies marking presentation of the camp site of 97 acres by the club to the Girl Scout council. DEEDS TO BEAUTIFUL CAMP SITE—Presented by the Rev. W. M. Memminger, Civitan chaplain, on behalf of the club, to Mrs. Frank Holland, acting for the Girl Scout Council. The ceremony was followed by a picnic supper and entertainment.

BLUE RIBBON FICTION

"Why, Harry! What's the Matter?"

WAS it worth while to be a woman?

A game that it took s long to learn, and there wa so short a time in which t play.

Of course, if you weren't a wom an, merely a female, it was so easy.

You fetched and carried, grumbled and toiled, and sat out when anything exciting was on, and no one bothered about you at all except perhaps to say when you were young, "She is a good sort," and when you were not any longer young, "Poor old thing."

Eva Concern had always had an eager passion for her own femininity; she had played the queer, delightful, perilous game with avidity—and made so many mistakes.

Looking back now over her life she was ashamed of these mistakes, such foolish, petty, sometimes contemptible mistakes; ashamed of her mistakes, terrified of the perils she had escaped by so near a step.

She was forty-five now and safe. Eva Concern rejoiced in this safety; after these mistakes and perils, mistakes committed, perils just missed, she rejoiced in this sense of safety.

Still lovely and graceful, she was free from the possible assault of any passion, whether it be love, hate, ambition, jealousy, or fear. She was neither sated nor satisfied with these things, but she was silenced; she had come through the storm to calm waters that would endure to the end.

She was surrounded, safeguarded by affection, money, position, her husband, her children, her friends—all bulwarked her against those old devastating storms. And in herself emotion was on the ebb; she no longer asked the heights, but was content with the quiet of the valley.

She leaned back in her chair and looked at the thistle they had brought home from a drive that afternoon; she had asked Harry to get out and pick this thistle, which she had seen growing on a waste piece of land. It was dry, brittle, dead; but magnificent in line, erect with stiff grace, gracious in faded color.

It would never put out any more leaves; here was the end of it, but it would last a long time like this, a pleasing, rather noble shape.

"Like myself," thought Eva Concern.

She had placed the thistle in a vase in the window place and watched it against the chill winter sky that showed above the house opposite.

Looking at it, she reviewed her position. There was Timothy, her husband. She had married him in a medley of emotions, of which love was not one; he was a good man, but there had been many terrible moments when she had thought, "I can't go on with it—being married—that man—all my life." Timothy had never known how near she had been to a break; that was over now; toleration of Timothy had ended in a quiet respect, a real affection—no more peril there.

And then the children, Harry, Barbara, and Christopher. How many times (she was ashamed to think how many) had her spirit failed her there—their illnesses, their tempers, their demands, their insistence, her own weakness, her own nerves, her own inner revolt against this intense absorption in them; how often had she said to herself with horro, "I'll never do it."

But it was done.

The nursery days were over; Harry was at college, training for an engineer, like his father, healthy, happy, well trained, well educated. Barbara was at a finishing school, pretty, sweet, dutiful. Christopher was at school, too, ordinary, normal, content. None of them the least trouble.

Then there was the money. Eva Concern could recall moments of sheer panic when financial alarm had swallowed up everything else, when she and Timothy had looked at each other across the unconscious children's heads and whispered, "We'll never make it."

But they had.

She had cooked and sewed, and watched and tended, and Timothy had toiled and strained, and both had gone without everything they liked. And it was done.

Timothy had been successful; a relative had left her a little fortune; she could have everything she liked now; there was no more need for stinting for any of them.

And then her own emotions. First, the wild joy of work, of creation—she, actually she, Eva Concern, had wanted to be a sculptress; her poor lumps of clay had raised her to a godlike level; she had really known the furious rush of enthusiastic artistry through her soul.

Of course she was no good as a sculptress; perhaps she might have been if her femininity had not claimed her; once she fell in love she utterly forgot the poor lumps of clay; now she thought of them with gratitude that that devastating emotion had been crushed, stifled, killed.

Then—love. What an agony that, but a desperate upsetting of life, of all values, standards, hopes, fears, joys—ah, what an agony!

The man was married, living apart from his wife. Nearly had Eva abandoned her own life to follow his; her resistance had cost her a long illness.

When she read afterwards of his sordid divorce case she shuddered with thankfulness.

Then another man had loved her dearly, and though she could not bring herself to respond, still it had been dreadful pain again when he had died suddenly.

Afterwards had come her marriage with Timothy—not a very honest marriage on her part, for she had undertaken it selfishly, as an expedient for distraction, to keep herself safe, without thinking of Timothy at all except to unconsciously think that she much favored and honored him, for compared to her other lovers he was an ordinary man.

Absorbed in mundane and vital affairs, undemonstrative, he had never praised Eva's beauty, grace, and wit; had seemed, indeed, not to notice it; and she, exasperated, had encouraged the coarse admiration of another man.

With shame she recalled the meanness of that episode, for if she had never really loved Timothy she had certainly never loved Hilary Blake; yet, out of spite, malice, boredom, she had flirted, coquetted, been secretive, deceived Timothy, lied to him, nearly betrayed him utterly—she, a woman with a good husband and three small children.

She knew it as a sign of something ignoble in her nature that she had been able to do such a thing, for Blake was a trashy, flashy type—and yet how strong the temptation had been.

Queer now to think how strong.

But nothing had really happened.

She had saved herself in time; she had kept the family intact; Timothy had never known anything about it; on the surface she had already appeared as a quiet woman of an irreproachable and uneventful life.

And now she was safe.

Nothing would happen any more. There would be ease and comfort, affection, respect to the end. No more fierce joys, perhaps, but no more fierce agonies, regrets, struggles, renunciations.

She looked again with a smile at the thistle, dry, dead, but safe from the tempest, from the wind and rain and destroying fingers and trampling feet—safe until it dropped into fragments that would powder into dust.

Eva Concern went shopping with Hilda Wake; they bought leisurely in handsome palaces crowded with well-dressed people, softly lit, softly perfumed, adorned and spread with luxurious articles.

In the great faintly illuminated hall where they drank tea from orange cups in opalescent recesses people danced. Eva Concern watched the women. How much trouble they all had to take!

Those who were with men had to take trouble to please and flatter them, and the men were mostly unresponsive, bored, dry; those without men had to take trouble to show they didn't care, and at the same time decorously to attract any roving masculine attention that might possibly be turned in their direction.

And all of them had to take trouble to be young, slim, and fashionable.

From her safe harborage Eva Concern sighed with relief that she had done with all this effort, this anxiety.

For her the game was over.

Hilda Wake spoke of a woman they both knew who had "run away" (how childish that sounded, but weren't they all rather childish?) with a rather disreputable sort of man. And again Eva shuddered inwardly with relief to think how safe, safe, safe she was.

She watched the women dancing to the harsh, tearing music, some in love, some trying to be in love, some clutching desperately at life going away from them; some just seeking a respite, with brows wrinkled with anxiety under the merciful shade of the high hats; some faded with ease, bored, dull, smiling mechanically.

"Oh, thank God it is all over for me!"

They went on to a picture exhibition.

An unknown artist had become suddenly fashionable; Hilda Wake wanted to see his "stuff," that she might be able to talk about it; every one had been to see these grave, queer pictures.

The work was good. Eva Concern felt a touch of nostalgia; the silence of the gallery, that flat, top light, the couple of critics making notes, the red stars in the corner of the picture frames, the whole atmosphere of work, ambition, competition—and here, success.

There was a statue in the center of the room—lovely! lovely!

"Perhaps by now," thought Eva, "if I'd stuck at it I might——"

"Don't understand any of it, do you?" smiled Hilda.

"Not a thing."

No one of her present friends knew that she had been at an art school.

Her thought went on: "Thank God that, too, is over; that wild, impossible dream—and that no one knows."

They went home comfortably in her limousine, comfortably to her comfortable room. Placid, quiet, comfortable.

The children were all home for their holidays, but only Harry was in the house. He sat by the thistle, looking out into the winter dark.

"Is your father back yet?"

"No, he'll be a bit late tonight," he said. "I'm glad, I rather want to talk to you."

"Do you, dear? That's nice."

"It isn't—very."

Eva Concern switched up the light, which gave a pretty artificial amber glow to the luxury, the comfort, the ease.

"Why, Harry, what's the matter?"

She sensed that Harry, kind, ordinary, dutiful Harry, was in trouble. Queer. Trouble had never been associated with Harry as child, boy, or youth. Looking at him Eva thought, "He's a man now." She had scarcely realized that before.

He was standing beside the thistle, thick set, reliable, pleasant, like Timothy. "I've come to an end," he jerked out. "I can't go on."

"Can't go on with what, Harry?" She was amazed, stunned.

"With the engineering. I can't go on."

"But, Harry, you liked it, you've done so well——"

"No, I haven't. I always hated it, and I'm a fool at it, really. Only father always took it for granted—and it seemed so obvious. I was just shoved in. And a fellow doesn't like to kick up a row. Things weren't so easy then, I didn't want to make a fuss. Thought I'd settle down, too. But I can't. It—makes me sick to the pit of my soul. I've got to get out."

Thus the apologia of Harry, delivered with a thick voice and a red face, looking so like Timothy, not really in the least like Timothy, but quite another individuality.

Eva said: "What do you want to do, Harry?"

"Paint. I've always wanted to. But I heard what father said about painters when I was a kid and I hid my things away——"

"You've been painting, Harry?"

"Yes. Little things. I saw a show yesterday, Crakenthrope's——"

"I know. I was there today."

"Well, they're good. They made me feel that I couldn't go on."

"Oh! Have you spoken to your father?"

"No, I daren't. I know what father thinks. I know what he'll say."

Eva knew, too. "Why did you tell me, Harry?"

"Thought you might speak to father. I'll have to clear, even if it means a break. You don't know what it's like, but I tell you—when it gets you."

Eva heard her own futile voice rising with the fatuous words, "I always thought you so contented, Harry."

The young man said: "I expect you've taken us all a bit for granted, mother. There's Barbara, now——"

"Barbara is a child!"

"I don't know. Seems to me one grows up pretty quickly nowadays. I don't think that Barbara's quite happy."

"I'll speak to her." Eva's voice was touched with panic now.

"And then Christopher. Of course, he's only a kid. But he's twelve——"

"Harry, what do you mean? What could possibly be the matter with Christopher?"

Harry flushed deeper, but stuck doggedly to his point. "Father and you are absorbed in your own affairs, of course; you don't seem to notice things—but poor old Christopher isn't quite straight——"

Oh, grotesque! Oh, monstrous! "Absurd, Harry, absurd."

He looked at her kindly, meekly, but with judgment. "I dare say, it does all seem absurd to you, mother. You're so serene." He said it as if it was a great compliment. "Nothing's ever happened to you, either. You can't quite understand."

"Can't I, Harry?"

"Well," still with admiration, "it must be difficult for you to get it—temptation, all that sort of thing—"

"Do you think that I'm perfect, Harry?"

"I expect you are, really. That's what makes it so difficult."

He looked at her candidly, and all her secret life mocked bitterly at her; how carefully she must have played her part of sweet negation; how little Harry knew of her, or she of Harry.

In her bewilderment she played for time. "Don't do anything at once, Harry—put up with it a little longer. I shall have to try and think about it. It's been a great surprise."

"All right. But you'll speak to father?"

"Oh, Harry—I'll try to—but give me a little time."

"I'm sorry. I wouldn't have spoken if I hadn't been—well, all out."

With elaborate carelessness Harry left the room.

Eva Concern's startled mind darted to Barbara, to Christopher. Barbara was out to a dinner and dance; she would not be in till late. Christopher was staying with school friends; he would not be back till tomorrow. Eva felt suddenly isolated from both of them, not only momentarily but as if she had been all her life cut off from them; she had thought of them always as just her children—happy, ordinary children who had been no trouble.

And how had they thought of her?—as a happy, ordinary mother, so "good" that you couldn't "tell things" to her placid simplicity.

The return of Timothy scattered the nightmare that had settled on Eva. Timothy was so cheerful, so stable, so completely sure that everything was normal, settled, and comfortable.

Of course, Harry had just spoken out of a mood; young people were like that; probably he would never mention the matter again. He had been so easy and jolly with his father at dinner.

But Eva waited up for Barbara that evening—a thing she had never done before, a thing there was no need to do in a house with good maids and electric heating—and with a sensible girl like Barbara, who always came home escorted by a gay family party. But tonight Eva pretended to go to bed to prevent any questions from Timothy, then got up again and waited for her daughter. She felt oddly shy, strangely foolish, utterly disturbed. And yet——

She kept telling herself that there was absolutely nothing in it. She heard the motor stop, the brisk, noisy good nights, the young laughter. Why, of course it was all right; everything was all right. From her own room she heard the girl run upstairs and then close her door.

"As I'm up," thought Eva, "I'll go in and say good night." She crossed the corridor, tapped at Barbara's door, and went in. The girl was standing with her rose colored cloak on, flushed and startled.

"Oh, it's you, mother! I couldn't think who—why, you didn't wait up for me."

"No, not exactly. I expect there's some supper in the chafing dish——"

"I don't want any. Mother, nothing is the matter, is there?" She had dropped her cloak now, a woman, not a girl; she was leaving school next term.

Eva sat down on the little couch by the glowing rods of light against the copper screen that formed the fire. "I don't know if there is anything wrong, Barbara."

The girl sank into a chair; her frock was a whisk of spangles and fluff, her arms and shoulders looked of almost foolish delicacy, but the small, clear face was vivid and vital, her expression was neither frivolous nor futile. She looked, Eva thought, tired despite her flush.

"Harry's been speaking to me. I must say it bothered me."

Barbara's eyes narrowed; she spoke in a tone which Eva had never heard her use before.

"Been speaking about me?"

She had betrayed herself; there was something wrong. Something wrong.

"No, about himself. But he did say, about you, that you weren't quite happy."

"Poor old Harry! He's such a good sort. I wish you'd get him out of that rotten engineering——"

"Then you know all about it, Barbara?"

"Yes, Harry and I are good friends."

"But haven't I been a good friend to both of you?"

"Of course."

"Well, then, why don't you tell me these things?"

"It's different. I don't think you'd understand—you're so different—one doesn't feel you've ever had trouble, nor temptation."

Just what Harry had said—this was the result of her long suppression!

Eva said: "How queer of you to say that, Barbara. One doesn't talk of the things that have happened to one—the secret things. It is awful to me to be shut out. I thought that you were both so happy."

"It isn't your fault that we're not."

"You're not, then?" It was a cry from Eva; the girl averted her face. "Barbara, what is wrong?"

"I don't want to speak of it—I wish that Harry hadn't said anything. It's a shame to worry you."

"It worries me more to think I'm shut out."

"I couldn't tell you."

"Have you told Harry?"

"Oh, Harry's different."

"He isn't." Eva was vehement, as if she were defending herself. "I wanted to be an artist—just like Harry does——"

"You, mother?"

"Yes, but I was timid—and distracted. I've been ashamed to tell any one, even your father."

"How queer, mother." Barbara gazed at her with curiosity. "Then you'll get Harry off the engineering?"

"I'll try—but you?"

The girl rose. "It isn't wanting to be an artist that's the matter with me," she said bitterly.

Eva rose also. "Don't frighten me, Barbara."

"That's it," flashed the girl, "frighten you! I won't say anything. I'm all right."

"I didn't mean frighten," pleaded Eva. "I meant don't keep me in suspense. I must have been very stupid and inadequate, but don't think I couldn't understand—whatever it was."

Before her desperate sincerity the girl relented; she, too, was near the

Ed Wynn's Question Box :: :: —BY— ED WYNN

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I am a boy 12 years of age and have just entered an essay competition. There are two subjects to be written about, one is "Grasshopper" and the other is "Grasswidow." Are these subjects alike or are they different, and why? Sincerely—X. AMPLE.

Answer:—They are exactly alike because they'll both jump at the first chance.

* * * *

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I read in this morning's paper that congress is trying to put through a bill to compel the government to have nothing but female clerks in the postoffice. Do you think congress is right? Yours truly — GENERAL LEE VOTE-TWICE.

Answer:—Absolutely. Congress has found out that women know how to handle the "males."

* * * *

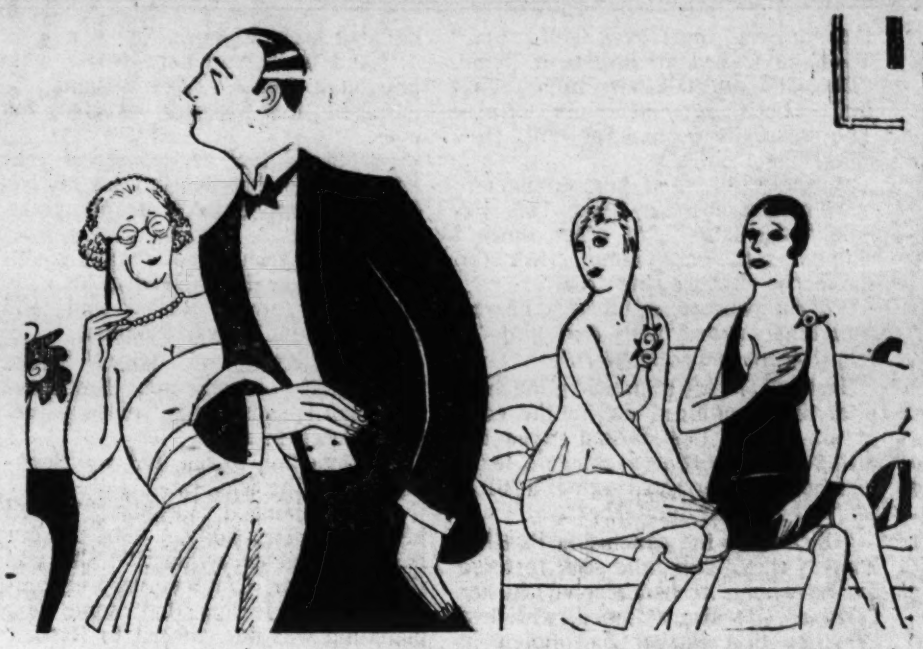

Dear Mr. Wynn:—There is a chap in my class at college about 22 years of age and he has the most peculiar habit I have ever seen. Whenever I look at him he always has something on his nose, for instance, one minute he is juggling a feather on his nose, at another time he'll be strumming a tune on the bridge of his nose with the tips of his fingers. Can you tell me what in the world his idea is? Yours truly—AL. LOOMNUS.

Answer:—He must be one of those fellows who likes to have fun "on his own hook."

* * * *

Dear Mr. Wynn:—Is it true that everything that goes up must come down? Sincerely—D. POSITOR.

Answer:—Everything that goes up does come down excepting a "bank."

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I have read a great deal about beauty doctors and so-called face lifters. Can you tell me the best way for an aging woman to keep "her good looking youth?" Truly yours—B. U. TEEFULL.

Answer:—The best way for a woman to keep her "youth" is, not to introduce "him" to any other women.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I am president of a debating society, and on next Saturday we are to debate the following subject, "Who Do the Silliest Things, Men or Women?" It would help us considerably if you would tell me the silliest thing you ever say a man do, will you tell me? Yours truly—OPHELIA SORESPOT.

Answer:—The silliest thing I ever saw a man do was one day in the post-office. I saw this man wait around for two hours and the minute he saw the postal clerk turn his back, he pushed four letters into the box, without stamps, thinking he was saving the postage.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—Would you be kind enough to settle an argument between my wife and me. I say a person with great talent and a genius are one and the same thing, while my wife says there is a vast difference between the two. Please tell me why? Yours truly—WRIGHT ING-PAD.

Answer:—Your wife is right. The difference between talent and genius is that talent gets paid every Saturday.

* * * *

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I have a very dear friend, a Scotchman, who has just gone back to Scotland. I happen to know that he would never spend his own money to go back yet he has gone. How do you think he got back? Yours truly — TOM KATT.

Answer:—Your friend most likely heard some one sing "The Blue-Bells of Scotland" and it carried him back.

* * * *

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I know a lady who never got married and she is now 42 years old. I asked her why she hadn't married and she said: "Why should I get married as long as I have a parrot and a monkey?" What did she mean by that? Sincerely—ROME E. OHE.

Answer:—Probably her parrot swears and her monkey chews tobacco and she figures therefore she doesn't need a husband.

* * * *

Dear Mr. Wynn:—My father says he washes his eyes out every night before going to bed. If this is true how does he get them back in again? Sincerely—I. LIDD.

For Players of Whist :: :: —BY— A. R. METCALF

FIRST tricks are most important in a large percentage of deals. A player of average ability is apt to play perfunctorily at the beginning, with the result that when he really begins to work hard, he finds his opportunity has gone by. Not many players, however, would have been capable of the brilliant coup which was played at a downtown club recently, as illustrated in the first of the deals which follows:

West secured a small slam.

The dealer had a difficult problem to solve at the first trick. He could, of course, play as most players, allowing the ten of hearts to hold the first trick and taking the finesse in the diamond suit. If the finesse lost it would create a reentry in dummy for the last three clubs after the declarer had got rid of the ace, king in his own hand. There was one fatal flaw in this plan of attack.

Should the declarer lose the diamond finesse it would be impossible for North to again lead hearts up to the ace, queen in the declarer's own hand. The heart situation would compel a switch on the part of North, and the only possible suit to which he could switch was spades, the suit which the declarer feared.

Playing in the usual manner, the declarer would have made but one odd in the deal. But this declarer was of better caliber and saw a beautiful opportunity to establish both diamonds and clubs and at the same time eliminate the danger of a switch by the opponents to the deadly suit of spades. Although dummy already had held the first trick in hearts, the declarer overtook the trick with a queen, making it perfectly evident to players at the table that the ace solace remained with the declarer.

At trick five there seemed every reason for North to continue the heart suit, of which the duece and they both were missing on the first lead, indicating that South had a holding of five small hearts originally. The rest of the tricks were easy for the declarer.

The final trick with the deuce of Hearts was certain. The conviction created at trick one after the play of the queen of hearts that the declarer had only two hearts originally was too strong to be changed by any subsequent play during that deal.

Crossed Wires — A Fascinating New Serial — By John T. McCutcheon

INSTALLMENT XXII.

Mr. Crayton Visits Rasher.

MR. CRAYTON, having dropped a bombshell at the feet of his wife and Count de Barsac, paused long enough to enjoy the effect and then, seizing Virginia's arm, he marched her briskly out of the hotel.

"Well, father, you certainly spilled a lot of beans that time," remarked Virginia. "I wish I could have stayed to hear mother try to laugh that off."

"Your mother," he observed cheerfully, "is a most estimable woman most of the time, Ginny, but just now she is obsessed with the dream of making you a countess. A very foolish notion, of course, but she isn't the first foolish mother to feel that way. I thought it was time to jar her loose from that idea."

"And so you invented the snappy idea of me being interested in our chauffeur?"

He looked sharply at her. There was a twinkle in his eyes.

"Wasn't it a pretty good guess? Now, just between us girls, Virginia, haven't you been working up a little romantic interest in this young man?"

Virginia squeezed his arm. "You're a nice old dear," she exclaimed. "And supposing I have?" The question was lightly put, but she awaited with real concern the answer to it. Perhaps he sensed the deeper significance that lay beneath her words, for he thought a moment before answering.

"Well, it's this way, Ginny," he said slowly. "I know this young man and I confess I rather like him. He's all right in his way, but I think you can do better than marry a chauffeur. There isn't much of a future ahead of him, you'll have to admit."

"But father, supposing I did like him—a good deal—couldn't you help him along? You with all your influence and power."

His face sobered. "To tell the truth, Virginia, just at this moment I don't know how long that influence and power may last. I've gotten myself pretty deeply involved in a big deal. It was going along fine while we were abroad and we expected to clean up this spring. Then along comes this big financial slump and now I've got my back to the wall. I think I'll weather it"—here his hands clenched aggressively — "but you never can tell. I've borrowed up to the limit and must have still more." Then he waved an impatient hand. "But let's not talk any more about that. Let's get at your affairs. They're really more important. How about the Count?"

Virginia shrugged her shoulders.

"There are times when he's likable," she said. "At other times I simply can't bear him. He's too suave; he doesn't ring true."

"Right you are, my dear. There's something wrong with that bird. I felt it from the very start."

Instead of going direct to the hospital they continued out to the edge of the town. They talked gayly, the father by indirection seeking to learn just how deeply his daughter's interest was enlisted in Rasher.

He came to the conclusion that her interest was a romantic one, fostered by the wound he had received in her defense. He also assumed, with less evidence that Rasher had fallen in love with her and would endeavor in every possible way to delay the start home until he could safely leave the hospital and resume the driving of the car. Mr. Crayton resolved to defeat his purpose. Further association with his daughter must be avoided. Rasher had already fulfilled the function for which he had been employed. He had diverted Virginia's thoughts from Count de Barsac.

With this purpose in mind, they entered the hospital and were shown to Rasher's room. The invalid greeted Mr. Crayton pleasantly and under the latter's persistent questions related the story of the holdup and of his wound. In Mr. Crayton's mind arose the thought that the boy, even though with the best of intentions, had acted foolishly.

"I suppose it was rather foolish of me," Rasher startled him by saying, "but I had to do it. I couldn't stand by and see that miserable crook hurting your daughter."

"It was splendid," Mr. Crayton exclaimed, and in the real admiration he felt an awkward thought intruded. It was going to require real diplomacy to end this affair without terribly hurting the boy's feelings. However, it must be done. He cleared his throat to speak.

"I suppose, Mr. Crayton," continued Rasher, "you are annoyed by this delay, so I have arranged for a substitute to take my place. When I found I could not leave here for three or four days I sent for one. He is here. I can vouch for him. Your car can leave at once."

"And leave you here—after what you have done?" cried Virginia, so earnestly that Rasher averted her eyes.

"I should feel very badly if your trip were further delayed on my account—although I am deeply grateful."

Mr. Crayton was mopping his brow. Perplexity showed in his face. It was as though Rasher had read his mind, and he was ashamed.

"I can come on later," added Rasher, "if you want me. But if the new man is satisfactory you may prefer to keep him."

Virginia had arisen and was looking out of the window.

"How about it, Virginia?" asked her father unsteadily. "Mr. Rasher has arranged everything." She was silent, and Mr. Crayton, very uncomfortable and feeling that some explanation was due, turned to Rasher. "I'm sorry we must go and I'm afraid we'll have to start at once. I happen to be involved in a business deal which is just now at a very critical stage."

Rasher nodded pleasantly. "Well, I hope it turns out all right," he said. "You helped me by giving me a job and I wish I could help you."

Crayton laughed dryly. "Thank you, my boy, I guess it's a little beyond you, unless," he added ironically, "you could find time to stroll into 2300 Wall street, and have them honor my check for a trifle of six hundred thousand." He arose, his face very sober. Rasher noted new lines of worry. Crayton swept his hand across his brow and then with a forced effort at gayety shook Rasher's hand. "I'll arrange about your expenses here and leave you a month's pay. Write me when you are able to be up and around."

Turning to Virginia, "Come on, Ginny; say good-by. We've got to be starting." He then stalked briskly out of the room, leaving them alone. She turned swiftly to Rasher.

"Do you want me to go?" she asked.

"Yes, you'd better go," he answered. "Your father wants you to."

"But do you WANT me to?"

There was a long pause.

"Yes."

Without another word she left the room. Seeing her so soon surprised Mr. Crayton, who was expecting a more prolonged parting. and who, with a wave of sympathetic consideration, had left her behind for that very purpose.

"Come on, father," she said wearily. "I'm ready to go."

Mr. Crayton, deeply mystified, withheld comment. He had achieved his purpose, and instead of feeling pleased he was conscious that his victory had left him wretchedly uncomfortable in his mind.

After they had departed the door to Rasher's room opened and a tall young man in the uniform of a chauffeur entered.

"So they're gone," he remarked cheerfully, sitting down on Rasher's bed.

"Yep, they're gone," responded Rasher, "and you're going with them."

"So be it, as Paris remarked to Helen, the third afternoon of the siege of Troy. And what am I to do besides run their chariot for them?"

"That's all, Dick. Chauf them home, and when they speak to you touch your cap and say 'Yes, madam,' or 'Yes, sir.'"

"Not 'aye, aye, sir'?"

"No; you're not on your yacht now. You're just a cringing worm who must take orders."

"Yes, sir; very good, sir; thank you, sir. I'll do this for you, Hank, but I've got to be back in New York in two weeks. I've got a date with the queen of the world, and not even for friendship for you shall I keep her waiting."

Rasher was writing on a scrap of paper.

"Send this wire, Dick, and try to delay leaving town until tomorrow morning."

Dick glanced at the written words, whistled, and rolled his eyes upward. "Absolutely looney," he murmured, and departed for the telegraph office.

By the various devices Richard Wellborne, alias Dick Wells, the new chauffeur, succeeded in inventing mechanical reasons why the Crayton car could not leave until the following morning. When he reported thus to Mr. Crayton he was in an unspeakably dirty suit of dungarees, with oil and grease smeared over his face and hands.

It was natural that Mr. Crayton, under these circumstances, failed to note the physical qualities that had won for young Mr. Wellborne the distinction of being the best looking man in his class at Harvard.

Broadway Banter :: :: —By— FORNEY WYLY

THE past year has been notable in the number of sensational alliances and misalliances it has brought forth. That charming young matron, "Peaches" Browning and her not-so-young husband, "Bunny," have been greatly instrumental in causing the servant girl set to find that the front pages of newspapers are not always boring. It was, of course, during the past year that Ellen Mackay snapped her fingers in society's outraged face and married Irving Berlin. Then, too, it wasn't so long ago that Constance Bennett, who had been dabbling in the movies for a while, gathered millions under her wing by marrying Phil Plant. There was another colorful marriage muchly in the press during the last year, but one far too "colorful" to be discussed in such a refined column as this one. Although Millicent Rogers was married to Count Salm sometime back, she has flatly refused during the past year to stay out of print and ever so often she or her husband does something which gets them on the coveted front page. Gloria Gould evidently considered her husband a drag on her career and the last I heard of her she was being operated on for him. Rumor has it that Peggy Hopkins Joyce, who hasn't been married for at least six months is just before annexing her who-knows-what-number husband. That sixty-year-old incorrigible, Edna Wallace Hopper, has decided she is now old enough to marry again, and at last accounts was planning to wed a seventy-year-old boy she met in France.

Obviously the unusual thing is not to have anything sensational about your matrimonial affairs. After the Stillmans saw everybody else was going in for hectic marriage careers, they decided there wasn't any point in their staying apart, and so they went back together again. I'll bet the one victrola record in all the world not to be found in the Stillmans' collection is the "Indian Love Call."

It occurs to me Atlanta is becoming just a wee bit lax about making New York appearances, or else you've seen me first. True, a sturdy knot of Atlanfans—Nell Sims, Henry Walker Bagley and Jack Cohen, Jr. —tell me that as they sat talking (at once) in the lobby of the Biltmore recently, they did see James H. Nunnally pass. Time was, however, when you could stamp Atlanta people in the lobby of this hotel like you could Fords on Peachtree, that is, of course, if you go in for that sort of thing. I trust this gentle little rebuke will be taken in quite the right spirit and that at an early date, I may report a better and bigger attendance of "Atlanta in New York." What is there now left for us to do but sing "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean?"

"The Song of the Flame" is undoubtedly reminiscent of "The Vagabond King." However, I had much rather see a play follow the lines of another good one, than try to be original in an unattractive way. This production is very clearly a musical play which took more interest in its chorus' voices than in their legs. I saw no far-famed beauties in "The Song of the Flame." In fact, this is one of the very few musical offerings in town which doesn't claim to have in its cast, "the most beautiful girl in America." It seems "the most beautiful girl in America" is in three separate and distinct shows, which probably means she isn't in any of them, but is embroidering bow-knots on shirt-waists in some dimly-lighted attic. I've been seeing too many movies lately.

In the event you didn't know it, "Valencia" from "The Great Temptations" is the most popular dance piece in town. In fact, after it became the rage it has, the Shuberts decided to use it not only in "The Temptations" but also in their newest offspring, "The Merry World," which you're in for being told about next week. It is quite alright to be caught whistling "Mountain Greenery," from the "Garrick Gaieties," these days, and "Key to Heaven" from the same show is being played everywhere. Both "The Girl Friend" and "Blue Room" from "The Girl Friend" are tremendously popular at the moment. "No Foolin'" is being played with dismaying frequency at all of the night clubs.

"At Mrs. Beams" is the final and incidentally the most popular Theater Guild play of the year. This priceless comedy takes place in an English boarding house, where the

Whittemore Faces Justice—No. 26

Candy Kid May Reach End of Criminal Career

THE curtain of oblivion is dropping slowly, inevitably, on the murder-spangled career of Richard Reese Whittemore.

For now the former altar boy, who as a youth in flowing cassock, murmured his Ave Marias beneath the pulpit of a Baltimore church, is on trial only a few blocks from that church for murder in the first degree.

Whittemore, 28 and dandy, readily admitted the killing of Robert H. Holtman, a 60-year-old guard in Maryland state penitentiary, the crime for which he is being tried.

"It was his life or mine," he says with no show of concern or remorse. "I was in for a long bit—sixteen years. This guy was a brute. He slugged me when he was taking me to the prison hospital. I picked up a pipe and defended myself. That's all. They can't hang a man for answering the instinct of self-preservation."

Guard His Friend.

All very glib, very plausible. But State's Attorney Herbert O'Conor, who is trying to wind the noose around the neck of the Candy Kid, as Whittemore is known in the underworld, will tell a different story to judge and jury.

O'Conor accuses the Candy Kid of slugging Holtman, a man who had been his friend while he was serving a previous term. The state's attorney charges Whittemore with mashing in the skull of the aged keeper while his victim lay prostrate in the prison yard.

And O'Conor claims that on the fatal day, February 20, 1925, Whittemore, the assassin, robbed the dead body of Holtman of money, keys and a revolver and fled from the prison, ready to kill again to preserve his new-found liberty.

The Candy Kid was taken by Detectives John Cronin and Walter Sullivan of New York police headquarters in the misty dawn of last March 19, after a bullet-spattered automobile chase.

His gang—the Kraemer brothers Jake and Leon; Milton (Shuffles) Goldberg, Anthony Paladino, Baltimore Willie Unkelback and his wife, Margaret, whom police of a dozen cities call the Tiger Girl—were rounded up within the next few days.

For two days the Whittemore mob remained obdurate and silent before the barrage of questions hurled at them by the detectives of Chief Inspector Coughlin's squad.

Then Tony Paladino broke, and the tale he unfolded—a tale replete with blood and murder and daylight raids—laid bare a system of organized robbery on a large scale, so cunningly conceived and so cleverly carried out that District Attorney Joab H. Banton refused to make the confession public.

"The Paladino confession is the most remarkable criminal document that has ever come to my attention," Banton said. "The system that Whittemore and the Kraemers worked out to aid them in preying on society is closer to being arrest-proof than any I have ever heard of. I cannot take the public into my confidence."

Six Murders.

But a deleted copy of the confession was smuggled out of the criminal courts building, and interviews the writer has had with various members of the gang, principally Whittemore, fill in the gaps.

Ten robberies committed in Greater New York within the last year netted the Candy Kid and his cohorts close to $1,000,000. Not one cent of this booty has been returned.

And the confessions of both Paladino and Unkelback, who squealed on the gang leader to lighten his own sentence, linked Whittemore with three murders. These three, coupled with the killing of Holtman and the murder of two Bank of Buffalo guards—a crime for which an up state jury failed to convict him several weeks ago after deliberating 29 hours—brought the score of murder accusations against the Candy Kid to six in a single year.

Chicago Tommy Langrella, Whittemore's pal, was shot to death last September in Newark, N. J. He had quarreled with the Candy Kid.

The body of Simon Gilden was found riddled with slugs, slumped against the wall of Trinity church on the morning of last December 22. He had incurred the enmity of Whittemore.

Early in the month Joseph Ross, a bootlegger and former friend of Whittemore, was found slain in Elizabeth, N. J.

Robbery List.

Then there were Holtman and the bank guards—Louis Yarrington and Charles W. Clifford—all dead—all murdered.

Of the murders of the three former Whittemore gang members, Baltimore Willie Unkelback said in police headquarters: "Whittemore murdered them in his usual ruthless manner."

And here is a list of robberies that Whittemore, with the aid of his gang, prepetrated here, within the last year, to the despair of the entire New York police force—"in his usual ruthless manner":

Albert S. Goodvis and Emmanuel S. Veerman, jewelers, 5th avenue and 48th street, January 11, 1926, unset diamonds..	$170,000
Jacques Ross, jeweler, May 9, 1925, gems.....	100,000
R. M. Ernst, jeweler, December 2, 1925, gems..	25,000
Folmer Prip, jeweler, December 23, 1925, gems.	6,100
Samuel Kandle, jeweler, March 14, 1926, gems..	110,000
John B. Sanford, jewelry salesman, October 19, 1925, gems	50,000
David Peck, jeweler, September 14, 1925, gems.	45,000
Mrs. Mary Linherr, jeweler, October 5, 1925, gems.	60,000
Stanley Jewelry company, July 16, 1925	75,000
William H. Simms company, jewelers, September 4, 1925	75,000

The Whittemore gang received $77,000 for the Goodvis diamonds, which is a price that gem experts say could only be brought from a fence for about $465,000 worth of jewels.

Criminologists all over the world have hearkened to the saga of Richard Reese Whittemore. How did he get away with it? How did he manage to escape the fate of thousands before him who lived and died by the gun?

Let Tony Paladino talk to us about the Candy Kid in his own laconic fashion.

Tony's Story.

"The first time I met Whittemore since I came out from the El (meaning Elmira reformatory) some time in May, 1925, he asked me: 'How are you—how are you feeling?' Well, anyway, about two days later he came around the neighborhood, Mulberry and Bayard streets, and Whittemore, Joe Goldberg, who is Milton Goldberg, now arrested, and Willie Rogers, alias Unkelback, took me to the St. George hotel, Brooklyn. I slept with them all night."

Paladino leaned back in a big armchair in the home of Assistant District Attorney Charles J. Garrison as he told his amazing story, which he later wrote out. The time was a little after midnight on March 22.

"Next morning we went to Grand street, New York," he continued, and me and Whittemore walked into Ross' jewelry store in Grand street and stuck up the place—and they had a Cadillac all ready—a stolen Cadillac. I got three grand ($3,000). Whittemore, Joe, Unkelback and myself all went to the Grand street jewelry store. Me and Whittemore went in. Unkelback was in the car driving and Joe was outside.

Triple Holdup.

"We held up three people. We had guns. I had a black .38 loaded, also Whittemore had a loaded gun, and I handcuffed the three people and kept them in the back room, and Whittemore collected the jewelry from the safe and from the show window, consisting of diamond rings, watches, stickpins, bracelets.

"We put the stuff in two black suitcases and made a run for the car, stopped on the corner of Walker and Baxter streets and took the suitcases up to my home at 78 Mulberry street.

"We sorted the stuff, and then Goldberg went out to get a buyer,

Police Found Smoothest Robbery System

When the police rounded up the robber band of Richard Reese Whittemore, they uncovered one of the smoothest-working and most successful criminal organization in history. Every member of the band was a specialist. No job was attempted until every preparatory detail was attended to. The police admit the gang planned its robberies so well as to make them practically arrest-proof.

And yet, for all their cleverness, the trail of these criminals has ended in prison, and Whittemore, the Candy Kid, is fighting for his life.

How the Love Pirate Tra

Lying Tales of the Bogus War Aviator That Deceived Scores of Admiring Women Into Giving the Rascal Their Money, Jewels and Kisses

BY C. DE VIDAL HUNT.

PARIS.

ROBERT LUCIEN GOURDIN, ruthless love pirate, has at last been arrested by the Paris police for abducting wealthy young girls and married women who believed he was one of the great aviator heroes of the war. Robert is twenty-four and a plumber by trade.

When the police inspectors arrested him he wore a brand new aviator's uniform. Upon his breast were the red rosette of the Legion of Honor with several foreign decorations and the French Croix de Guerre with twenty palms.

He surrendered with a smile and admitted that he had victimized at least fifty women in the past two years. His favorite pseudonyms were those of famous flying "aces" such as Pelletier Doisy, Arrachart and Marinowitch, though the latter has been dead three years.

Among the deeds of prowess that won him many hearts was the tale of his air battle with the German flyer who had killed the celebrated Guynemer. He avenged Guynemer by sending his German antagonist to certain death from a height of 12,000 feet. Not satisfied with that he had destroyed eighty-seven enemy planes in open battle, thirty-six balloons and one Zeppelin.

And in spite of Gourdin's conspicuous lack of good looks, there wasn't a girl who did not believe him, or a woman who wasn't happy to leave house and home for such a hero!

The story of this love pirate's adventures, as told by himself in his cell at the conciergerie, reads like one of those French novels that are not intended for girls' schools and therefore sell by the tens of thousands.

Robert Lucien Gourdin in the aviation uniform which he had no right to wear and adorned with his bogus decorations for heroism.

He was a clever lover, knowing exactly what to do in each case and how best to overcome a woman's scruples. The delicate procedure of getting young girls to steal their parents' money or love hungry middle-aged women to run off with their husbands' bank account was mere child's play for Gourdin.

He lived at the finest hotels in Paris and played around the fashionable resorts of Deauville and Vittel, always with plenty of money to throw away on roulette or to bet on horses. Only a few of his victims will tell the police about their experience. But it is known that wherever he went, he left a trail of broken hearts behind.

The reason he was able to dupe so many women so completely, according to his own confession, was that he never allowed his own heart to be caught. He could tell the most daring things in such a way that women were thrilled rather than offended. And he worked fast. Gourdin never waited longer than twenty-four hours before a new citadel of womanly virtue surrendered to his love making. Nor did he ever linger longer than it took to acquire all the money his victims possessed. His longer honeymoon, as he called it, lasted twenty-five days. And that was in the case of one of the most prominent actresses of Bordeaux who was finally rescued by her husband just as Gourdin had made away with 36,000 francs in cash and 65,000 francs in diamonds belonging to his victim.

It was this same husband who trailed Gourdin through ten subsequent adventures with women and then told M. L. de Donville, secretary of the Direction de la Police Judiciare, what had happened. Before ordering the adventurer's arrest, Secretary de Donville viewed a dozen photographs which the irate husband had collected along the trail of broken hearts.

Eight women were at police headquarters in the Prefecture when Gourdin was ushered into the room. It was a good thing for the love pirate that a high steel trellis separated him from the women in the room. They probably would have torn him to pieces, although Gourdin cynically urged the detectives to let the women come to him.

"They won't bite," he sneered, "and there isn't a single one in the lot who would not go through the same experience with me again, even knowing that I am a crook. You don't know women, my dear boy."

But the women, some of whom were strikingly beautiful and apparently of the best class of society, looked at him vindictively nevertheless as he challenged them to do their worst.

"The nasty love swindling pig!" cried one. "He swore he had never kissed a woman before in his life. His caresses cost me about 1,000 francs apiece."

Later in his cell Gourdin made a clean breast of his adventures.

"With the way I had with women," he said, "it would have been ridiculous to remain a plumber and live on 800 francs a month. Ease and luxury looked too beautiful to me and women were too easy. So I started out by having a fine aviator's uniform made for me by a good tailor. It cost half of my savings. Some more money went to buying decorations. I had no idea of flying, but thought the women would be more interested in aviation than in any other branch of the service.

in Gourdin's rooms after his arrest and said in Gourdin's room safter his arrest and said by the police to be one of his victims.

Another of the photographs found in Gourdin's home—inscribed "A mon petit Robert" (To my little Robert) and with the name "Blanche" scratched out.

"I was only twenty-two when I went to Paris from Rouen, but I looked like a man of thirty. I took a room in one of the big hotels in the Champs Elysees and could not believe my own senses when I saw how they fell for me. It was marvelous. It seemed as though I was the only man in the world.

"Two rich American women immediately took me under their wings. I danced with them and showed them the dives that everybody in Paris knows, but which seemed specially interesting to them because of the thrilling tales of apaches and murders I unfolded.

"The things I told them about my flying exploits during the war were so exaggerated that I never expected them to believe me, but no matter how I lied, they believed every word I said. They swallowed the stuff avidly and called for more.

"One of them spoke French quite fluently. She was dance crazy.

"'I love to dance with you,' she said, 'because you don't perspire or step on my toes!'

"She expected her husband in Paris later in the month, but when he arrived I was gone. I went to Nice where I met a girl of good family. She fell madly in love with me after hearing of my aviation record.

"All she had in cash was 8,000 francs (but I still had 15,000 or more from what the American lady had given me and could afford a cheap job. Amelie was just twenty. Two days

My honeymoon with her would not have lasted much longer anyway because the man with the biceps bobbed up one afternoon in the hotel where we were staying and behaved rather badly. He promised to kill me if only I would unlock the door of the room and let him in. His manner was so threatening that I thought best to leave by the window and take the first train back to Paris.

fter I first met her on the Promenade des Anglais, she old me she would go anywhere with me.

"'I love you,' I replied, nd therefore must not let you ome with me. Besides I have ot the means to support you s you should be supported. No, no, Amelie, it is best that ve part.'

"That same night she came o my room and put 8,000 rancs into my hand. Am I to e blamed for taking it? I ask you. If women insist on giving me money and running away with me, am I to stop them?

"I never stole a sou. If any woman believed that I loved her, that was her affair. Amelie, like many others, said that a week with me would be heaven and she would give all she had to be in my arms. The decorations on my chest worked wonders.

"I went to Monte Carlo with Amelie and spent her money in five days. On the morning of the sixth day I was on my way to Bordeaux with a beautiful woman of thirty-five and her husband. The man was twenty-eight years older than his wife, but thought he looked like a young prizefighter. One of the first things he did was to make me feel his biceps. They were hard as steel, but that did not seem to impress his wife very much. She nearly fainted when I let her feel mine.

"Anyhow, when we got to Bordeaux I stayed at a good hotel and promptly called at the house of the beautiful lady. For three hours I told her some of my flying stories and when I got to my fight with the German ace who had downed Guynemer she fell on my lap and threw her arms around me.

"They were fat arms, but there were diamond bracelets on them and a diamond-studded Swiss watch, so I didn't mind. In fact, I liked it. I used to have a pal who was Swiss and the watch remanded me of him.

"Well, my love cost the lady a little over 100,000 francs in cash and diamonds. We went away and traveled from one place to another for twenty-five days. When the cash was gone she began selling her diamond bracelets. Finally the Swiss watch went, too, and there was nothing for me to do except follow suit.

Police photograph of Gourdin, the not at all good looking French plumber who posed as a great war hero and had amazing success in swindling women.

"My honeymoon with her would not have lasted much longer anyway because the man with the biceps bobbed up one afternoon in the hotel where we were stopping and behaved rather badly. He threatened to kill me if only I would open the door of the room and let him in. His manner was so threatening that I thought best to leave by the window and take the first train back to my beloved Paris.

"Of course I had saved some of that 100,000 francs in cash and jewelry. And Paris with the tourists flocking in from England and America was the proper field for my aviation stories.

"In three months I yielded to five charming women who insisted that I take their cash together with their hearts. I had four apartments in as many sections of Paris and none of my sweethearts ever knew anything of the others. Two of them were mother and daughter. The girl was engaged to marry a wealthy merchant and the mother's husband was traveling in Sweden.

"When a married woman from Marseilles found her purse empty and the last of her jewels gone she actually planned to commit burglary to get the money needed to keep me with her a little while longer. I refused to let her carry out this plan. The crime would have brought only a few hundred francs—not enough to interest me at that stage of the game.

"One of the last of my love adventures had for its heroine the young widow of a wealthy wine merchant. Although I did fairly well with her she did not prove as profitable as I had expected because her large fortune was held in trust by a very tight-fisted old banker.

"Just when I thought I had exhausted her financial posisbilities and was preparing to leave her, she managed to induce the banker to advance another 50,000 francs. This was enough to let me consent to her accompanying me to Deauville where she had been wanting to go.

"I am afraid I made her too happy, for the dear thing fell ill two days after our arrival at the famous seashore resort and nearly died. It was a terrible ordeal. There was that 50,000 francs and nobody to spend it.

"Luckily she pointed to her purse while in a half-conscious condition and I thought she meant that I should take all the money she had and make a trip to Paris. This I promptly did. I never saw her again.

"But on several occasions I saw the Bordeaux man with the biceps. I think it was he that got the police interested in my career. The poor fool! He should thank me for what I did."

Things New and Old About the Bible :

Arguments for the Existence of God.

Rev. W. P. King

IT IS to be expected that the various arguments will overlap and shade into each other. The Cosmological argument which has been considered places stress on the doctrine of Cause, but this carries the implication of design which belongs specifically to the next argument.

I.

There is the Teleological Argument, which is also termed the Argument from Design or the Doctrine of ends.

The criticism of Kant was directed toward this as toward the other traditional arguments. In reality, however, Kant leaves this argument undisturbed, for we can readily concede all that he claims as to the insufficiency of the argument in the way of absolutely positive demonstration.

Kant writes as follows: "But although we have nothing to say against the reasonableness and utility of this line of argument, but wish, on the contrary, to commend or encourage it, we cannot approve of the claims which this proof advances to apodictic certainty, and to an approval on its own merits, requiring no favor and no help from any other quarter."

It is true, however, that Theists in the confirmation of their faith are not refusing help from other lines of argument.

Dr. W. F. Tillett in "The Paths That Lead to God" writes: "The world about us in its arrangements and adjustments reveals the unmistakable signs of mind. The relation of the earth on which we live to the sun, its revolutions around the sun, and its rotation upon its own axis, the atmosphere, the distribution of land and water, the adaptation of the soil to vegetable life and of vegetable life to sustain animal life, and lower animal life to minister to that which is higher; these are but a few of the many instances of that widespread adaptation of one thing to another, of the lower to the higher, that reigns throughout the material, vegetable and animal world, and bears every mark of the presence and influence of a designing mind upon matter, a mind that must be in matter itself, or the more reasonable supposition of being outside of the matter which gives evidence of being controlled by intelligence."

The particular form of the Argument from Design as stated by Paley is no longer possible, but this is only to say that with the enlarged idea of the universe which modern science brings, there must be an entirely different statement of the Argument from Design.

Even Darwin himself says, "The more I study nature, the more I become impressed with ever-increasing force with the conclusion that the contrivances and beautiful adaptations slowly acquired through each part occasionally varying in a slight degree but in many ways, with the preservation or natural selection of those variations which are beneficial to the organism under the complex and ever-varying conditions of life, transcend in an incomparable degree the contrivance and adaptation man could suggest with unlimited time at his disposal."

Evolution deals with the manner and not the cause of phenomena, and in reality does not disturb a larger and deeper application of the Teleological Argument. A noted scientist says, "Organism may be evolved in an orderly manner, stage after stage towards a foreseen goal, and the broad picture of the course may show the unmistakable impress of divine volition."

The slow and gradual process as held by evolution in no wise militates against the presence of the designing mind. The traditional idea of design which belonged to the old conception of a direct, and immediate creational process is forever gone. But the wider teleology which belongs to the hypothesis of evolution still discerns in the evolving process however wide its range and however far it extends back in time, sees in the order and adaptation of the world the stamp of intelligent direction.

The old form of the teleological argument easily saw the evidence of design in the present adaptation of different objects, with the presumption that these objects have always been as they now are.

It also fell into a false interpretation of "special providence" and if a lightning stroke killed a bad man, it was in accordance with design, and if it killed a good man no attempt was made at interpretation.

The new form of teleological argument makes no such easy and one-sided attempt at an interpretation of providence. And also with the idea of a gradual and continuous change it sees the evidence of design in the power that is gradually producing correspondences and adaptations. But whatever our theory we are inevitably shut up to a choice between chance and purpose.

The first has no note of hope.

"The world rolls round forever like a mill,
It grinds out death and life and good and ill,
It has no purpose, heart, or mind or will."

The world is the mere sport of the reckless and blind forces of chance,

"A tale
Told by an idiot, full of sound and fury,
Signifying nothing."

Against this darkness of a world of pessimism, the two pioneer evolutionists speak.

Charles Darwin said, "If we consider the whole universe, the mind refuses to look at it as the outcome of chance."

Alfred Russell Wallace wrote: "The world is a manifestation of creative power, directive mind and ultimate purpose."

We do not have the easy solution of the world and world processes as belonged to other times, but we may be secure in the faith that,

"This world's no blot or blank
To us; it means intensely and means good.
To mind its meaning is my meat and drink."

Archbishop Tillotson wrote, "How often might a man after he had jumbled a set of letters together in a bag, fling them out upon the ground before they would fall into an exact poem, yea, or so much as make a good discourse in prose? And may not a little book be as easily made by chance as this great volume of the world? How long might a man be sprinkling colors upon canvas with a careless hand before they would happen to make the exact picture of a man? And is a man easier made by chance than his picture? How long might twenty thousand blind men, which should be sent from the several remote parts of England, wander up and down before they would all meet upon Salisbury Plain, and fall into rank and file in the exact order of an army?

And yet this is much more easy to be imagined than that the innumerable blind parts of matter should rendezvous themselves into a world.

To the same effect Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick writes: "Can it be that this intelligible world readable by mind, is itself essentially mindless? As easily believe that the notes of Wagner's operas were accidentally blown together by a whirlwind and yet are playable by man. Therefore the Theist believes the earth to be rational; he takes mind as he has known it in himself, and lifting it as high as he can reach, cries, "God is most like that."

The World's Greatest Pictures

"BACCHUS, OR THE DRINKERS" :: By VELASQUEZ

This is the nineteenth of a series of 52 greatest paintings, which represent the choice of art directors throughout North America. Reproduction of this art masterpiece appears in today's rotagravure section of The Constitution.

BY EUGENE P. CONLEY.

In the realm of art as "a painter's painter," Velasquez (pronounced Vay-lahs-keth) stands out like an evening star on the horizon. His sweeping style and the ease with which he blended the colors inspired others to make the most of their talent.

"Bacchus, or the Drinkers," also known as "The Topers," the pride of The Prado at Madrid, is recognized as his greatest contribution to art. The scene is characteristically Bacchanalian, showing the immortal wine-god enthroned on a cask dispensing his stock as befits the dignity of his office to the group around him. "No brush," says Gautier, referring to this painting, "has modeled flesh more finely, nor made it seem so living."

The artist was just turning thirty years when this painting was finished. It was just about this time that Rubens paid a visit to Spain. Watching Velasquez work one day, Rubens dropped this remark: "Velasquez will never become a great painter, because he doesn't stand close enough to follow the fine brush strokes." He had never seen a painter's brush with a handle ten feet long. Things we regard as impossible are called supernatural, and then when the impossible is mastered we transfer it to the natural binder.

The artistic sixteenth century had just six more months to run its course when Diego Velasquez was born in Seville, Spain. During Diego's boyhood the father had thoughts of making a lawyer of him, declaring it a waste of time to be drawing pictures. Said the good Bishop of London: "If Darwin would become a theologian instead of making scientific observations of nature, he might amount to something."

The mother encouraged the son in his work. Call it instinct if you wish—she knew he would become a great painter. Mothers have a way of knowing. At the age of fourteen, the boy, Diego, began the study of art in all earnest. During the five years he studied under Pacheco, he broke every rule and principle taught by the teacher; but his dash and style pleased Pacheco, and then again, the teacher had a daughter on his hands the same age as his brilliant pupil. Although Pacheco was a great painter himself posterity knows him because of his success as a match-maker. Velasquez and Juana were married in their nineteenth year.

In 1621, just two months after the Mayflower landed at Plymouth, we find Velasquez in Madrid, ambitious to become identified as a court painter. His letters of introduction failed to make the opportunity, so he decided to stay there and paint, and let the quality of his work make the opening. A few months later Philip IV., youthful ruler of Spain, sent for him, and thus at the early age of twenty-three Velasquez realized his ambition. For the next thirty-eight years, or until the painter's death, these two remained great friends.

In his sixty-first year, Velasquez died, being stricken with a tertian fever which caused him to suffer much pain for nearly a month until death brought him peace.

breaking point of nerves and control.

"I'm in love, that's all."

A schoolgirl! Eighteen! But how old had she been the first time? Less.

"There's nothing so dreadful in that." Eva's lips quivered. "Of course, you're young——"

"Young! I'm alive. I'm grown up."

"Well, darling—why didn't you tell me?"

"He's married. I thought that you wouldn't like that," jerked out the girl, agitated but without either defiance or shame.

Eva was rigid with shock, yet stronger even than the shock was her desire to conceal it, and under all a certain wonder at her own horror. When this had happened to her it had not seemed dreadful or terrible—why had she always regarded Barbara as immaculate?

"No, I don't like it," she said quietly, "but perhaps I'll be able to help you."

The girl seemed relieved at this absence of emotion; her cold tension slightly relaxed. "I'm afraid that you can't—no one could; we're in a fix."

"We?" Hardly could Eva keep the panic out of her voice. "He's spoken then?"

"Of course. You don't think that this is just a romance, do you mother?" asked the girl bitterly. "It's real—and awful."

"Who is it?"

"I don't suppose I ought to tell you. It would make it awkward for you to let him come to the house."

Come to the house! Some one they knew! This clandestine intrigue going on under the eyes of all of them!

Eva had to shade her face with her hand as she answered: "Has he written to you? Been to see you at school—taken you out?"

"Yes. It seems so silly that I should be at school."

"You had better not go back—you had better go away," said Eva dully. "Why didn't you let me know before?"

"I thought that you'd hate it. You always seemed so—remote. You see, to me it isn't sordid nor ugly. But to you I thought it might be."

"Then where is the trouble? You said that it was awful."

Barbara answered unexpectedly: "It is his wife. She's a good sort. I like her—it isn't her fault. She's been awfully decent to me. One wants to be straight."

Eva gasped—as one who had been stifling and suddenly feels the fresh air rush into the lungs. Barbara wanted to be "straight."

She, too, in her time had been "straight," but not from any abstract love of straightness, but because she was afraid. Barbara was better than she had been.

"So you're going to—cut it?"

"I'm trying." The little clear face looked distorted.

"I'll help. Won't you let me help?"

"Oh, mother—you're jolly good. I never meant to tell you—it seems a shame. But I expect I'm tired."

In her heart Eva was saying, "My baby, my baby." Aloud she said: "Go to bed now, dear, don't worry. We'll fight it through together."

"Father mustn't know."

"Of course not." That sounded ugly; a deliberate deception of Timothy; but not for the first time; she had deliberately deceived him all her life, as to her emotional experiences.

And thinking of this she said: "I've got to help you and Harry—and Christopher? It sounds so silly, but Harry said——"

"Harry's been talking of Christopher?"

"Yes—is—there anything in it? There can't be—a child."

Barbara said slowly, staring into the dazzling rods of the electric fire: "I think Christopher wants help, too—he's a jolly kid but—Harry's worried about him."

"What does he do? What do you mean?"

"He's sly, not truthful. Harry's hushed up one or two rows. It makes us mad to see how he takes you and father in. I think you ought to know, so that you could tell father. Neither of us likes to tell father."

Eva was seeing Christopher in a woolly suit flying round a garden looking like an animated rose; only a few years ago. She asked quickly: "What has he done?"

"Well, he takes things. He had my little necklace I pretended I'd lost. And some money out of Harry's pocket. I'm sorry, mother."

Eva rose. "I'm tired, too. I'll go to bed.. It's fearfully late."

"Yes. It's fearfully late—for you, I know. I generally sit up a bit. I don't sleep so well."

Eva did not dare kiss her; she felt that if she did they would both weep and weep and never let each other go.

"I'll talk to you in the morning. We'll talk about it all in the morning."

"Yes. I'm glad that you know. I hope I haven't bothered you—I'm glad you know."

"Good night, Babs, don't worry."

"Good night, mother. I'm all right."

Eva went back to her room; the pale lamp was alight by the bedside, all the comfort and luxury was revealed—blasted.

She opened an inner door and peeped into the darkness where Timothy slept, so comfortable, peaceful and righteous; these misfortunes had nothing to do with him, nor would they ever be told to him save they revealed by open disaster; they came through her and she would have to deal with them.

Eva closed the door. Always had been this gently closed door between herself and Timothy. She sat down by the bed. Just when she thought that it was all over, that she was safely in harbor—how crazy that thought had been. There was no harbor save death.

All to do over again—Barbara's illicit passion, Harry's misplaced career, Christopher's crookedness—her own illicit passion, her own misplaced career, her own crookedness, all coming out in her children.

All the things she had suppressed, denied, hidden in herself coming to light in them, all the old battles to fight over again.

No end. No end. She thought of the dry, dead thistle to which she had compared herself—safe, graceful, finished.

How foolish was the simile. That withered coronal had been full of flying seed that had been wafted away into the air, and all over the fields were young thistles, green, fresh, vigorous, and exposed to all the disasters the open way holds for youth.

Whittemore Faces Justice

and me and Whittemore went to the St. George hotel with the stuff in a cab and waited for Joe with the buyer. (Buyer's name deleted.) Unkelback drove the car to South street, left it there, and joined us. We argued about a price when the buyer came; finally he offered twelve grand and Whittemore took the money."

The Kraemer brothers come into the tale of Paladino a little later in his confession. No precautions against arrest were taken in the Ross job. The four gunmen merely thought the jewelry store a likely place to rob, tried it, and got away with it.

But the Kraemers did away with all this uncertainty.

These brothers from Warsaw, who brought to this country the "can-opener" system of safe robbery, participated in nine of the ten local Whittemore robberies and planned the subsequent crimes of the gang much as a general staff plans the next move of an army.

Jake Kraemer, a shrewd-eyed, evil-faced criminal, whom Inspector Coughlin dubbed "the finest safe man in America," concocted the plots, picked out the prospective victims and brought each robbery to a successful conclusion.

William G. Unkelback — Milton Goldberg — Richard Reese Whittemore — Jacob Kraemer — Leon Kraemer

The Whittemore gang of jewel and handy robbery specialists.

Jake's Method.

First a place was picked. Jake usually performed this office. He is a diamond expert and has many acquaintances in the trade. When Jake got wind of a diamond shipment—as in the Goodwin robbery—or when, by reconnoitering, he decided on a gem shop as the next stop of the Whittemore gang, he immediately went into conference with Whittemore and his brother, Leon.

If the victim was a person who must be robbed on the street he was followed day and night, sometimes for weeks, by the gang, who worked in relays. His habits were studied, and finally Jake would decide that the time was ripe to strike.

Then Unkelback or Goldberg was sent out to steal a car, a powerful automobile for a speedy getaway. This done, the license plates were removed and another set stolen. This was to throw the police off the track of the stolen car.

A buyer of the loot was arranged for before the robbery by Jake Kraemer. He usually knew approximately what and how much booty any one robbery would net, and he drove his bargain before the actual robbery was performed.

The crime itself was but a detail that could be attended to after the more important business of escape and sale had been taken up.

Notes on Trade.

In the robbing of a jewelry store the method of approach was slightly different.

Jake Kraemer would hover about the place for days, taking notes on the volume of trade, when it was lightest, how many clerks were employed, what time each went to lunch, which ones looked as though they would show fight, and so forth.

He also studied the habits of the policemen on the beat. Then, after a time when resistance would be at its weakest had been chosen, one of The Chelford Treasure.

THOMAS!"

"Yes, m'lord."

The footman waited, a look of concentrated interest on his unprepossessing face, whilst the pale man behind the big library desk sorted out a small pile of treasury notes.

The battered steel box from which they were taken was full to the brim with bank and treasury notes of all denominations in hopeless confusion.

"Thomas!" absently.

"Yes, m'lord."

"Put this money in that envelope—not that one, you fool, the gray one. Is it addressed?"

"Yes, m'lord. 'Herr Lubitz, Frankforterstrasse 35, Liepsic,' m'lord."

"Lick it down, take it to the post-office and register it. Is Mr. Richard in his study?"

"No, m'lord, he went out an hour ago."

Harry Alford, eighteenth Earl of Chelford, sighed. He was on the right side of thirty, thin of face and pale as students are, his jet black hair emphasizing the pallor of his skin. The library in which he worked was a high roofed building, the walls bisected by a gallery that ran round three sides of the room and was reached by a circular iron staircase in one corner of the apartment. From the roof to the floor every inch of wall space was covered with bookshelves, with this notable exception. Over the great stone fireplace was a full length painting of a beautiful woman. None who had seen his lordship could make any mistake as to the relationship which existed between himself and that wild-eyed beauty. It was his mother; she had the same delicate features, the same raven hair and dark, fathomless eyes. Lady Chelford had been the most famous debutante of her time, and her tragic end had been the sensation of the early nineties. There was no other picture in the room.

His eyes strayed to the portrait now. To Harry Alford, Fossaway manor, for all its beauty and charm, was a poor casket for such a jewel.

The footman in his sober black livery, his hair powdered white, lingered.

"Is that all, m'lord?"

"That is all," said his lordship gravely when the man had moved noiselessly to the door.

"Thomas!"

"Yes, m'lord."

"I heard something by accident as you passed my window this morning with Filling, the groom—er—?"

"He was telling me about the Black Abbot, m'lord."

The pale face twitched spasmodically. Even in broad daylight, with the sun streaming through the stained windows and marking the parquet with arabesques of crimson and blue and amethyst, the very mention of the Black Abbot set his heart beating faster.

"Any man in my employ who discusses the Black Abbot will be instantly dismissed. Will you tell your fellow servants that, Thomas? A ghost! Great God! Are you all mad?"

His face was red now, little veins swelled at his temples and under the stream of anger, his dark eyes seemed to recede into his head.

"Not a word! You understand? It is a lie! A mischievous wicked lie to say that Fossaway is haunted! It is a trick played by some of the louts about the place. That will do!"

He waved the bowing man from his presence and resumed his study of the black lettered book that had arrived from Germany that morning.

Once outside the library door, Thomas could afford to twist his sallow features to a grin. Only for a second, and then he became serious again. There must be nearly a thousand pounds in that cash box and Thomas had once served a three-year sentence for a tenth of that sum. Even Mr. Richard Alford, who knew most things, was unaware of this interesting fact.

Thomas had a letter to write, for he maintained a lucrative correspondence with one who had an especial interest in Fossaway manor, but first he had to report the gist of the conversation to Mr. Glover, the butler.

"I don't care what his lordship says (and why he should tell a footman and not me, I don't know) there's a ghost and all sorts of people have seen it! I wouldn't walk down Elm drive alone at night for fifty million pounds!"

This portly man shook a head that the years had silvered.

"And his lordship believes it, too. I wish he was married, that's what I wish. He'll be more sensible then!"

"And we'll get rid of Mr. Blooming Alford—eh, Mr. Glover?"

The butler sniffed.

"There's them that likes him and them that don't," said the oracle.

The pale face twitched spasmodically. . . . "Any man in my employ who discusses the Black Abbott will be instantly dismissed. . . . A ghost! Great God! Are you all mad?"

"We've never had a cross word, Thomas—there's somebody at the door."

Thomas hurried to the hall entrance and opened the big door. A girl was standing under the portico. She was pretty in a bold way, red of lips and bright of eye and dressed expensively.

Thomas gave her a grin of recognition.

"Good morning, Miss Wenner—this is a bit of a surprise!"

"Is his lordship in, Thomas?"

The library bell rang at that moment and Thomas hastened to answer the call.

"Who was that lady—I saw her through the window?"

"Miss Wenner, m'lord."

A cloud passed over Harry Alford's face.

The footman pursed his lips dubiously.

"He is in, miss, but I'm afraid I can't take you in to him. Don't blame me, miss, it's Mr. Alford's orders."

"Mr. Alford!" she sneered. "Do you mean to tell me that I've come all the way from London and can't see Lord Chelford?"

But Thomas kept his hand on the door. He liked the girl who, when she had been his lordship's secretary, had never given herself airs (the unpardonable sin of the servants' hall) and who always had a smile for the meanest of the domestic staff. He would gladly have admitted her and felt that his lordship would have been pleased to see her, but in the background somewhere hovered Dick Alford, a man of curt speech, who was not only capable of showing him the door but kicking him through it.

"I'm very sorry, miss, but orders is orders, as you know."

"I see!" she nodded, ominously. "I'm to be turned away from what might have been my own door, Thomas."

He tried to look his sympathy and succeeded in assuming an expression of imbecility. She smiled at him, shook hands with him graciously, and turned away from the portico.

"Miss Wenner," reported Thomas, "her that Alford fired because he thought his lordship was getting sweet on her——"

"Did you—ask her to come in?"

"No, m'lord, Mr. Alford gave orders——"

"Of course, yes. I had forgotten. Perhaps it is just as well. Thank you."

He pulled down the green shade over his eyes, for even in the day he worked by artificial light, such was the gloom of the library, and resumed his study of the book.

Yet his mind was not wholly concentrated on the work. Once he rose and walked up and down the library, his hands clasped before him, his chin on his breast. He stopped before the picture of his mother, sighed and walked back to the writing table. There was a press paragraph which he had cut out of a London newspaper and this he read for the third time, not ill pleased with the unaccustomed experience of finding himself the subject of newspaper comment, and yet irritated by the subject on which the paragraph was based.

"Chelfordbury, a sleepy Sussex village, is engaged in the thrilling sport of ghost hunting. The Black Abbot of Fossaway has, after a period of quiescence, again made his appearance. The legend is that seven hundred years ago Hubert of Redruth, Abbot of Chelfordbury, was assasinated by order of the second Earl of Chelford. Since then, from time to time, his 'ghost' has been seen. During the past few years horrific stories of an unseen being that shrieked and howled demoniacally have been current in the county, but the noisy spook was not actually seen until last week.

"Fossaway manor has other romances besides ghosts. Four hundred years ago, a great treasure of gold was, according to legend, hidden somewhere on the estate; so effectively, in fact, that it has never been discovered since, although successive earls of Chelford have searched diligently for the ancestral hoard.

"The present Earl of Chelford, who, by the way, is engaged to be married to Miss Leslie Gwyn, the only sister of Mr. Arthur Gwyn, the well-known solicitor, informed our local representative that he had no doubt that the apparition of the Black Abbot was a practical joke in very doubtful taste on the part of the foolish youth of the neighborhood."

He made as though to tear the paper, but thought better of it and put the cutting under a paper weight.

That reference to the practical jokers of the village was reassuring and might be a comfort when the night came and he needed encouragement.

For Lord Chelford believed in the Black Abbot as religiously as he proclaimed his skepticism.

His restless hand moved to the bell push on his table.

"Has Mr. Richard returned?"

"No, m'lord."

Lord Chelford struck the table pettishly with his palm.

"Where on earth does he get to in the mornings?" he asked querulously.

Thomas, very wisely, pretended not to hear.

The reapers had laid low the last of the golden heads, and the sheaves stood like yellow tombstones on Racket field. Beyond the field was Chelfordbury, where the gray old spire of the church came up from a velvety knoll of trees; beyond again, the green and white downs of Sussex, along the feet of which the railway runs.

Dick Alford sat on a stile on the top of a little hillock and could see across the weald for fifteen miles. He could turn his head and take in the home farm and the green roofs and cupolas of Fossaway manor, with its broad lawns and its clipped yew hedges. Neither cornfield nor down, manor house nor pleasaunce, interested him for the moment. His eyes were fixed and his mind centered upon the girl who was walking quickly up the winding path that would bring her presently to where he sat.

She was singing as she walked, the riding crop she carried whirling round and round like a drum major's baton. His lips twitched to the ghost of a smile. Presently she would see him, and he wondered if she would be annoyed. He had never seen Leslie Gwyn except in such circumstances that her face was a pleasant mask and her manner conventionally charming. She had been nicely brought up and taught that all things are permissible except one; to make your equal feel foolish.

The song ceased. She had seen him, but she did not check her pace and came quickly up the hill path, slashing at a nettle bush as she walked.

"Peeping Tom!" she greeted him reproachfully.

She was not so tall as the average English girl, but her slimness gave her height and the supple movement of her hinted at greater strength than her slight figure suggested. Her face, delicately modeled, had the subtle refinement of her class. Small, beautiful hands and feet, a head finely poised, eyes of a deep gray, and a red mouth that smiled easily, Leslie Gwyn in rags would have been unmistakably a beautiful lady.

Dick had seen her riding; she gripped the withers with her knees, jockey fashion, and was part of the horse. He had seen her on the polished dancing floor; there was lissom grace in every line. When he danced with her, he held in his arms a fragrant something that had more substance and character than he had thought. The hand on his shoulder was definitely placed, the body which his arm encircled was firm; he could feel the tiny muscles ripple under his hand.

She stood now, her little black riding hat askew, her figure clad in neat black relieved by the lawn collar. Her neatly booted legs were planted stubbornly apart, one gloved hand holding her waist, the other swinging the crop. In her gray eyes was an imp of mischief that gleamed and danced all the merrier for the studied solemnity of every other feature.

Dick Alford, from his vantage place on the top rail of the stile, chewed a blade of toddy grass between his white teeth and surveyed her approvingly.

"Been riding, Leslie?"

"I have been riding," she said gravely and added: "a horse."

He looked round innocently.

"Where is the favored animal?" he demanded.

She looked at him suspiciously, but not a muscle of the tanned, lean face so much as twitched.

"I dismounted to pick wild flowers and the beastie ran away. You saw him!" she accused.

"I saw something that looked like horse running towards Willow house," he confessed calmly. "I thought he had thrown you."

She nodded.

"For that prevarication you can go and find him—I'll wait here," she said, and, when he got down from the stile with a groan: "I meant you to do that, anyway. The moment I saw you I said to myself: 'There's a lazy man who wants exercise!' sisters-in-law-to-be have privileges."

He winced a little at this. She may have noticed the cloud that came momentarily to his face, for she put out her hand and checked him.

"One of the grooms can find him, Dick. He is such a hungry pig that he is certain to make for his stable. No, I don't mean the groom. Sit down; I want to talk to you."

She swung up to the stile and took the place he had vacated.

"Richard Alford, I don't think you are enjoying the prospect of my being the mistress of Fossaway house?"

"Manor," he corrected.

"Don't quibble—are you?"

"I count the days," he said lightly.

"Are you?"

He took a battered silver case from his hip pocket, selected a cigarette and lit it.

"My dear Leslie——" he began, but she shook her head. She was very serious now.

"You think I will interfere with things? With the management of the estate. I know poor Harry couldn't manage a small holding—with—O, with all sorts of things, but I think you are wrong."

He blew three smoke rings into the air before he answered.

"I wish you would manage the estate," he said quietly. "It would be a blessing to me. No, I'm not worried about that. With your money—forgive the brutality—the estate will not count. A bailiff could manage it as well as any second son!"

He spoke without bitterness, without a hint of self-pity, and she was silent. He was the child of a second marriage, and that had made it worse for him. When old Lord Chelford followed Dick's mother to the grave, the second son's portion was his. The estate, the title, the very car he had used as his own, passed from him. A tiny estate in Hertfordshire that brought two hundred a year, some old jewelry of his mother's and a thousand pounds came the way of the second son. And the thousand pounds had never been paid. In some mysterious fashion it had been swallowed up.

Arthur Gwyn had settled the estate. In all the circumstances Dick felt happier when he did not think of that thousand pounds. Yet, for some reason or other, he thought of it now, and as though she read his thoughts dimly and associated his reserve with her brother, she asked:

"You don't like Arthur, do you?"

"What makes you say that?" he said in genuine surprise. He had never betrayed his aversion to the dandified lawyer.

"I know," she nodded wisely. "He exasperates me sometimes, and I can well imagine that a man like you would hate him."

Dick smiled.

"Harry doesn't hate him anyway, and he is the person who counts."

She looked round at him, swinging the crop idly.

"It doesn't seem real to me that I'm to be married at all. It was such a funny proposal, Dick, so polite, so formal, so unreal! I think if it had come in any other way——" She shook her head.

Dick wondered a little drearily how his brother would propose. Harry was something of a novice at the love game; once he had had a pretty secretary, and on a warm June afternoon Dick had interrupted what was tantamount to a proposal from the enterprising young lady. And the flustered Harry would have agreed to her matrimonial suggestions, only Dick had happened along—and the calculating Miss Wenner had left Fossaway manor rather hurriedly. He remembered this happening.

"I suppose if he had proposed in the conventional way you wouldn't have accepted him?"

"I don't know," she said dubiously. "But it was quaint and—queer. I like Harry awfully. I have often wondered if he would like me if—" She did not finish her sentence.

"If you weren't so horribly rich?" smiled Dick. "You're not paying him a very high compliment."

She held out her arms and he lifted her down, though there seemed no necessity for it, as she was a very agile young person, as a rule.

"Dick," she said, as he crossed the stile and they walked side by side towards the main road, "what am I to do?"

"About what?" he asked.

"About Harry and everything."

He had no answer to this.

"Arthur is very keen on my marrying him," she said. "And really, I'm not averse—at least, I don't think so."

"That is the worst of being a great heiress," he bantered.

"I wonder?" Her brow wrinkled in a frown. "And am I a great heiress?"

He stopped and looked at her in surprise.

He seemed so shocked that she laughed.

"I don't know; my uncle left me a lot of money years and years ago. I didn't know how much. Arthur has managed my estate for years. I have all the money I need."

"Then don't grouse!" he said, crudely, and she laughed again.

"I suppose most girls in my position have their marriages arranged in the way mine has been arranged, and until quite recently I have accepted the idea as part of the inevitable."

"And why have you changed your mind now?" he asked, bluntly, and saw the pink come into her face.

"I don't know."

Her answer was very short, almost brusque.

And then she saw the look in his eyes—the infinite yearning, the hopelessness of them. And in a flash there came to her a knowledge of herself.

For some reason which she could not understand she became of a sudden breathless, and almost found a difficulty in speaking. She felt that the thump and thud of her heart must be audible to his ears and strove desperately to recover her balance. Vividly before her eyes came the picture of her fiance, the thin, irritable young man—the weakling with all that man needed in his hands, save manhood. A pitiable, nerve racked creature, now pleading, now bullying—oblivious of the impression he made on the woman who was to share his life. And from this mental figure of him her eyes moved mechanically to the man by her side; calm, serene, radiant in his strength and self reliance.

Ten minutes later she was walking back to Willow house, and in her heart she struggled with a problem that seemed well nigh insoluble.

Dick Alford, making his slow progress homeward, saw the lank figure of his brother, waiting at the end of the elm drive.

The wind flapped the skirts of his long frock coat; standing, he stooped slightly and had a trick of thrusting forward his head, which gave him the appearance of a big, ugly bird. His face was dark with anger, Dick saw as he came up with him.

"I deputize many duties to you, Richard, but I'll do my own lovemaking, understand that!"

The blood came into Dick Alford's face, but he showed no other sign of his hurt or anger.

"I will not have it—you understand?" Lord Chelford's voice was shrill with childish fury. "I will not have you interfering in my private affairs. You sent one girl away from me, you shall not take Leslie!"

"I am not—" began his brother hotly.

"You are—you are! You don't want me to marry! I am not a fool, Dick! You stand next in the line of succession! I am going to marry Leslie Gwyn—understand that! You shall not break that engagement!"

For a moment the brutality, the injustice of the accusation, left the younger man white and shaking, and then, with a supreme effort, he laughed. Scenes such as this were of almost daily occurrence, but never before had Harry Chelford gone so far. In ten minutes the storm would pass, and Harry would be his old lovable self, but for the moment it was bitterly hard to bear.

"Why do you say such horrible things?" he said. "I got rid of Wenner, because she was not the wife for you——"

"You didn't want me to marry! You are waiting for my shoes, a dead man's shoes!" almost screamed the elder son. "The last thing in the world you want to see is a new Countess of Chelford. You know it, you know it!"

Dick Alford was silent. God knew his brother spoke the truth! It would be a woeful day for him when Harry Chelford brought a wife to this great house to share the dreadful secret which hung like a cloud over Fossaway manor.

Dick Alford was in the little study where he usually worked, a business-like room filled with filing cabinets and deed boxes. The French windows giving to the lawn were open, for though it was September the night was warm, and he was working in his shirt sleeves, a pipe gripped between his teeth, his eyes protected from the overhead light by a big green shade that he wore affixed by a band to his head. If there was a resemblance between Lord Chelford and his mother, not even the keenest observer could trace in Dick Alford the slighest likeness to his half brother. He was a creature of the open, a six foot athlete, broad of shoulder and slim of flank, and his tanned face spoke of a life spent on the windy downs. His blue eyes surveyed the footman with a quizzical smile, as he pushed his battered old typewriter aside, relit his pipe and stretched himself.

"Black Abbot? Good Lord! Have you seen him, Thomas?"

"No, sir, I have not seen him. But Mr. Cartwright, the grocer down in Chelford village——"

He gave a graphic narrative of Mr. Cartwright's horror, amazement and confusion.

"They telephoned up from the 'Red Lion' to ask if his lordship had heard anything about it." Even Thomas who believed in nothing except Thomas shivered. "It is the first time he has been seen for years according to all accounts, though he has been heard howling and moaning. Nobody knows who set fire to the vicarage when the parson was away at the seaside——"

"That will do, Thomas. As to Cartwright, he was drunk," said Dick cheerily, "or else he saw a shadow."

He glanced out at the lawn, bathed in the blue-white rays of a full moon.

"You can see things in the moonlight that never were on land or sea. I understand that his lordship said that the Black Abbot was not to be discussed?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then shut up!" said Dick.

Pipe in mouth, he strolled across the hall into the dimly lit library.

The three electroliers that hung from the roof were dark. Only the two green shaded reading lamps that flanked each side of the desk, were alight, and these intensified the gloom. Dick closed the door behind him and lounged over towards the desk, pulling a chair behind him.

Chelford frowned at the sight of his brother.

"Really, Dick," he said irritably, "I wish to heaven you wouldn't loaf about the place in shirt and breeches. It looks fearfully bad."

"It feels fearfully cool," said Dick, sitting down. "Will your nerves sustain the smell of a bit of honest baccy?"

Lord Chelford moved uncomfortably in his chair. Then, reaching out his hand, he snicked open a gold box and took out a cigarette.

"My pipe against your stinkers for a hundred pounds!" said Dick, with a cheery smile. "Cigarettes I can stand, but scented cigarettes——"

"If you don't like them, Dick, you can go out," grumbled his lordship fretfully. And then in his abrupt way: "Did you see this newspaper cutting?"

He pulled the paper from under the crystal weight and Dick skimmed the lines.

"We are getting into the public eye, Harry," he said, "but there is nothing about me which is unkind."

"Don't be stupid. How did that get into the papers?"

"How does anything get into the papers?" asked Dick lazily. "Our spook is almost as useful as a press agent."

Harry snapped round on him.

"Can't you take this seriously? Don't you see that it is worrying me to death? You know the state of my nerves—you have no sympathy, Dick, you're just as hard as rock! Everybody seems to hate the sight of you."

Dick pulled at his pipe glumly

"That is my unfortunate character. I am afraid I am getting efficient. That is the only way I can account for my unpopularity. It keeps me awake at nights——"

"Don't fool, for heaven's sake!"

"I'm serious now," murmured Dick, closing his eyes, "try me with a hymn!"

Harry Chelford turned away with a gesture of utter weariness, fingered the manuscript at his hand and gazed from his brother to the door. It was a gesture of dismissal and Dick rose.

"Don't you think you've done enough work for tonight, Harry?" he asked gently. "You look absolutely all in."

"I never felt better in my life," said the other emphatically.

Dick slewed round his head to read the printed page from which his elder brother had been copying, and saw at once that his effort was in vain; the book was written in Old German, and Dick's linguistic abilities ended at a mastery of restaurant French. Lord Chelford put down the book with a sigh and sat back in his padded chair.

"I suppose you think I'm a fool wasting my time on this." He raised his hand towards the serried shelves, "when I could be having a very amusing time with Leslie?"

Dick nodded.

"Yes, I think you might be more profitably employed out of doors. Really, for a bridegroom-to-be, you're the worst slacker I've ever struck."

There was a superiority in Harry Chelford's smile.

"Happily, Leslie knows she is marrying a bookworm and not an athlete," he said, and, rising, walked over to where Dick was sitting and dropped his hand on his shoulder. "What would you say if I told you that I was halfway to discovering the real Chelford treasure?"

Dick knew exactly what he would say, but replied diplomatically.

"I should say you were three parts on the day to discovering the philosopher's stone," he said.

But his brother was serious. He paced up and down the long library, his hands behind him, his chin on his breast.

"I expected you to say that," he said, "I should have been rather surprised if you hadn't. But the Chelford treasure has an existence, Dick, and somewhere with it is the greatest treasure of all!"

Whittemore Faces Justice

the gang would be delegated to "look her over inside," underworld argot for getting a working knowledge of the location of safes, which counters held the valuable jewels, and other information useful to a thoroughgoing holdup mob.

This was done by the simple process of making a purchase—a ring, or a bracelet—paying for it, and then requesting some alteration—an excuse to come back.

Most of the Whittemore store robberies were what Paladino described in a matter of fact manner as "closing time jobs." They were so timed that some of the clerks would have gone home, and the store would be empty of customers, about to suspend business for the day.

The car used in a holdup of this sort was always abandoned after the flight from the scene. The gang did their pleasure-driving and reconnoitering in big cars bought and paid for in the usual way.

The inside story of the Folmer Prip robbery—a story that has not yet been printed—graphically illustrates the thoroughness and restraint with which the Kraemers and Whittemore went about their business of robbing.

Prip runs a jewelry company on the ninth floor of the building at 90 Nassau street. Kraemer had been watching the place. He decided that shortly before 9 a. m. was the best time to rob Prip, as few clerks and employers would be about before that hour. Prip, Kraemer found, usually came to business around 8 a. m.

December 22, the day of Simon Gilden's murder, was set for the robbery of Prip, who, Kraemer ascertained, would be in his office with a youthful clerk.

Small Job.

The robber band—Whittemore, the two Kraemers, Unkelback and Shuffles Goldberg, drove to 90 Nassau street a little after 8 that morning. Leon Kraemer was bored. It looked like a small, inconsequential job to him, so he stayed in the car with Unkelback, the driver.

The three, led by Jake Kraemer, mounted the stairs. They had reached the eighth floor when two clerks passed them, evidently on their way to the ninth floor offices.

Without a word, Kraemer turned and gave the gang the signal to retreat. No guns had been drawn. They had not arrived within one floor of the Prip establishment. They walked out of the building and drove away.

"No use taking unnecessary chances," Kraemer said afterward. "I had shadowed the joint and I never saw those guys before. So I went back that afternoon and found out they were only a couple of flunkies in another office on the ninth floor."

No Hitch Now.

Next morning the robbers returned. The same three took to the stairs. This time there was no hitch in the plans. Prip was duly robbed, trussed up with his clerk and laid on the floor, face down, and the gunmen de luxe strolled down the stairs and made a leisurely escape.

Tiger Lil was released from New York custody after urging her husband to "tell all"—which he never did. Paladino and Unkelback will testify against the Kraemers and Goldberg. All five will spend the better part of the rest of their lives in jail.

And the Candy Kid, as he muses in his Baltimore prison cell, must take one of only two dismal roads: he will spend the rest of his misspent life behind the bars, or a morning will dawn in the not far distant future that will find his body throwing a dangled silhouette against the mildewed walls of Maryland state penitentiary.

main character is a deadly boarding house gossip who has never been known to shut up. The bridge game she talks her way through in the second act is one of the most delightful bits of comedy I have ever seen on the stage. Miss Jean Cadell, who plays this talkative Miss Shoe, was brought over from England to play the part, but if they had gone to Mars for her, it wouldn't have been a bit too far. Lynn Fontanne and Alfred Lunt are two Theater Guild reliables who shine, as usual, in this play. I have never seen the "boarding house atmosphere" gotten onto the stage quite as successfully as it is in "At Mrs. Beams."

You may have thought all the beauty and Charleston contests that have been going on were funny, but you really know nothing. Of course you knew that certain of the night clubs here employ dark-skinned maidens in their revues. Well, at one of these there was conducted the other night a contest to select "Miss Africa" for whatever group it could have been who wanted such a representative.

Just what toilet articles will the dusky winner be called upon to endorse. Will she tell us through all the magazine ads that "Simpson's Powdered Soot put me where I am today"?

THE BARRICADED GATE

The Story of a Bombing Plot Which a Boy Overheard and Averted.

By W. BOYCE MORGAN

SYNOPSIS

George Wallace is working as office boy for the Judson Tube company during summer vacation. His best friend there is Paul Lane, a young engineer. The foreign laborers in the mill make demands upon the owner, Mr. Judson, that he refuses to meet, and they go out on strike, threatening dire things against him and the plant. Mr. Judson calls for volunteers to guard the plant, excusing the rest of the office force, and Paul Lane is among those chosen. George also asks Mr. Judson for permission to come to work during the strike, and Mr. Judson not only gives his consent, but invites George to join him and his two children, Bob and Betty, at dinner in the Judson home that evening. Delighted, George accepts.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

INSTALLMENT II.

Dinner at the Judson home was a good deal different from the simple meals that George was accustomed to eat with his mother in their little home at the other end of town. Mrs. Judson was charming, and Betty was about all that George ever imagined a girl could be.

The subject of the strike was not touched during dinner, but as they left the table, Mrs. Judson asked her husband what had happened at the plant. At his answer her alarm was apparent.

"I'm afraid, John," she said, a worried expression appearing on her face. "I'm afraid they'll try to do something to you."

"Oh, I guess I can take care of myself," replied Mr. Judson. He was none too easy in his own mind, but he did not wish to communicate his misgivings to the family. "This man Egbert, who is the ringleader of the bunch, is a wind-bag. He said he'd 'get' me, but I don't think he would have the nerve to try—unless he was drunk. I was through one of those affairs once before, before we were married. Usually it's a case of one or two bad men following them blindly and half-heartedly. If we could get Egbert I think the whole thing would collapse."

"Is Egbert that big labor boss I saw coming out of your office this afternoon, the one that said those things to you?" asked George.

"Yes," answered Mr. Judson, "that's the fellow." Then he turned to his wife. "I'm a good deal more worried about the mill than I am about myself," he said, "but of course if anything develops, I'll take measures to protect you and the children."

He paused and thoughtfully stroked his chin. "I wish I knew somebody I could get to go down to the mill and stay tonight. I'd fell a whole lot easier."

"Why don't you get Paul Lane and the other men in the engineering room?" suggested George. "Paul would do it, I know."

"That's a good idea," agreed Mr. Judson. "I'll do it."

A moment later he returned from the telephone.

"Paul is going to get the rest of the bunch and go down," he said.

The rest of the evening was passed on the porch, where the three young people sat and talked, discussing their school, their summer sports, and a hundred and one other things. Betty

I am sending you the song:

"PUT MY LITTLE SHOES AWAY."

I.

Mother, dear, come bathe my forhead,
For I'm growing very weak.
Mother let one drop of water,
Fall upon my burning cheek.

II.

I am going away to leave you,
Please remember what I say.
Will you do it, please, my mother,
Put my little shoes away?

III.

Santa Claus, he gave them to me,
With a lot of other things,
And I think he brought an angel,
With a pair of golden wings.

IV.

Tell my loving little schoolmates
That I never more will play;
Give them all my toys, but mama,
Put my little shoes away.

V.

Mother, I will be an angel
By, perhaps, another day;
So you will then, dearest mother
Put my little shoes away.

VI.

Now I'm getting tired, mother,
Soon I'll say to all goodbye;
Please remember what I tell you,
Put my little shoes away.

GET BUSY.

Don't talk of what you're going to do;
Don't boast until you're wholly through;
Success means work, it's up to you—
Get busy!

The idler won't get far ahead;
You can't get rich by lying a-bed;
The wise man in his wisdom said:
Get busy!

There's work that's needed to be done;
There's work enough for every one;
Don't think your life should be all fun—
Get busy!

Endeavor gives to life new zest;
Don't look around for a cozy nest,
But start in now and earn your rest—
Get busy!

Every one write to me.

PRAYERS OF MY MOTHER.

I.

All this world seems sad and dreary
Everywhere my footsteps may stray,
Only when my thoughts will linger
On the prayers my mother used to pray.

II.

Her voice was tender, sweet and kind
And her eyes were mellow and true.
I fancy I can hear her pray again,
As your mother prayed for you.

III.

But our mothers, some are gone,
And no more on earth will be seen.
But they are in heaven on their throne
How we miss their prayers in our home.

IV.

Mother was our friend, kind-hearted and true,
And they still praye their loving prayers
That we may be Christians brave and true.
As mine prayed for me yours has prayed for you.

V.

Then when doubts and fears beset us
And our fondest hopes are almost gone,
Then our mothers who are in heaven
Are still praying to God on his throne.

VI.

Praying that we may be conquerors
Of all our doubts and trials,
And if we could hear them pray again
We would travel many, many miles.

Dear Friends: Have moved since I chatted with you last. I moved from Georgia to where I am now. But I still call myself a Georgian. Mary Wood Glover wrote me last time I wrote. I lost her address, so if she reads this please write. Friends, I would like for you all to read this poetry written by myself.

JUST ME.

I.

Thirteen years ago there was born
A girl so ugly that she was scorned.
They said I was big and rawboned
That ever on this earth had shone.

II.

But nature has changed me so since then—
And I have grown so big and fat,
I can stand my hand with most of them,
And ain't quite so bad to look at.

III.

My parents still love me—this is so—
But they still remember the day of long ago.
They say they love me more every day.
Do your parents do that way?

IV.

I will describe myself now—
Because I am fat they call me a cow.
I have blonde hair, my eyes are blue.
Now isn't what I told you true?

V.

My parents buy pretty things for me
And are just as good as they can be.
They buy nice things for me to eat—
Now tell me can my parents be beat?

If you like this please write me and I will answer.

Your friend.

THE BARRICADED GATE

rose in George's estimation every minute, and Bob, he decided, was a prince.

It was about eleven o'clock when he looked at his watch and, startled, he prepared to take a hasty leave.

"There is no use of you taking that long street car ride," said Mrs. Judson, who came out on the porch just then. "Bob can take you home in the car."

That pleased both Bob and George, and away they went, Bob sitting down low behind the big wheel and playfully tapping the accelerator to make the motor "zuum," as he called it.

"Say, Bob," George said to him, as they passed through the well lighted streets, "you ought to come down to the mill tomorrow. Paul Lane told me that there would be all sorts of trouble. And say!" he suddenly straightened up, excited. "You know, if the strikers are going to do anything tomorrow they might be having a meeting down in the South End tonight."

"What do you say we drive down that way?" suggested Bob. "It isn't much out of our way."

"Good! Let's go."

At the next corner Bob swung the car to the south, and soon they were riding through the dark shadows of the "tough" end of town. All seemed quiet, however. There were a few loiterers on the corners and a few boys still slinking along the streets, but there were no signs of disorder.

"Isn't this a tough neighborhood?" Bob remarked, as they rode slowly through one of the worst streets. "Doesn't seem to be anything doing here, though. Boy, wouldn't you hate to live down here?"

"I'll say I would," replied George, a little slangily.

Suddenly there was a loud "bang" directly behind them. George jumped and smothere a yell, but Bob only grunted in disgust.

"Of all the luck!" he said. "There goes that right back tire. I knew it was bad—I should have changed it this morning."

The two boys climbed out of the car. Sure enough, the tire was flat on the pavement.

"Well, the only thing to do is to change it." Bob glanced around. "Boy, I think this must be just about the worst spot in town."

George glanced around. Low, poorly lighted buildings staggered back from the dirty narrow street. Just above them was a street light, but all around it the darkness was thick.

"I don't want to stay here any longer than necessary," avowed Bob. "There—you take the spare off and I'll jack this wheel up."

With the two boys working, the tire was not hard to change. Just as Bob was starting to tighten up the rim bolts, however, George looked at his watch.

"Say, Bob, it's after twelve. I'd better call mother up. She'll be worried."

Bob rose from his crouched position over the tire. "That's right," he answered. "You might run over and try in that store on the corner. You had better call my folks and tell them, too."

"All right. I'll be back in a minute," said George, starting across the street.

The "little store" that he entered proved to be a disreputable barroom. A number of men—an unusually large number, George thought—were talking around the bar and tables. He asked one of them about a phone.

"Yeh, kid, dere's one in de back room." He turned and called. "Hey, Joe, is it all right for dis kid to use yer phone?"

A course voice gave permission, and George entered a room behind the outer one. The phone was on the wall, and only a dim light illuminated the shabby furniture.

It took him but a moment to call his mother and tell her of the delay. Then, as he was about to call the Judson home, another door into the hall burst open, and he heard a voice, loud and thick with drink.

"I'll fix that dog Judson tonight, and I'll fix him good. This little baby will blow him and his whole family so far they'll never come back. Come on, Pete."

George went cold with surprise and fear. The voice—surely it was that of Egbert, the man who had threatened Mr. Judson in the mill, and the ringleader of the strikers. The words—they could mean only one thing. George crept to the door of the room. Yes—Egbert, drunk and ugly, was haranguing the other men. A minute of listening left George aghast. Egbert was going to blow up the Judson home, and the rest of the men were bound for the mill!

Swearing and shouting, the men lurched from the saloon. George, from the rear room, saw Egbert and a companion enter an automobile and drive away. In a moment he was through the door and racing across the street toward Bob.

"Mr. Slig," said Mrs. Slig, "I have asked you a number of times to carry that box of books into the storeroom. Now that we have a radio we don't need books clutterin' up the house, and I want them out of the way."

Mr. Slig pretended to be asleep. He snored a couple of times and opened his eyes just a tiny bit to see whether Mrs. Slig was reaching for the poker.

Mrs. Slig had a way of handling a poker that was extremely persuasive

"I'm strong as a goat."

when words failed, and no one knew it better than Mr. Slig.

Mrs. Slig leaned towards the poker and Mr. Slig grunted and sat up.

"I've got a terrible weak back today," he said. "I don't believe it would be wise for me to try to lift that heavy box of books."

"Probably not," answered Mrs. Slig. "I don't believe you'd be strong enough to lift it even if your back wasn't weak."

"Is that so!" cried Mr. Slig, puffing up with anger. "I'm as strong as a goat."

"Well, maybe you could carry that box, but I doubt it," smiled Mrs. Slig.

Mr. Slig's pride was touched and he stamped out into the hall where the box of books stood. It was a terribly heavy box, and after Mr. Slig tried to lift one end of it he called to Mrs. Slig.

"You'll have to give me a lift," he said. "Just help me get te box on my back and I'll tote 'em any place you want 'em."

The box was sitting on the window sill, where Mrs. Slig had packed it, and it took all the strength of the two opossums to slide it off on to Mr. Slig's back.

The load was much too heavy for Mr. Slig's strength. His legs gave way and he fell flat on the floor with the box on top of him.

"PULL IT OFF! PULL IT OFF!" bellowed Mr. Slig. "I'm flattening like a pancake."

Mrs. Slig pushed and pulled with all her might, but she couldn't move the heavy box.

All began to bellow.

"It's stuck," gasped Mrs. Slig.

"It's me that's stuck," shouted Mr. Slig.

"What will I do?" cried Mrs. Slig.

"Cut a hole in the floor and let me drop out from under the box," suggested Mr. Slig.

"You'll ruin the plaster in the room us," cried Mrs. Slig. below," answered Mrs. Slig, bursting into tears. The little Sligs had been attracted by the shouting of their father and mother, and they all began to bellow at the top of their young opossum lungs.

"Don't cut a hole in daddy! Don't cut a hole in daddy!" they cried.

"I'm not going to cut a hole in your father," shouted Mrs. Slig, drying her eyes with her apron. "Stop your bawlin' and help me get this box off him."

Mrs. Slig and all the little Sligs began to push and pull with all their might, but all the good it did was to make Mr. Slig yell louder.

"STOP!" he screamed. "There's a nail in the bottoom of the box jabbin' me."

All the little Sligs began to cry gain.

"Keep quiet," shouted Mr. Slig. "I'm the only one around here that has any right to cry and I want to have plenty of silence to do it in."

Mrs. Slig shushed the little Sligs and tried to think of some way to get the box off her flattened husband.

"I might go out and try to borrow some jacks," suggested Mrs. Slig.

"That would take too long," gasped Mr. Slig. "I'd be spread all over the floor before you could get some jacks."

"I might burn the box off you," suggested Mrs. Slig brightly.

Mr. Nickeldick himself answered the phone.

"Don't burn daddy! Don't burn daddy!" bellowed the little Sligs.

"I could give you chloroform and you wouldn't feel the heat much," said Mrs. Slig.

Books burn slowly and I've got to get this weight off quickly," shouted Mr. Slig. "DO SOMETHING!"

"Please be patient, Mr. Slig," said Mrs. Slig. "I'm trying as hard as I can to think of some way to help you." She brought a pillow and placed it under Mr. Slig's head. "This will make you rest easier while I think."

"I'd rest easier if you could get that pillow between me and the nail in the bottom of this box," wailed Mr. Slig. "I have a—"

"Shush!" cried Mrs. Slig, making a motion for her husband to be silent. "I almost had a plan—I've got it—we can blow the box off with dynamite."

"O, that will be fun," shouted the little Sligs, clapping their paws with glee. "It will be just like Fourth of July."

"I can put a stick of dynamite under the box, blow it up to the ceiling, and before it drops to the floor again you can roll away," continued Mrs. Slig, smiling at her cleverness.

"Dynamite doesn't blow up; it blows down," cried Mr. Slig. "I'd probably land in the cellar."

"I have it, I have it!" shouted Mrs. Slig. "I'll call Mr. Nickeldick and ask him what to do."

There was a look or relief on Mr. Slig's face. "Yes, he can probably tell you what to do, but I hate to bother him with family matters."

"He will be only too glad to help

"Well, call him up and just sort of mention the fact, kind of offhand like, that I am pinned down by a box of books."

Mrs. Slig called the rabbit and Mr. Nickeldick himself answered the phone.

"Mr. Slig is somewhat under a box of books," said Mrs. Slig, lightly. "It is quite too heavy for me and the children to move. We have considered dynamiting the box off him and we talked some of burning the books, but Mr. Slig is undecided. I thought perhaps some time during the day some simple plan might occur to you. If it does, just ring us up."

"Don't forget to give him our phone number," cried Mr. Slig.

"How simple!" exclaimed Mrs. Slig. "Thank you so much, Mr. Nickeldick." She hung up the receiver and turned to Mr. Slig.

"He says to take some of the books out of the box until it is light enough to lift off," said Mrs. Slig.

"That rabbit has brains like a fox!" cried Mr. Slig.

Mrs. Slig took about half of the books out of the box, which made the load light enough for her to manage, and she quickly pulled it off Mr. Slig's flattened body.

The litle Sligs set up a terrible howl when they discovered no dynamite was to be used, and Mr. Slig had to take out his shotgun and fire it into the air a couple of times to make up for their disappointment.

LOOKING DEEPER

The law of gravitation was formulated as the result of a man watching the fall of an apple from a tree. The law of the pendulum was discovered by a man who became interested in the arcs made by the swings of a hanging lamp. The power of steam was first realized by a man watching the lid of the teakettle dance in the kitchen of his home.

Hundreds of others had seen apples fall from trees, or lamps swing, or teakettles boil, but only one person in each instance saw something more than the actual incident.

The great mind is the one that sees under the surface—that wonders about the cause of things. Train your mind to wonder "Why?", as well as your eyes to see "What?". —W. B. M.

"Kentucky" Has A Bloody Meaning

You may have heard the state of Kentucky referred to as "The Dark and Bloody Ground." There can certainly be no doubt but that there is an interesting story connected with this name.

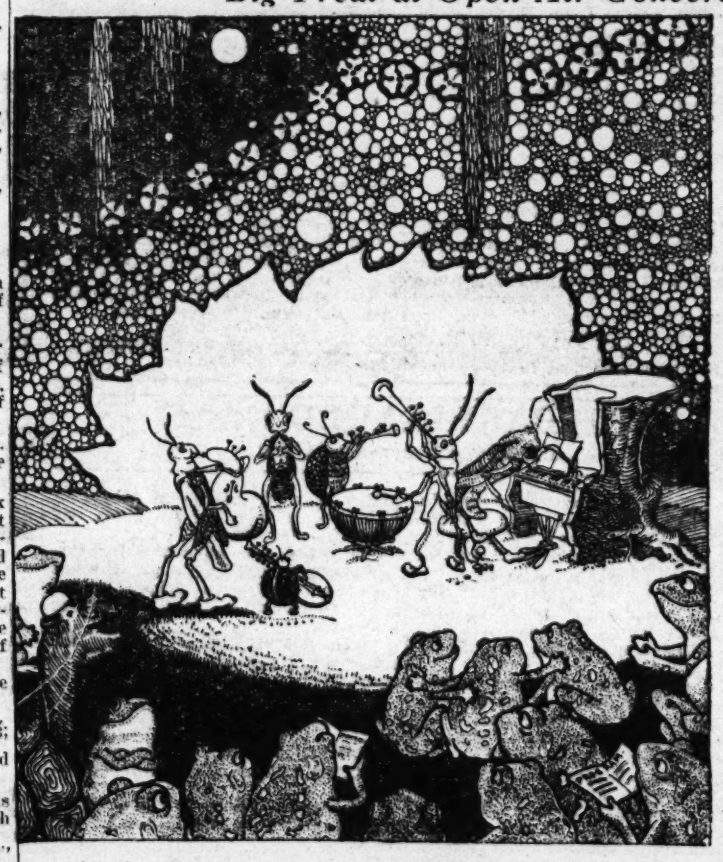

Some students say that the Indian words "Kain-tuk-ee" mean "The Dark and Bloody Ground," though others claim their meaning is "At the Head of the River."

But, which ever is the case, the words were first used to describe Kentucky because of the battles there between the Indians of the northern and southern territories. Later, the battles between Indians and pioneer settlers made the name even more appropriate.

See how many stories you can locate in the library, about state names and their meanings. You will find it truly interesting reading.

Bugville's Band Gives Frogs Big Treat at Open Air Concert

All the members of Frogtown's summer camp are having a real treat today. They are attending an open air concert given by the members of the Bugville Band. "Frog Frolics," a composition by the eminent pianist, Mr. Grass Hopper, has just been roundly applauded.

But Old Man Turtle, who arrived on the scene in the midst of a splendid number, was rather annoyed by the actions of the audience.

"Really," he whispered, "I like the frogs, but their manners are deplorable. They talked and croaked all through the concert, and several times they applauded in the middle of a number. They are well-meaning, I suppose, but a turtle would never be guilty of such breaches of etiquette."

THAT'S EASY! WE'LL DIG ANOTHER HOLE TO PUT THIS DIRT IN!

THE RINKEYDINKS HAVE NOW COMPLETED THEIR SECRET TUNNEL. THEY CAN NOW LEAVE THEIR CLUBHOUSE THROUGH A TRAP DOOR IN THE FLOOR AND COME OUT THE OTHER SIDE OF THE FENCE UNDER AN INVERTED BARREL. THIS BARREL, WITH HOLES ALL AROUND IT, SERVES AS A LOOKOUT. THE MAIN ENTRANCE OF THE CLUBHOUSE IS BEHIND A ONE-SHEET ADVERTISEMENT ON THE FENCE. NOW THE RINKEYDINKS HAVE PERFECT SECRECY.
